EFFORTS TO AVOID THE GREATEST STRIKE OF ALL

Widespread Public Sentiment Against Radicals Who Threaten General Tie-up in Connection with Proposal to Pass the Cummins Railroad Bill, Making Sudden Labor Disturbances Illegal

EVENTS are forcing before Congress an issue destined to take precedence over all others. It is THE strike—the general strike which labor men are hinting at—a nation-wide contest between the employing and employed classes.

Shall the public stand back and face hardship and suffering as acute and far-reaching as follows in the wake of war itself, while capital and labor fight it out to a finish? Or is a machinery of arbitration to be erected which will remove this menace, or reduce it to a minimum? The answer will be momentous, carrying with it the decision as to what the future of this country shall be.

Heretofore, whenever the nation has been faced with a grave difficulty, an answer has been found in the spirit of justice that strengthened the permanence of our institutions. But the problem of THE strike—the general strike—would be graver than any crisis that has gone before. Other countries, running back several decades, have tried by acts of legislation to set up some method to take the place of strikes and lockouts or to establish safeguards against arbitrary action by either side, but nowhere has the object attained been won. In New Zealand, which announced to the world thirty years ago that an answer had been found in compulsory arbitration, in Australia, in Canada, and in Great Britain, failure has thus far overtaken industrial peace plans, no matter how carefully they were worked out in advance.

Is there a solution—a method of settlement that will make impossible THE strike—the strike which would bring starvation and freezing upon the people of the country?

Labor's Truculent Prophecy.

The labor leaders, or many of them, are saying it must come. They point to failure of arbitration plans in other countries as proof that any attempt by legislation to place limitation on strikes here would prove ineffective, though they do not admit that the very lives of the people would be imperiled by a general strike. When pressed as to this menace their usual answer is that a universal strike would be settled before such a state of affairs could come about. Statements have been made that if a law limiting in any way the right to strike were put on the statute books it would not be obeyed.

On the other hand, those who affirm that a solution fair to both sides without the resort to industrial war can be found assert that the attitude of labor leaders in opposing any binding arbitration has been the main cause of the failure of arbitration plans adopted elsewhere, and that because, when the crisis came, other countries have yielded rather than face the issue squarely, this country should not draw back from finding a way, fair to all sides, to obviate the calamity that would threaten the country in the event of a general strike such as the tie-up of the railroads.

It is in the case of the railroads, apparently, that an attempt will be made to establish the principle that the welfare of the public is paramount to all other interests, and after the peace treaty is got out of the way this will probably be the first question taken up by the Senate. Since the no-strike clause was incorporated in the Cummins Railroad bill, there has been a steady trend of opinion in Congress in its favor, and its supporters now contend that it will be strong enough to pass the Senate. But in the House those who favor the adoption of the clause as written are proportionately fewer in number. As it looks now, final action will be a compromise softening the compulsory feature of the bill. On the whole, however, the remarkable feature of the present session of Congress has been the growth of sentiment that the arbitrary strike or lockout which would endanger the country is not defensible, and it is predicted that the example of the coal strike will cause the continuation of the swing in Congress in favor of the anti-strike clause. Heretofore Congress, especially the House, has been notably responsive to the claims of labor, and the main factor in the altering attitude is the assertion of public opinion from all parts of the country that the interests of the whole people should be taken into consideration and that they should be protected from suffering in the disputes between capital and labor. To find this protection means to create a machinery that will limit the general strike.

Of members of Congress questioned last week, several in both houses, not one but said that something ought to be done to provide this protection—that sooner or later something would have to be done, but the question was how to do it and be fair to labor, capital, and the general public.

Three Sets of Remedies.

In short, ideas on the course to be pursued in lessening the likelihood of a general strike are in the stage of definition. There are three sets of such ideas, generally speaking, in this formative period:

First, a board of arbitration so constituted as to win confidence for fairness from both labor and capital. This board would be ready to adjudicate any industrial dispute, but should go no further in intervention than to propose to the contending parties to subject their differences to investigation and judgment. In the event that this should be refused by one or both parties, the board would proceed to make an investigation on its own account and make public its report. The position of advocates of this procedure is that the verdict and the public opinion affected by it would bring strong pressure for a just and prompt settlement.

Second, a board of arbitration with authority to require the parties in an industrial dispute to appear before it for a thorough investigation of the points at issue; no strike or lockout to take place before the examination could be completed and the judgment announced. The proponents of this plan assert that it would compel a settlement in most cases where a strike or lockout was threatened. They argue that refusal to settle would be flying in the face of public opinion, and that no cause producing a strike or lockout could hope to win in a contest which the public held to be in the wrong.

The advocates of both the first two plans have the same answer to any proposals of compulsory arbitration, that it could not be enforced and that such a law on the statute books, even if it could be put there in accord with the Constitution, would be a dead letter and worse than no law at all. They say you can't arrest 300,000 men, and that there is no way under the Constitution or practically to compel men to work when they want to quit, either individually or collectively.

Third, compulsory arbitration where there is clearly a large interest of the public involved, on the ground that this interest is paramount to all others. Those who favor this advanced ground admit that no law can be passed that would prevent men from quitting work, but that leaders who urge a general strike and bring it about in defiance of efforts at arbitration could, in the injury that would fall on the public, be made liable to a conspiracy charge, as also for a conspiracy to injure the employer. But among the members of Congress questioned last week no one was found who saw any safe ground at present for compulsory arbitration—except in the case of the railroads, on the ground of interference with interstate commerce. The advocates of the theory that labor boards of arbitration should have the same authority as courts were of the opinion that the first test of the principle should be made with the railroads, both because there was no doubt of the authority of Congress to act and because there was nothing that would so paralyse the country and inflict injury on the people as a complete tie-up of the railroads. A Senator who has given the subject much study said that if the Supreme Court had not declared unconstitutional the child labor law, which made it unlawful for articles produced by child labor to be shipped in interstate commerce, then on the same principle a law could have been framed dealing with general strikes in other industries than the railroads. He remarked that the decision had been by the narrow margin of four to five.

Senator Lenroot's Plan.

Senator Irvine L. Lenroot of Wisconsin has a plan which, he says, would not be in conflict with the Constitution—that is, to pass a law removing the "incentive to strike." Speaking of the provision in the Cummins bill which prohibits the right to strike, Mr. Lenroot said:

"I believe it would be very much better, instead of putting a prohibition of any kind on the right to strike, that wages should be fixed by any tribunal you may designate and that if any one should quit the service of the company he should not thereafter be restored to service at any wages greater than those fixed by the board, within a given time, perhaps six months."

Those who object to this proposal—and their differences of opinion show how actively members of Congress are putting their thought on this subject—say that it aims to take up indirectly what should be taken up directly. The Interstate Commerce Committee of the Senate has voted for the anti-strike clause in the Cummins bill by 14 to 1, the dissenting vote being that of Robert M. La Follette.

As the contest is to centre around this, interest now goes back to hearing on the Cummins bill. Issues were then clearly drawn. Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor, expressed his opinion in these words:

"The effect of this bill, if enacted into law, would not be to prevent strikes; it would simply create lawbreakers. I am free to say to you, gentlemen, that if a bill of this character were enacted into law, I should have no more hesitancy in participating in a just strike than I would now, regardless of what the consequences might be. I have not been a law-breaker; I have attempted to be a fair, average, decent citizen. When an injustice has been done, I have tried within the law to have it rectified; but I do not think American workers can be brought into the position where their right to stop working, individually or collectively, can be taken away from them. That is what it means, nothing else."

Senator Oscar W. Underwood, member of the committee, said:

"I think some of the gentlemen who have come before us have misunderstood the purpose of the reason for the initiation of this legislation; but I am sure you have not, because you recognize the fact that in recent years you and those you represent have been reasonably and fairly treated by Congress. Of course, the legislation comes with a sentiment behind it, or it would not be here; but there is a sentiment behind the people that is responsive to it, because Congress seldom acts without the sentiment of the people in framing legislation. Of course, you recognize that the sentiment comes from fear that a general universal strike throughout this country would bring a débâcle that would make the mass of the people who are not engaged in the strike suffer more than even the horrors of war. Now that is the real reason that brings this legislation to the table. Now I want to ask you if you oppose it, or if you think it is ill-advised, to meet this situation by profit-sharing or any other reward to labor except the just wage that is due it—how we are to avoid the danger to the public of an issue that comes, that may come, at some time? Fortunately it has never come yet in that stressed form, the danger that might come to the public of a universal strike in this country that might last months. Is there any other way to avoid it except by law?"

Mr. Gompers answered: "You cannot avoid it by law. That is not the way to avoid it."

"I think this universal strike would not merely mean inconvenience, it would mean destruction to a vast number of people, and what I want to see," Senator Underwood said, "is a way to avoid that difficulty that will not do injustice, if possible. You say you represent a great body of men; but my colleagues and myself here represent in this issue—I do not mean the issue between the owners of the railroads and the men, but the men and the public—we represent the public, and we are trying to find a way to solve this question, not between the railroads and the men, but between the public and the men, the danger that possibly confronts the public and the danger that may be apprehended on the part of the men. That is the issue that is at this stage."

When the Senate bill was introduced Albert B. Cummins, Chairman of the Committee on Interstate Commerce, said:

"The committee believes that after having provided a tribunal for the adjustment of disputes between railroad companies and their employes, both sides must accept the judgment of that tribunal and respect it. It is not intended, of course, to lay the least restraint upon any individual so far as the cessation of his employment is concerned; but it is intended to prevent the combinations which result in a general suspension of transportation. We have reached that stage of development and civilization in our country in which the lives and welfare and the health of all the people of the country depend upon the continuous, the constant, the regular interchange of commodities between communities and persons. Only two or three weeks, in many populations, lie between plenty and starvation. Only two or three weeks, in certain seasons of the year, lie between warmth and freezing. All the considerations of modern life depend upon and they demand that the transportation of this country shall be carried on free from obstruction of that character.

"I have always regarded the strike as a legitimate and an invaluable weapon as between the employer and the employe. I have looked upon it as substantially the only weapon that could be employed by the laboring man in order to secure that justice which is his due. But when we advance to the point at which the Government undertakes to fix his wages in the event of dispute, when we advance to the point where we authorise a Government tribunal to enter a decree with regard to the justice of the particular matter, there is no room longer for the interruption of a strike or a combination among men of any kind, whether employers or employes, to hinder, delay, or restrain the movement of commerce. I believe this provision will result in justice to the employe. I believe it will secure for him in an enlightened Government a fair share of the fruits of his toil; and, so believing, I have given it and I do give it my unqualified support."

On this issue in the Railroad bill the principle that in the struggle between capital and labor the safety of the public must be protected will be fought out. It is going to be a real fight, of vital importance to the peace and happiness of the country.

Public the Real Sufferer.

Most significant is the fact that members of Congress are now giving a vast deal of thought to the subject. They have been forced to do so by more and more insistent public opinion, and the occurrence of the coal strike, with the possibility that the railroad brotherhoods might be drawn into the struggle, intensified concern in the problem.

The most outspoken Congressmen declare that the United States, while holding a fair attitude toward labor and affirming that no efforts should be proposed to take from labor the power of united action, should set an example to the world that no class here, whether employers closely bound together or employes tightly organized so as to hold the power of operation or non-operation over a basic national industry, shall have the power, through bringing hardships and suffering on the public, to dictate terms of settlement. Whatever the immediate aim of the national strike or lockout, the real blow falls on the public, and the degree with which this blow is pressed home on the public determines the success or failure of the attempt. The more the public suffers, the greater the pressure to reach a settlement. Granted the staunch and unyielding organization of a class or group that controls a key industry and the use without limit of that power, then in order to save the people from starvation or freezing there is but one recourse—to yield to the demands of the class or group.

A class holding the weapon of the strike or lockout would in effect become the ruler of the country, it is argued. The real Government, instead of being at Washington, would be in the hands of the closely organized class holding the big club—deprivation of the necessities of life. It is, in fact, a terrible club. The brandishing of it has struck a chill and forced compromise in Europe. The more outspoken men in Congress say that now is the time for the United States to give proof of the high courage it has always shown, in squarely meeting any issue that challenges the democracy on which the nation is founded and to assert the principle that the interests of the public, it, well-being and safety, must come first. In a word, a clean-cut enunciation of this principle, once and for all, by the Government—that is, legislative action for arbitration as a preventive of the arbitrary strike and lockout.

Here in this country, it is argued, is the one place to vindicate the principle that the interest of the public is paramount. In England, an industrial country, the closely-organized class is large in comparison to the whole, and therefore the lever it holds is much more dynamic, while in the United States, with our big group of farmers added to the other wing of the middle class that lives in urban communities, the weight of opinion is expected to rally to the principle in a decisive manner. What is desired is a fair appeal to all citizens, employes and employers, with assurances from the controlling body of moderate-minded people that they, too, will oppose any efforts of reactionaries to injure or weaken in any disrupting way the union organizations.

At present, beginning with the bad impression made by the Boston police strike, organized classes are subject to more unfavorable criticism by the general public than for a long time. Liberal-minded people, naturally in sympathy with betterment of the conditions of the workers, fear that reactionaries will try to take advantage of this sentiment to drive a wedge between labor and the rest of the country and thus precipitate an embittered struggle, out of which the reactionaries hope to see a heavy blow dealt to organized labor. To avoid this is the aim of those members of Congress who are considering remedial measures.

ASSEMBLYMAN MISS SMITH OF HARLEM

One of the Two Women Elected to the Legislature Is Devoted to Dancing as Well as to Public Service

THE newly elected Assemblywoman from the Nineteenth, the Hon. Margaret L. Smith, A. M.—the Christian name is sometimes called Marguerite—is one of the best dancers in New York, a crack tennis player, an automobile enthusiast, and a teacher of physical culture.

Her motto is service. As a tennis player she serves quickly, and she can get across a court in less than no time. She is in politics for the love of the game and that she may serve her constituents. She is going about it in a way that is all her own, and when she gets really busy in her new work there will be some innovations which are likely to startle a town which takes its politics and its public servants so conventionally.

If one can think of a progressive, wide-awake young woman, (not a suffragette, either) of a brainy, up-to-date person who has views on every subject of public policy which may be mentioned to her and speaks them right out, one may get some idea of what manner of legislator this young woman will be. She is 25 years old, although she has to say that quite distinctly, for she does not look as though she had passed the quarter-century mark on the broad highway of life. She has dark-brown hair, worn over a high forehead, and when she takes off her hat, and the suggestion of frivolity which clings to feminine headgear is removed, one realises that one is in the presence of an intellectual of an advanced type.

Her eyes are also a deep brown, and in them there is gentleness. They impress you, however, as well as perceptive eyes, discerning in the ways of mankind and belonging to one with a thorough and keen sense of the fitness of things. She wears ordinarily short skirts and high shoes. Whatever she wears cannot hide the lithe, athletic way in which she moves. The new Assemblywoman can probably outwalk and outrun any member of the newly elected Legislature, and has the appearance of always being ready to undertake anything from a mile swim to a hundred-yard oratorical dash.

Miss Margaret L. Smith, for on the election posters the more sedate form of the name is used, has always lived in Harlem. Her father, Dr. J. Gardner Smith, is a well-known physician of that part of town, with an office and residence at 21 West 122d Street. He was once a physical instructor, and used to help bring young athletes into proper condition for Y. M. C. A. contests. From him the daughter inherited her love for athletics and for the great outdoors. Also she may have inherited political proclivities, for he is a prominent Republican in that district and the President of the Harlem Chamber of Commerce.

After attending the schools of the neighborhood Miss Smith decided that she would like to be an interior decorator. She honestly tried to combine dyed burlaps and painted cornices and to get up Italian Renaissance rooms for the rich, but, somehow, the profession of making beautiful other people's houses did not appeal to her. She longed for the Great Exterior, which had a big blue vault above it and was set with living green and filled with open spaces which the hand of art could never upholster. She tried to be a home creator for about a year and a half. Then she took a long hike and thought it all over and started in for physical culture.

On her graduation from Teachers College in 1916 Miss Smith studied her new subject and allied arts, and in 1918 got her degree of A. M. on the strength of a scientific thesis on the relation of blood pressure and the human heart, a subject, by the way, in which her also athletic father was a pioneer.

Because she was a cardiac expert and knew all about veins and arteries, Miss Smith was gladly accepted as an assistant for the draft board of her neighborhood. She could take blood pressures so skillfully and had such a thoroughly competent way with her that her services became invaluable. Men who were accounted political wiseacres began to talk about her a year ago as a possibility as a candiate for office.

There was no special reason for it except a feeling that they were in the presence of thoroughgoing competency whenever this young woman said anything or did anything. She took deep interest in all that went on in that vicinage. As a war worker she proved one of the ablest in the city. In every drive of the neighborhood, whether for Red Cross, or War Savings Stamps, or to help the Salvation Army get along without tambourines as collection plates, or to help put Harlem more solidly on the map, Margaret L. Smith was always to be depended upon to do something more than the share of ten men. She was the leader of a division of the United War Relief Fund, in which she raised $20,000 from young girls who had pledged themselves to earn and give.

The coming of the War Camp Community Service into the field gave her scope for her many accomplishments. She automatically took charge of all the dancing in her neighborhood, for if there is anything in this world which she likes more than anything else in the way of athletics it is the art terpsichorean. With her it is real artistic expression. She trips it lightly with the pupils of Isadora Duncan, and as interpretative dancer, some have said, she suggests Miss Duncan when as a young American she was taking Paris and Berlin by storm. Naturally, any one who could glide about like thistledown became the very life of the party whenever there were special soirées-dansants arranged for the doughboys.

A Teacher at Horace Mann.

It ought to be said that during all this time, when she had so much else to do, Miss Smith was teaching physical culture in Horace Mann School, as she is to this day, and that there were many parents living in the districts who had youngsters in that institution who regarded her very highly indeed.

It happened that last Summer, when Miss Smith emerged from a long swim near a certain girls' Summer camp up in Vermont, of which she had the thletic direction, a telegram was nded to her. It set forth that there as nothing else for her to do but to ccept the Republican nomination for Assemblyman, which was about to be offered to her.

Well, she said that she did not see how she could, because she had so much community work to do, and, besides, she was planning to get away next year sometime to camp in the Rocky Mountains. After considering the matter, from every point of view, she decided, however, to accept the honor. It is no discredit to her Democratic opponent, Mr. Healey, the first to congratulate her on her election, that he was defeated. Miss Margaret Smith's many friends made for her a whirlwind campaign. Every doughboy of that neighborhood who had danced with her and seen her dance went right out and helped in the canvass. All the old residents of Mount Morris Park, where she lives, and who had seen her grow up, went about the district seeing to it that everybody voted for Maggie. Every one who knew her war work, her genuine interest in the welfare of the neighborhood, insisted on being at the polls early to vote for her.

Her district extends from Madison Avenue to Eighth Avenue and from 118th Street to 137th Street, and has within it all kinds and conditions of men and women. The Italians over by the river wanted to vote for her because she was so kind to the children and helped drill them for folk dances; the Jews admired her keen, capable ways and her interest in the poor. There is an extensive negro colony in the heart of this district, and there Miss Smith had a large following, for she had been interested in everything which concerned them at a time when there was no suggestion of her running for office. She was asked to address meetings in that ebon neighborhood, and wherever she went she was received with enthusiasm. The best-known young woman of the district to all classes, it was a foregone conclusion that her election would be a sharp, brisk walkover. Everybody knew it and believed it but the candidate herself.

Now that she is the duly chosen representative of the Nineteenth, she says that in everything which she does she will be guided by the wishes of her constituents. This she thoroughly means. She is therefore planning to have a regular schedule of meetings with the people of the district, irrespective of their

SECOND THOUGHTS ON THE CITY ELECTION

Voters Defeated Tammany in Cold Blood After a Listless Campaign—Various Theories as to the Causes

IT has been aptly said that politics, if a science, should be termed the science of uncertainties. In politics the unexpected happens quite as frequently as the expected, despite all the planning and secret plotting and burning of midnight oil by men who call themselves leaders and fondly imagine themselves capable of setting in motion currents of thought and action certain to carry their candidates to the goal.

In this city the unexpected surely happened last Tuesday. If they would be perfectly frank, the Republican victors would admit that the returns left them as stunned as they did the Democratic victims. Major F. H. La Guardia, Major Henry H. Curran, and Major Philip J. McCook, the only three straight Republicain candidates for major offices on the ballot in Manhattan, had been picked for their vote-getting qualities, but the leaders never really dreamed that either would be able to realize a project which the leaders themselves after years of futile scheming had abandoned as incapable of realization—a straight Republican victory in Tammany's political stronghold, the Borough of Manhattan.

It had never been done, until Tuesday, since the greater city was created through consolidation of Manhattan, the Bronx, and Richmond with Brooklyn and Queens. It had never been done, until Tuesday, since Manhattan was separated from the Bronx as a separate county. The feat accomplished by the three Majors, in short, stands unparalleled in the political annals of the Borough of Manhattan.

Since consolidation the City of New York has been carried only once by a straight Republican candidate for any office. This was in 1906, when William Howard Taft was the Republican candidate for President, and received a plurality of a little more than 29,000 in the greater city. But Mr. Taft lost Manhattan and the Bronx and Queens. He won in the greater city only because of a Republican plurality of 23,000 in round numbers in Brooklyn.

The nearest approach to Tuesday's result was accomplished in 1896, the year before consolidation, when the City of New York consisted of Manhattan and the Bronx, and William McKinley was the Republican candidate for President against William J. Bryan. Mr. McKinley carried the City of New York by a little less than 25,000 votes. Borne on the ascendant wave of Republicanism, or rather anti-Bryanism—of that year, Frank S. Black, Republican candidate for Governor, was carried to victory in what was then the City of New York by a plurality of 4,200, the Republican candidates for Judges of the Court of Appeals won in the city by 8,754, and the only local candidates of that year—two Coroners—carried the city by pluralities that were little more than nominal.

Aside from the Republican victory itself, the most remarkable feature of last Tuesday's election and the one that promises most for the future was the manner in which it was accomplished.

This year the voters went out and defeated Tammany in cold blood. There was a moral issue of some magnitude, to be sure, created through Tammany's turning down Justice Joseph E. Newburger of the Supreme Court and Richard H. Smith of the City Court for re-election. But though this issue had been made by the Tammany leader, Charles F. Murphy, the leaders of the opposition failed to make the full use of it that would have made it an effective weapon in the war on Tammany. It was beclouded in the clamorous controversy over the draft record of Irwin Untermyer, the Tammany candidate for Justice of the Supreme Court.

In fact, there seemed not very much in the campaign to stir the pulses and arouse the voters to a mood of resentment and retaliatory action. There was hardly any campaign. The number of big rallies could be counted on the fingers of one hand. And the attendance was scant and the audiences notoriously cold. This was especially true about the meetings held under the auspices of the judiciary nominators who backed the anti-Tammany candidates. Not a single mass meeting or big rally was held under the auspices of the Republican County Committee in Manhattan, and the three straight Republican candidates were left to shift for themselves and get along the best way they could, with personal campaign managers and committees not particularly active conducting their campaigns.

There has not been a recent election in which the voters showed less interest—until election day—than the election last Tuesday. The notorious complaint of all the men who had anything to do with the running of the various personal campaigns was the impossibility of getting the voters to attend meetings. As far as could be observed, nothing was done either by the Republican County Committee or the General Committee of Tammany Hall to arouse interest and make a telling fight.

The writer of this article has lived in an atmosphere of politics for a dozen years or more, and has been an observer of every local, State, and national campaign during that period. There never was a campaign as dull and listless, with less tension in the air or indication that voters were alive to the issues on which the battle was waged. There were fewer evidences than usual that a campaign was in progress at all. Campaign buttons was as scarce as hens' teeth. The only big campaign banner flung to the wind hung in front of Tammany Hall. The high cost of campaigning was a heavy handicap to the managers. This may have been responsible for the absence of the usual properties and paraphernalia of campaigning, the pomp and panoply of political warfare. The printers' strike, too, impeded activities. The political committees were compelled to send to cities hundreds of miles away to have their letterheads and necessary campaign "literature" printed. Under the circumstances, the supply was cut down to scant necessity. The winning Republican candidates in Manhattan, in fact, did not even go to the trouble of laying in a supply of campaign stationery, but sent out their communications on flimsy sheets of the cheapest manila paper.

And after such a campaign—with candidates who by no means were political stars of the first magnitude—election day brought results that virtually spelled revolution in local politics. The campaign managers in the winning camp, after days of reflection, admit that the situation has failed to respond to any analytical process that they have applied in their endeavor to arrive at an appraisal of cause and effect. They are at a loss to account for it, except on the theory that some new force has entered the politics of the town.

What happened is ascribed to all sorts of causes by the managers now resting on their new laurels.

Some say prohibition was responsible, in that it did away with the corner saloon, Tammany's traditional recruiting ground. In connection with this the writer has learned that a frantic but futile effort was made to induce President Wilson to lift the war ban on liquor in time for last Monday—the day before election—for the effect it would have on the Democratic campaign in New York, New Jersey, and Kentucky.

Others say that woman suffrage was the reason, but Tammany had its women better organized than the Republicans—at least in Manhattan, where the Republican victory of Major Curran was won. And women had shown little in-

NEWS AND NOTES OF THE CURRENT DRAMATIC FARE

SECOND THOUGHTS ON FIRST NIGHTS

By ALEXANDER WOOLLCOTT

The Provincetown Plays

IT is a provocative and almost continuously interesting evening that is provided in Macdougal Street, where another week remains for the first bill of short plays staged this season by the Provincetown Players. In the cramped and dismal little theatre off Washington Square, where the dramatic pauses are sometimes rudely interrupted by the boisterous hubbub of nearby plumbing, the kind of fare is served which used to be looked for at the Bandbox in the palmy days of the Washington Square Players.

It is to the Macdougal Street group we must look now for any considerable exploitation of the one-act play. The old Bandbox crowd is scattered to the four winds and the Portmanteau is no more. It is true that the Washington Square mummers and menters are now largely absorbed into the Theatre Guild, but that is an organization which is striking out along quite new trails. For instance, at the very time when it is losing its most important member, Rollo Peters, it is acquiring as a visiting star none other than James K. Hackett.

It is true that we may expect some short plays at intervals from the East-West Players, a band of intermittent actors from the lower East Side, who should be in no way confused with the company playing Samuel Shipman's phenomenally successful melodrama at the Astor. And they do say Poe's tales are to be dramatized and presented on Sunday evenings at the Princess. The press agent's somewhat inaccurate statement that this venture will bring the Poe stories to the stage for the first time slips by unnoticed in the emotion aroused by a further sentence in the announcement. While nothing is vouchsafed as to the players engaged for "The Gold Bug," "The Tell-tale Heart," and so forth, the following promise is given: "The theatre will be perfumed by Ann Haviland." It is possible that something ever so clever could be injected at this point by inquiring whether these Edgar Allan Pinaud productions will

> Gently in his perfumed seat
> The weary, wayworn playgoer bore.

But we hurry on to reiterate that the Provincetown Players are the chief support of the one-act play in New York, and we suppose they may therefore be regarded as pretty noble and all that. Their equipment is still frugal and yet, while they have not gone so far as to acquire a James K. Hackett, they have at least installed some seats, and the audience is no longer required to sit in a moist mass on the sloping floor.

Their first bill includes an engrossing negro playlet called "The Dreamy Kid," by the oncoming Eugene O'Neill; a delightful little comedy called "The Philosopher of Butterbiggens," by the late Harold Chapin; an inscrutable drama by Djuna Barnes called "Three from the Earth," and a dully saucy fragment called "Getting Unmarried," by Winthrop Parkhurst. The last named may be dismissed as a bit of 1806 insurgency, which very likely was not printed in the Ladies' Home Journal of that year with illustrations by Alice Barber Stephens, but which easily might have been. The rest are worth a second thought each.

Playlets of Scotch and Negro Life.

"THE DREAMY KID" is another good play from Eugene O'Neill, many of whose shorter pieces for the stage had already seen the somewhat dim light of this same theatre. He is the son of James O'Neill of "Monte Christo" fame, and a long play of his called "Chris" is to be produced after the holidays by the same George Tyler who ran through the lamp-lit streets of Chicago that night thirty years ago when this playwright came into the world. "Chris" is a play of the sea which O'Neill has served before the mast.

"The Dreamy Kid" is a sketch which has as its central figure a young, crap-shooting, gang-leading, gun-toting darky who has just killed a white man in a scrap and who, with the police hot on his trail, has nevertheless crept to the deathbed of his grandmother, because he knows in his heart he will have no luck all the days of his life if he does not obey her final summons. It is interesting to see how, just as Dreiser does in "The Hand of the Potter," so here the author of "The Dreamy Kid" induces your complete sympathy and pity for a conventionally abhorrent character.

The performance is by negroes—amateurs mostly. That is well enough this time, because, after all, the entire program is on the quasi-amateur level, and pretends to no more. Against such casting there can scarcely lie the objections legitimately made against the preposterous production of the Torrence plays at the Garden several years ago, when special pride was taken in the fact that there had been engaged for the performance players who, while utterly inadequate for the dramatic needs of the rôles, did happen to be physically prepared for them out of nature's makeup box. It was quite as though a producer, having a rôle to cast and noting that the script called for red hair, passed conscientiously by all the available actresses of talent and experience and proudly engaged a woman who, while she could not act at all, did have wonderful red hair.

"The Philosopher of Butterbiggens" is a delightful Scotch comedy, the best of the short plays by Harold Chapin. It was given at the memorial matinée held in London after the American-born playwright, so rich in promise and achievement, was killed on the British front. Mr. Chapin's sister staged the piece in the present production.

It tells the story of a philosophic graybeard who, grumbling because his stubborn and impervious daughter will not let him spoil wee Alexander with a nightly bedside story, is driven to the sour reflection that, after all, life is just getting one's "ain way." A man really lives, that is, gets his "ain way," only in the days of his full maturity. When he is very old or very young—why, he hasn't a chance. To be sure, when he's very, very young, he sometimes contrives to carry a point by yowling so terribly that folks yield to him for fear of what the neighbors will think. This reflection suggests suddenly a brilliant manoeuvre to the old man who, pounding with his stick on the floor, sets up from his fireplace armchair such an artistic and sedulous howl that in despair the daughter must needs bring in wee Alexander to quiet him. The curtain falls as the story begins.

This goes very well indeed. It even went well last Tuesday evening when the falsetto voice, usually engaged to lurk in the wings and express the shrill woe of wee Alexander, was absent at the crucial moment and there rushed into the breach a singularly unfortunate substitute—the Bull of Bashan, apparently.

The Inscrutable Authoress.

"THREE FROM THE EARTH" is enormously interesting, and the greatest indoor sport this week is guessing what it means. We hasten to enroll in the large group that has not the faintest idea—a group which includes such pundits as Burns Mantle, Clayton Hamilton, and, we suspect, the cryptic author herself.

In the brief span of her drama three slow-spoken young peasants are visiting a luxurious and disdainful woman in her boudoir—to size her up, apparently, and also to reclaim from her certain letters which their self-slain father had written her in times past. A few samples of the ensuing dialogue will give at least the flavor of the piece:

Kate—First tell me how you live.
John—We go down on the earth and find things, tear them up—shaking the dirt off. Then there are the cows to be milked, the horses—a few—to be curried, shod, and fed—do you wish me to continue?
Kate—Yes, yes, go on.
Henry—We get up at dawn and our father turns over in bed and whispers: "If you meet any one, say nothing; if you are asked a question, look stupid ——"
Kate—I believe you.
James—And he says: "Go about your work as if you had neither sight, speech, nor hearing ——"
Kate—Yes?
John—And he adds: "If you should meet a woman in the road ——"
Kate (excitedly)—Then what?
Henry—That's enough.

Or take this earlier passage from the script:

Kate—How's your father? I remember—he was always mad—he used to wear a green suit and carried around white rats, all over his shoulders. Ah, yes, your father—he was a barber, wasn't he?
Henry—No, chemist.
Kate (uneasily, laughing a little)—I have a bad memory after all. And your mother—a prostitute, I believe.
Henry (calmly)—At times.

It is possible ingeniously to interpret nearly all that is said or done in "Three from the Earth" in terms of the stirring of the masses and the changing attitudes toward government and capital. This key, however, still leaves a good many loose ends of the play quite as baffling, for instance, as "The Middle Temple Murder," the book which is apparently being read these days by all our notables and about which, it must be confessed, the chief mystery is how President Wilson contrived to lay the darned thing aside each day after a stint of only four chapters.

However, "Three from the Earth" is thus enlarged upon because it is really interesting to see how absorbing and essentially dramatic a play can be without the audience ever knowing what, if anything, the author is driving at and without, as we have coarsely endeavored to suggest, the author knowing either. The spectators sit with bated breath listening to each word of a playlet of which the darkly suggested clues leave the mystery unsolved.

This trick of hinting at things which are never revealed, of charging an act with expectancy never satisfied, of lighting fuses that lead to no explosion at all, is a trick Eugene Walter plays occasionally to intensify a scene. It is a trick which, played often, would enrage an audience. Played once in a great while it is undeniably effective. An audience could be held spellbound (once) by the following drama:

FREE FROM THE BIRTH

A Malthusian Sardonicism in One Act.

(The scene is the old, oak-paneled library of Sir Bruce Haden's seat in Kent. As the curtain rises the great doors swing wide as by an unseen hand, and, after a pause, two thin, middle-aged women, plainly clad, enter. They are carrying the body of a dead youth, draped only in a leopard's skin. This they methodically hide under a divan and draw the ruffled valance so that it cannot be seen. The body is then apparently forgotten by everybody except the audience, who, it is hoped, will be considerably worked up about it.)

ENTER SIR BRUCE.

Sir Bruce (coldly)—I know neither of you. What do you want?

The Women (speaking always in chorus)—You do not know us yet, Sir Bruce.

Sir Bruce—Come to the next room. This old vault is uninhabitable. It is cold here.

The Women (drawing closer to each other)—It will grow colder before this night is spent.

Sir Bruce—Why, then, have you come at all?

The Women—God knows, we had no choice.

Sir Bruce—You were sent to me?

The Women—We are always sent.

Sir Bruce—By whom?

The Women—We may not say.

Sir Bruce—And you wish—

The Women—the Haden ritual.

Sir Bruce (laughing scornfully)—You are presumptuous.

The Women—You will give it to us.

Sir Bruce—I know you now. You are foul, horrible. You are like the sick, white slugs that crawl the moist, black earth beneath the rocks in Spring.

The Women (laughing heartily)—All men say that of us, sooner or later.

ENTER SERVANT.

Servant—A strange man has come to the gate and asked for you.

Sir Bruce—Who is he?

Servant—He will not say.

Sir Bruce—What manner of man?

Servant—No man can tell.

Sir Bruce—Damn you, what do you mean by that?

Sir Bruce—You are a fool.

Servant—And the greyhound is whimperinglike in his kennel, and now comes this stranger calling out that he must see you. He is masked, Sir Bruce. I cannot tell what manner of man he is.

Sir Bruce (turning pale—this can be done by proper lighting effect—and rising from his seat)—Bid him enter and come to me here.

EXIT SERVANT.

Sir Bruce (harshly)—Well, then, the Haden ritual is in this house. You are right. It is in this room.

The Women—Every grand-dam in Kent knows that.

Sir Bruce—And here it will stay.

The Women—Not always. Not long.

Sir Bruce—It is safe here, safer than than you know.

The Women—Not safe enough. There will come a time when that panel there will yield its secret.

Sir Bruce—No, that panel is guarded from all alien and profane hands. For generations no one has lingered in this room at night, for all men know that no creature can be here as the clock strikes 12 and live.

The Women—Memories of old, forgotten midnights haunt its walls. We will keep watch with them.

Sir Bruce—Not I.

The Women (barring his path as he starts to go)—It is too late. The hour is at hand.

The clock begins to strike. The three listen in frozen silence. At the ninth stroke one of the women laughs hysterically and is still again. The tenth stroke sounds. The eleventh. No more. They stand straining their ears as

THE CURTAIN FALLS.

Mr. King Is the English Actor Who Gives So Distinguished a Performance in the Rôle Opposite Miss Barrymore's in "Declasse."

LONDON NOTES

HENRY AINLEY, the brilliant English actor who was seen here in his salad days as leading man for Maude Adams in "The Pretty Sister of José" and whose modest tour here was wrecked by an imbecile press story that he had been imported by Charles Frohman because of his great personal beauty, is entering upon the most ambitious project of his career—a partnership with Gilbert Miller and a program that so far seems to be an English echo of John Barrymore's successes. He has begun with "Redemption," played in London under the title "Reparation," and he will follow it with "The Jest." Mr. Ainley in method and scope corresponds more nearly to Lionel Barrymore than to the younger brother.

The London reviews of "Reparation" have for the most part been enthusiastic, with all hands agreeing that Mr. Ainley gives a superb performance. The Times, however, received the play with a certain puzzled frigidity.

Among the plays of American origin visible in London during October were "Tiger Rose," the Willard Mack play, which David Belasco produced here; "Daddies," another Belasco production; "The Cinderella Man," which is one of those interminable London hits that never do stop running, and "Monsieur Beaucaire," the vastly popular musical version of the Tarkington play, which is due here this season.

Walter Catlett, the comedian who was received with favor here when "So Long Letty" was playing in New York, has burst upon London in a musical piece called "Baby Bunting." The reviewers hailed him with a great approbation, crediting him with about 90 per cent. of the entertainment afforded.

"Caesar's Wife," the new Maugham piece destined here for Billie Burke and Norman Trevor, has concluded its London engagement at the Royalty.

"The new Shylock, Mr. Maurice Moscovitch, is wonderfully good," says The London Times. "Indeed, we can remember none better. He is neither a minor prophet nor a public monument, but the Jew that Shakespeare drew, or a very good guess at it. Rather greasy, snuffling, with a strong sense of humor, and not a shred of dignity. When he hears from Tubal of Antonio's misfortune he positively dances with joy, round and round. In court he carefully takes off his rings that they shall not get soiled with his victim's blood—a very grim touch. He seizes Antonio and forces him to his knees. When foiled and dismissed, he makes faces at the court in the impotence of his rage, his whole body writhing. Mr. Moscovitch is said to be a Russian Jew, who has played Shylock in America and in Yiddish in the East End. He speaks as a foreigner, and you have the odd effect of Shakespeare with an accent—an English equivalent, in its way, of the queer lingo Balzac assigns to his Nucingen. You might call him an adenoidal Shylock, but whatever you call him, you won't forget him in a hurry. He is overwhelmingly alive and grotesquely deadly an obsession, a nightmare. Ugh! (An interjection which, in the circumstances, is the highest possible compliment.)"

"MOLIERE" RETIRES.

Henry Miller and Blanche Bates, at the Standard Theatre last night, said farewell to "Moliere"—for the immediate present, at least. Mr. Miller, however, is preparing another play—its nature is at present a secret—which he will produce on tour in about four weeks.

Shun the Speculator!

THE wily speculator, chancing to run out of tickets for Ethel Barrymore's "Declassee" last Tuesday, printed his own—doing so good a job, incidentally, that something like a hundred persons were fooled thereby. The spurious tickets, let it be added, were purchased not from one of the several legitimate ticket brokers, but from a sidewalk speculator. Sidewalk speculating is illegal in the City of New York.

Until a practical plan for the wiping out of the speculator has been worked out, it will be necessary, as in the past, for the playgoer to be his own protection. The best way to turn the trick is to avoid the sidewalk speculator. The theatrical managers are now—again, rather—endeavoring to work out a plan which will eliminate the lesser and irresponsible dealers in theatre tickets; in the interim, and perhaps longer, it will be up to the individual theatregoer to do his own looking out.

WHAT NEWS ON THE RIALTO?

FROM the producers, in almost unanimous voice, came loud complaints that nothing quite approximating the current play congestion has ever before existed in the theatre. Both on the road and in New York there is a demand for houses far exceeding the supply, both of the booking syndicates having reached such a state that there is almost an unholy tendency to rejoice when the out-of-town venture of some associated producer falls short and thereby renders further bookings unnecessary.

Nearly every producer is delaying the production of one or more plays, the prindipal players for which are in many cases under contract, until the situation shall have eased up somewhat. In other cases plays are being placed in rehearsal with no particular idea on the part of any one as to where, or if, they will open.

The circumstances are working somewhat to the advantage of a number of the Broadway attractions. A goodly handful are about ready to go on their ways, but are being held in New York because the booking powers have literally no place to send them.

The Messrs. McIntyre and Heath will make it an even forty-five years on Wednesday, it having been just that length of time since a chance meeting down South made them fellow minstrels for life. In celebration thereof a variety of minstrels, most of them of other days, will assemble at the Forty-fourth Street Theatre at the matinée of "Hello, Alexander" on Wednesday.

"Black and White," referred to in this spot a week ago as "written from the negro's point of view," is, take it from the management, not. Its point of view, declares the entrepeneur, is that of "good American white citizens in the South." The author is James Faller.

When the current mystery plays shall have gone on their various ways it is the intention of the careful Mr. Harris to bring his own little murder play to town. This is Rita Weiman's melodrama, "The Acquittal," which has been causing Chicagoans to flock to Cohan's Grand Opera House for a matter of six weeks or more. During the past week, also, Mr. Harris produced Crane Wilbur's "The Haunted Violin" in Atlantic City, and presumably either that play or "The Acquittal" will be brought to the Cohan and Harris when "The Royal Vagabond" shall have run its course.

In addition to the various programs in the theatres tonight the sanctity of the day will be further upheld by a "concert" in aid of the Fifty-Fifty Club at the Hudson Theatre. Ed. Wynn will be the principal concerteer.

After thinking it over the management of "Aphrodite" has decided to admit the public to the premiere of that production at $10 apiece, plus the war tax. This will be the orchestra price; the less meticulous will be permited to sit in the dress circle for half the amount. And so on down to $1. The opening is set for Monday night, Nov. 24.

Leon Gordon and Leroy Clemens, who may or may not be remembered as the authors of a war thriller called "Watch Your Neighbor," which Oliver Morosco caused to be produced at the Booth Theatre a season and a half ago, have written another called "Love on Account." Walter Hast, so runs the story, will do the producing.

Without even the announcement that Fredella Footlights had been added to the cast, a play entitled "Nunkie," written by Jack Hazzard, has recently been tested on the road. Mr. Hazzard, it will be remembered, was one of the authors of "Turn to the Right," although he has said repeatedly that his portion of the entertainment consisted largely in keeping quiet while Winchell Smith worked. "Nunkie" has a bibulous, ambitionless old artist as its hero. The part is being played by Forrest Robinson.

Also rather quietly offered out of town recently was "For the Defense," a melodrama by Elmer L. Rice, who wrote "On Trial" back in the days when his name was Elmer E. Reizenstein. The play has a murder somewhere concealed in it, and Richard Bennett has the leading rôle, that of a District Attorney.

Bayard Veiller, it turns out, has been improving the lustrous hours by dashing off another theatrical entertainment, a piece which he has christened "The Kind-Hearted Burglar." Oliver Morosco has crept up on it and captured it, with the result that Mr. Veiller is even now on his way to Los Angeles, where Mr. Morosco's dramatic laboratory is situated, to give the play its preliminary fling. And presumably, although the official announcement says nothing about it, New York will see the piece sooner or later.

The considerable hullabaloo which has been raised about Theatre Guild politics during the week was in reality inspired by little more than the customary goings-on in a theatrical organization. The beginning of the trouble, it turns out, was the elimination of certain passages in the second act of "The Faithful"—passages which might possibly have caused offense to a sensitive backer. Augustin Duncan, following their elimination, tendered his resignation to the directors; Philip Moeller, however, later insisted that the request for the excision of the extraneous material had come from John Masefield himself. As for Rollo Peters, he will travel to Europe in an effort to perfect himself as a designer of scenery, although various other reasons have been assigned for his departure.

The Guild's production of "The Rise of Silas Lapham," incidentally, will be made at the Garrick Theatre on Tuesday night, Nov. 25, having been set back a day to avoid conflicting with the magnificent "Aphrodite." James K. Hackett, as guest star, will have the principal role. The play, an adaptation by Lillian Sabine of the William Dean Howells novel, is laid in the period of 1875.

Vicente Blasco Ibanez, like most notables who come to New York, visited the Plymouth Theatre for a performance of "The Jest," and also went back stage after the curtain was down to present his respects to the two Barrymores. There, in addition to the Barrymores, he encountered the scholar of the cast, one Professor Walhelm, and with him as interpreter carried on a considerable conversation with the stars. Ibanez reported that he had seen both the French and the Italian productions of the play, but declared the present one to be their superior both as regards the settings and the performance.

Incidentally, Benelli's "The Jest" is to follow the same author's "Love of Three Kings" into grand opera.

Louis Bennison, his "Petroleum Prince," having failed him, will presently blossom forth as the "Bill" of Edward Streeter's "Dere Mabel" letters. Mr. Street and J. K. Hodges have lately been converting the tales into a musical play, or—as the announcement carefully says—a comedy with music.

Mr. Ziegfeld's "Follies," for all that its prosperity is practically unabated, will go on its way in another four weeks. All towns are alike so far as the "Follies" is concerned: just as the show can play to capacity audiences here, so a clamorous road is awaiting it. This year's edition has remained at the New Amsterdam Theatre a month or two longer than usual—a circumstance which can be at least partially attributed to the fact that Mr. Ziegfeld is now a part owner of the New Amsterdam lease.

One of the entertainments about to be forced from New York by the house shortage will be "Five o'Clock," which must give way to Mr. Morosco's claim on the Fulton in another week. Possibly another theatre will be found for "Five o'Clock," although there is little to justify the hope at present. "Boys Will be Boys," compelled to leave the Belmont, probably will play off-day matinées at one of the Shubert houses until a regular home is found for it.

WHO IS GLENN HUNTER?

A SCANT few years ago young Glenn Hunter was spending his nights in Central Park or Grand Central Terminal, as judgment seemed to dictate, and accordingly he can be said to have climbed upward with a vengeance. At present, in "Clarence," he is making the hit of his 23-year-old life in the rôle of the adolescent son of the house.

Hunter hails from Highland Mills, N. Y., and came to New York some three years ago with stage ambitions and $4.25. He had participated in amateur theatricals at school in Massachusetts, and had thus acquired the desire to act, but his parents had frowned upon his ambition, and this necessitated his taking matters into his own hands. He was then 17.

He spent four terrible months roaming the streets of New York and looking for a job—any job. For a month, after his $4 had given out, he slept in Central Park, and then spent alternate nights in Grand Central Terminal and Pennsylvania Station. On these occasions he would carry a bag so that he might be taken for a traveler, but the station porters finally learned to know him, and he was forced to go back to his park.

His stage ambitions, of course, were side-tracked by this time, and it became a question of finding anything at all to do to keep body and soul as close companions as usual. He had written home that he was working in a jewelry store, and accordingly was unwilling to appeal for funds.

His first job, when finally it came, was as typist at $6 a week. It was not much, but it enabled him to move to the Mills Hotel and eat occasionally. But it lasted only a few weeks, and presently he was again destitute. Then some one called his attention to a story which Zoe Beckley, then of the staff of The Evening Mail, had written—a story about a young singer who was engaged in pursuits distinctly utilitarian and awaiting his chance to be heard. The newspaper story helped him to a career, and Hunter thought that perhaps something of the same sort could be done for him.

So, one morning, when he had not eaten for forty-eight hours, he walked from 103d Street to The Evening Mail office, at Broadway and Fulton Street, to see Miss Beckley. She was busy, and refused to see him. He waited in the office until he chanced to attract the attention of Dr. Rumely, who had just taken over the control of the paper at that time, and the latter heard his story and urged Miss Beckley to interest herself.

She did so, and incidentally gave the youth 50 cents with which to go out and get a photograph of himself to illustrate the article. Hunter found a place where he could get a photograph for a quarter, and spent the balance for food.

In addition to running Hunter's story Miss Beckley gave the starving youth a letter to Edward Goodman, then director of the Washington Square Players at the Bandbox Theatre. Goodman, seeing his plight, promised him a job at $10 a week, and also gave him the key to his apartment with the injunction to go there and sleep until he was in condition to work.

Hunter remained all season with the Players at $10 a week—playing small rôles in two or three of their plays. One of these was "The Clod," and when that piece went into vaudeville Hunter went with it, and traveled to the Coast and back over the Orpheum Circuit. The next season, back with the Washington Squarers, he played a rôle in "Bushido" at the Comedy, and then followed Donald Gallaher as the boy in Chesterton's "Magic" at the Maxine Elliott. He went into "Pollyanna" next, playing a small part on the road, and then, after a week or two in "Penrod" during the try-out period, he enlisted in the Ambulance Corps.

He was put into "Clarence" tentatively when that comedy was tried out in Atlantic City. Booth Tarkington, who saw one of the early rehearsals, insisted that he was too old for the part, but withdrew this criticism with elaborate apologies after he had seen the play acted in Atlantic City during the Summer.

TO MISS BARRYMORE

In "DECLASSEE"

A VERY lovely lady, she—
A Marquise of romance,
To smile so gay at life and death,
And tilt with broken lance.

A brave and gallant lady, this—
With hand light on the rein,
For riding straight, and riding far,
And riding to her pain.

A very courtly lady, she—
Born out of her true day,
Who danced to very reckless tunes,
Nor failed the piper's pay.

A lady in a play, perhaps—
A Marquise Pierrette.
But ah—she seemed so very real!
Adieu—our eyes are wet!

ANNE PEACOCK.

THE NEW PLAYS

FOUR new offerings will come along this week to contribute their respective mites to the Broadway gayety. Of the newcomers two will be dramas, one a comedy, and the fourth a musical piece. The remaining attractions are, in the main, in a highly flourishing state.

THE UNKNOWN WOMAN—Tomorrow night at the Maxine Elliott Theatre.

Marjorie Rambeau, who never strays very far from Broadway, will make her annual visit to these parts in this new drama by Marjorie Blaine and Stanley Lewis. The management cannily divulges nothing of the play in advance, but it is known to be an adaptation from the Yiddish and a play with which Yiddish audiences in this city have long been familiar.

Miss Rambeau's supporting company will include Lumsden Hare, Hugh Dillman, Felix Krembs, Annie Mack Berlein, Dodson Mitchell, Lincoln Plummer, Roy Walling, George A. Cameron, Fannie Bourke, Jean Robertson, Willis Reed, Alice May, and Florence Burdett.

Tony Sarg's Marionettes are back at the Neighborhood Playhouse these nights. "The Rose and the Ring" will be acted tonight, and "Jack and the Beanstalk" and other pieces during the week.

THE LOST LEADER—Tuesday night at the Greenwich Village Theatre.

This is an Irish play by Lennox Robinson, a play which caused no end of discussion when it was produced in London some months ago. It is concerned with the return to life of Charles Stewart Parnell—or, rather, the theory that he is still alive—and brings him into touch with modern Irish problems.

Frank Conroy will be the Parnell, and the cast will also include Robert T. Haines, J. M. Kerrigan, Mae Melvin, Hugh Huntley, Ruth Boyd, Frank Compton, Edward O'Connor, Arthur Barry, Frederick Arthur, Joseph Macauley, Eric Maxon, John Ahearn, and Theodore A. Doucet. Livingston Platt designed the scenes.

This is "a musical romance in three acts and a prologue." Frederick Arnold Kummer, who has one or two other musical comedies on the fire, is the author of the book and lyrics of this one, and the music is by Sigmund Romberg, who figures in the proceedings also as producer. Willy Pogany has designed the settings.

WEDDING BELLS—Wednesday night at the Harris Theatre.

"Wedding Bells" is a comedy by Salisbury Field, whose best known contribution to the theatre in the past has been "Twin Beds"—or that part of it which Margaret Mayo did not write. In the new play he has "combined a keen knowledge of human nature with a delicate sense of fun," or so 'tis said. The play concerns the adventures of a youth about to marry for the second time.

Margaret Lawrence, last year's heroine of "Tea for Three," and Wallace Eddinger will be the principals in the cast, and an unusually illustrious company will also include Jessie Glendinning, Mrs. Jacques Martin, John Harwood, Clark Silvernail, Percy Ames, Emil Andrews, and George Ruffell.

IN SCHUBERT

By RICHARD ALDRICH

THE New Symphony Orchestra played Schubert's C major symphony last week in all its "heavenly lengths." A week or two before this Rudolph Ganz, in his piano recital, played three of the same composer's "Impromptus," three of the longest ones. In each of these cases most lovers of Schubert must have felt the lengths, "heavenly" though they may be, excessive, and have wished, consciously or unconsciously, that somebody would go to work to curtail them. Schumann invented his classic phrase as an apology, a euphemism, for what he realized as a defect, however indisposed he was to formulate his criticism in that word. Some have been disposed to rebel against Schumann's dictum; thus, Hanslick observes that everything in the C major symphony, about which Schumann used the phrase, is heavenly except its lengths.

Schumann's apology is beginning to lose its force, and it can hardly be doubted that Schubert's chances on the programs of performances at the present day are lessened gradually but sensibly each year by the diffuseness and repetitions that exist in so many of his instrumental works, even the best. It is dangerous to tamper with masterpieces; that everybody will admit, and it is not for everybody to do it. But the proper and intelligent curtailment of some of Schubert's excesses in length and repetition would be a blessing alike to his fame and to lovers of his music, who would like to hear it oftener than they do if it were brought to a conciseness that corresponds with modern ideas.

The task would require not only courage but a rare combination of skill, taste, and judgment; but it would not be found insuperable by one possessed of these qualities, and it would reward the exercise of them. Of course, "cuts" have been attempted by this and that conductor of the C major symphony, desultorily and experimentally. But let somebody attempt a definitive and authoritative version that may be generally accepted. Would Schubert himself have been the one to do it? This has been suggested, but a task more uncongenial to him is not easy to imagine. He never bothered to revise; he was an improviser with an improviser's wealth of ideas. He would never have been one of those "best writers" shown us by Voltaire in his poem "The Temple of Fame," gathered in the Holy of Holies engaged in improving their own works—chiefly by making extensive "cuts" in them.

In the first edition of his original and stimulating book, "The Symphony Since Beethoven," Felix Weingartner, then 34 years old, writing of Schubert's C major symphony, thought it "inconceivable that in the presence of such a direct expression of truly divine power there are always those people who find this symphony too long and desire to shorten it. I do not belong to this class." But thirteen years later, with his mind enriched by thirteen years' experience in which he had made himself one of the foremost of conductors, he published a rewritten, rather than a revised, edition of the same little book. He had found reason in this time to change fundamentally many of his views. In this edition he leaves out entirely the passage just quoted. It may only be conjectured, therefore, that he had changed his mind about the people who wished to shorten the C major symphony; it is possible that he had added himself to their number.

It is quite possible, in fact, that the most ardent admiration for Schubert may not be incompatible with a desire for greater conciseness. Even Sir George Grove, one of his most ardent admirers, does not fail to point out that in his instrumental music Schubert is often very diffuse. "When a passage pleases him he generally repeats it at once, almost note for note. He will reiterate a passage over and over again in different keys as if he never could have done." Hermann Kretzschmar finds in the colossal proportions of the C major symphony, in the incessant repetitions of its periodic structure, something of a "monstrosity," for all the marvels of its beauty. Daniel Gregory Mason estimates that we usually find in Schubert's music "five pages of repetition to one of real development," and he quotes H. H. Statham's note on the "vain repetitions" in the andante of the great symphony. On the other hand, Walter Dahms, the latest German biographer of Schubert, takes a more transcendental and thoroughly Teutonic view of the matter: What are felt as "lengths," observes Dahms, are indeed mostly repetitions of episodes which can be cut without really damaging the development in the matter of form. But to do so, he thinks, would be to show a misunderstanding of Schubert's nature. What he was aiming at was precisely the feeling of "timelessness," a "soaring out of the reach of time and actuality." He quotes von Bülow, writing after a performance of the work, "We tarried in everlasting space, in a world without time," as discovering therein the essence of the symphony, and as presenting thus the gist of an argument against cutting the symphony.

There have perhaps been performances of this work that were so engrossing that they did not seem long, or too long. They are rare and becoming rarer. The actual time taken in performance is considerable. Mr. Modansky last week took several minutes less than an hour. Felix Weingartner, in the book just quoted, gives the length of the symphony as "over an hour without breaks." It has been played in less. Müller-Reuter in his "Lexicon of Concert Literature," recording his experience, not laying down a precept, puts down the expected duration as 46 minutes, to which should probably be added a few more for breath-taking and applause. It does not necessarily follow that a longer duration is too long. Much depends on what is done, on the way, and how it is done.

Now, nobody begrudges minutes to a great work of art, but when these minutes in performance count against the life of the work, and they can be reduced without damage to it, the conclusion is irresistible that they should be.

An interesting specimen of how this task might be accomplished is at hand in an edition prepared by Harold Bauer of Schubert's posthumous sonata for piano in B flat. It is an instructive lesson as to how such a thing should be done. The sonata, says Mr. Bauer in his preface, has practically been laid aside by pianists owing to its excessive length and needless repetitions; he believes that it will be found "greatly improved" by the cuts which he has freely made.

An examination of the method pursued in this one case seems to suggest that a similar method would result as beneficially in many other of Schubert's redundant compositions. There are, first, simple omissions of repeated phrases, sometimes only a couple of measures, sometimes even a single measure, sometimes a whole repeated period of eight or sixteen measures, of which a single statement appears enough. Only at the end of the last movement is there a wholesale omission of some four pages of text, in which there is nothing added to the development of the substance of the movement, but which are a complete reiteration of what has already been developed. It is easily evident that the movement immediately gains in force and cogency by what is obviously pure redundancy.

Mr. Bauer has found it necessary to make only one actual textual change; it is in the first movement, at the close of the development section—in which he has not been sparing of omissions—in the passage that leads over to the recapitulation; this is done in order to make it possible to excise a whole block of measures. There is an ingenious transference of a certain thematic clause with change of key, so deftly contrived that no one who had not memorized the sonata verbatim would perceive, in performance, any departure from the letter of Schubert's own version, as there certainly is none from the spirit.

It need hardly be said that the "repeats" are all omitted. No change has been made in the scherzo. The other three movements have been reduced by somewhat more than one-third, and that without any loss of anything that Schubert really had to say; furthermore, not only without any loss of symmetry and proportion, but with actually a gain.

This admirable piece of work has been examined thus closely as suggesting a model and a method for attempts of the same kind upon more important works of Schubert. Only one greatly daring will touch the C major symphony, and none had better lay hands upon it who has not the higher kind of discernment of what may be omitted from the work and will not only not be missed, but create no uneasy feeling that something is wrong, even if it cannot be located by the listener at the performance as it is unrolled before him. Such a task, if attempted at all, must be done with absolute artistic rectitude. If the right man takes it in hand, the operation will have been performed once and for all. It would be to the satisfaction of Schubert lovers in several ways. Schubert would thereby be made to say not less, but more, than he does.

"MIKADO" AT THE PARK.

"The Mikado," the second of the Gilbert and Sullivan revivals by the Society of American Singers, will be presented tomorrow night and at all performances at the Park Theatre this week. The title rôle will be sung by William Danforth, with Frank Moulan as Ko-Ko, the Lord High Executioner, and Craig Campbell and Ralph Brainard alternately as Nanki Poo.

Lady Tsen Mei, the Chinese prima donna of "The Geisha," will have her second operatic rôle as Yum Yum. Cora Tracy will sing Katisha, Gladys Caldwell will appear as Pitti Sing, Gertrude Shannon as Peep Bo, Herbert Waterous as Poo-Bah, and Bertram Peacock as Pish Tush.

WEEK NOV. 17 "THE BETTER 'OLE"

To the Public:

The Capitol tenders as its third offering an attractive composite programme of motion pictures, stage and musical novelties, with the latest triumph of the Goldyn studios as the basic unit—Rex Beach's smashing, crashing, red-blooded tale of the big, open, sturdy and snow-clad Northwest, "The Girl From Outside."

To lovers of Rex Beach literature no more need be said—the subject and Goldwyn treatment suggest their own visualization. Supplemental pictures of high standard surround this feature. Also Ned Wayburn's Demi-Tasse Revue is retained intact with additions and changes calculated to give it a new tang, and Arthur Pryor's Capitol Band of 70 pieces is afforded greater opportunity to demonstrate its pleasing possibilities.

GOLDWYN PICTURES CORPORATION
SAMUEL GOLDWYN, President

Recognizing the tremendous demand for clean, healthful entertainment on Sunday, the Capitol will give four concerts to-day—at 12:30 noon, 3, 6, and 9 P. M.—composite programmes made from the best features of the regular bill. For the convenience of the public these programmes are so arranged that patrons may come when they please and leave when they like.

For the information of purchasers of reserved seats: The latter are held for the matinee purchaser exclusively from 12:30 noon to 5:30 P. M. and for the evening holder from 6 P. M. to nearly midnight. Reserved seats always 8 weeks in advance.

IN THE NEWS NET.

MAE MARSH is coming back to the screen. It is reported that " the little sister " of " The Birth of a Nation " and " the little dear one " of " Intolerance " has signed a contract with L. J. Gasnier, according to which she will begin making pictures some time next February. Miss Marsh was last seen in the Griffith revival of her chapter from " Intolerance," under the title of " The Mother and the Law." Her last work was in a series of Goldwyn productions, ending with " The Face in the Dark," " All Woman," and " Hidden Fires," which were shown at the Strand and Rialto in April, June, and November, 1918. Her new pictures will be distributed by Robertson-Cole, it is said.

As is generally known, Miss Marsh left the screen some time after her marriage to Louis Arms, a newspaper man, and for the last five months a little daughter has been commanding much of her time.

A combination of directors and producers quite as impressive as that of D. W. Griffith, Charlie Chaplin, Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford is reported from Los Angeles. The principals are Thomas H. Ince, George Loane Tucker, Maurice Tourneur, Marshall Neilan, Allan Dwan and Mack Sennett. These directors are about as well known as any six screen stars, which, incidentally, is evidence of the happily increasing tendency of the public to recognize the work of the man behind the camera as well as that of the player in front. Ince pictures, of course, as associated with the names of William S. Hart, Charles Ray, Enid Bennett, Dorothy Dalton, and now Douglas MacLean and Doris May, are among the most popular in the country. " The Miracle Man " is not thought of apart from Mr. Tucker, and Maurice Tourneur is widely known through " The Blue Bird," " Sporting Life," " Woman," " The White Heather," and " The Life Line." Among Mr. Neilan's recent works are " Three Men and a Girl," with Marguerite Clark; " The Unpardonable Sin," with Blanche Sweet; " Daddy Long Legs," with Mary Pickford, and " Her Kingdom of Dreams," with Anita Stewart. Allan Dwan was Douglas Fairbanks's director for " Mr. Fix-It," and " He Comes Up Smiling," and he was also responsible for " Cheating Cheaters," with Clara Kimball Young; " Sahara," with Louise Glaum, and " The Dark Star," with Marion Davies. Mack Sennett's bathing girls and slapstick comedians are known wherever there are screens.

Like the United Artists, the new combination will be some time in becoming an actual working organization because its principals are bound by contracts. Messrs. Ince, Tucker, Tourneur, and Sennett will not be released from Paramount-Artcraft affiliations until next Fall and Marshall Neilan will wind up his business with First National about the same time.

A supplementary report is that Adolph Zukor, president of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, is backing the combination financially. Each of the directors will produce independently, but their pictures will be distributed through the central organization.

On October 12, 1860, the Academy of Music, at Fourteenth Street and Irving Place, then in the recreational centre of the city, was the scene of a " diamond ball " at which the Prince of Wales, later King Edward VII, was the guest of honor. The building is now one of the William Fox houses, and Mr. Fox reports that the present Prince of Wales has accepted his invitation to visit the theatre when he comes to New York.

Oscar Hammerstein's opera house in London is to be used as a motion picture theatre, according to Otis E. Taylor, an American resident of London, who arrived in New York as a representative of Sir Oswald Stoll, a British picture producer. Mr. Taylor came here to observe American methods of exhibition, and is now making notes on what Hugo Riesenfeld does at the Rialto and Rivoli. He says that the shows in New York were much more elaborate and varied than any in London.

The Famous Players-Lasky Corporation has signed a contract with the Danish-American Film Company, Ltd., of Copenhagen, by which the latter will distribute Paramount - Artcraft pictures throughout Germany, Austria, Poland, Czechoslovakia, Serbia, Croatia, Rumania, and Bulgaria for at least one year with a minimum return to the American producers of $2,000,000, according to report. The contract is renewable.

Hobart Henley's production of " The Gay Old Dog," adapted by Mrs. Sidney Drew from Edna Ferber's story of the same name, with John Cumberland in the leading rôle, was shown last Monday to invited spectators at the Eltinge Theatre. It is a Pathé release.

Leroy Scott's " Partners of the Night " will provide the material for the first Eminent Authors picture to be made in the East. Paul Scardon, formerly of Vitagraph, will direct the production, with a cast selected by Mr. Scott, Rex Beach, and Robert B. McIntyre.

Steps are being taken by the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry to form a Post of the American Legion to which persons affiliated with the industry who served during the war will be eligible.

NOTICED AND NOTED.

THOMAS H. INCE might be termed an astronomer of the screen. It is reported that Miss Mackie of the Harvard Observatory recently discovered a new star in the course of a systematic search of photographic plates, and likewise Mr. Ince, either accidentally or according to his own system, has discovered two new stars through an examination of the photographic records of Douglas MacLean and Doris May. As Mr. Ince was the first director to feature William S. Hart, Sessue Hayakawa, Dorothy Dalton, Charles Ray and Enid Bennett, his latest discoveries but add to the constellation for which he is at least in part responsible.

It is doubtful, however, whether Mr. Ince's services as a maker of stars equal in value his mitigation of the evil of the screen subtitle. The present writer has often felt deeply grateful to Mr. Ince for what he has done to eliminate text from the screen and, when not dispensing with it altogether, to make its presence less objectionable. If Mr. Ince was not the first director to make subtitles harmonize with pictures as much as possible, he is certainly one of the most skillful at bringing about this harmony. Nearly all photoplays have what are called decorated or decorative subtitles, but in the Ince pictures, more than in any others, as a rule, the idea of each scene is expressed in the pictorial background of its subtitle. Sometimes the text is so accurately illustrated by some figure or scene on which it is superimposed that one seems to get an impression from the illustration rather than from the words, and the continuity of pictures is, in effect, unbroken—and this is essential if a photoplay is to be really a motion-picture.

Booth Tarkington, known first of all as a writer, and one who has just consented to work for the screen, appreciates the fact that the composition of a motion-picture story is not a matter of writing. " A constructor of pantomime designs, or moving-picture stories," he says, " should not be called a writer or author, I think. He does write to clarify his designs to the people who execute them, but writing is not at all his art and he has only an incidental need to know something about writing."

" In the three mediums, fiction, the play, and moving pictures, the imitations of life must all try to produce in the imagination of readers or audiences the illusion that not imitation but actual life is shown. Even in allegory and fantasy there must be a consistency in place of realism which makes the vision plausible at least for the moment.

" Now, I know nothing of the technique of pantomime or moving pictures except the one law common to the three mediums—that in order to produce an illusion of actuality, an imitative interpretation of life must be literal! And if you are showing an audience a section of life with which that audience is familiar, your truth to the subject must be absolute or you'll be caught lying. You can make your millionaires all silk-hatted villians to the happy satisfaction of a poor house audience; you can make Kit Carson say: ' My word!' for a London audience, but unlife-likeness can be successful only in proportion to the ignorance of the audience, and this ignorance is very unstable; it cannot be depended upon.

" If your subject happens to be boys, (at times,) you cannot depend upon any ignorances at all. Everybody in every audience is a boy or has a boy, or has been a boy or has married or is going to marry somebody who is a boy or has been a boy. Therefore, I have felt that it would be extremely unsafe not to make the designs of moving-picture interpretation of boys, which the Goldwyn Company is to produce, as life-like as possible."

PICTURE PLAYS AND PEOPLE.

D. W. GRIFFITH'S sixth, and last, Artcraft picture, " Scarlet Days," will be released this month, and the first of the three pictures which he will make for First National before taking up work for the United Artists' Corporation, is also about ready for exhibition, according to report. It is entitled " The Great Question," and is said to deal with " home life."

One by one the principals of the United Artists Corporation are getting ready to keep Douglas Fairbanks from becoming lonely as its sole active Artist. Mary Pickford is reported to have begun her first picture for the organization, a screen version of " Pollyanna," and promises to finish it as soon as she has attended to the more imperative matter of Mrs. Cora C. Wilkening's suit against her for fees alleged to be due for the negotiation of the contract under which Miss Pickford was an Artcraft star for a time. Mrs. Wilkening, it may be recalled, won a judgment of $108,000 against Miss Pickford which was set aside by the Appellate Division. Now the case is up for trial again in the Supreme Court, and the defendant has stopped studio work to come to New York to appear in her own behalf.

Charlie Chaplin, it seems, will be the last of the " Big Four " to join his associates. He is under contract to produce eight comedies for the First National Exhibitors Circuit, only three of which, " A Dog's Life," " Shoulder Arms," and " Sunnyside," have been delivered. According to report, three more, including one tentatively entitled " Paradise Alley," are in various stages of production, and the remaining two have not yet been started. Chaplin has reached the degree of independence which permits him to take his own time about turning out pictures, and apparently he is not rushing himself to complete his present contract.

Unlike fluid milk-it Keeps

KRYSTALAK
Better for cooking than fluid milk

Dr. Wiley of Good Housekeeping Institute endorses Krystalak and further says of dry milk: "The milk powder . . . apparently has lost none of its nutritive value and but little of its vitamin value."

FOR Krystalak is milk. Sweet, fresh, liquid, separated milk, dried by a special process into pure white sparkling flakes of sanitary nourishment. No preservatives—no chemicals—no adulterants. Just the pure, clean solids that go to make up nine-tenths of liquid milk—with the water and fat removed.

You need no ice to keep Krystalak. It never sours—it is ever ready—there on your pantry shelf for use today, tomorrow—next week or month.

Use it just as you would liquid milk. Four level tablespoons to a cup of water, or a cup full to a quart. Stir it for a second—it dissolves instantly—and there you have uniform, guaranteed sanitary skimmed milk—for any cooking purpose.

THE WEEK'S MUSIC

SOMEWHAT apart from a conventional music scheme is the American concert series opening this afternoon at the Manhattan Opera House, where Florence Hinkle and Reinald Werrenrath are the singing stars and Edward Morris the solo pianist. The program's latter half bars half dozen native composers, including Mrs. Beach, Otey Speaks, Deems Taylor, Arthur Penn, Felix Dayo's "American Humoresque," and Harry Spier's "Hymn to America."

The Symphony Society opens another series at Aeolian Hall this afternoon with Beethoven's Fifth Symphony, the rest of the program repeating last Thursday's event elsewhere, including Mendelssohn's violin concerto, with Albert Spalding, and Wagner's prelude and finale from "Tristan."

The Society of Friends of Music will open its seventh season today at the Ritz-Carlton, where Artur Bodanzky conducts an orchestra from the New Symphony and a chorus of women from the Metropolitan in Brahms's "Ave Maria" and Schubert's 23d Psalm, with other works of Mozart and Beethoven.

Sophie Braslau, the Metropolitan contralto, at Carnegie Hall this afternoon will sing airs of Handel and Beethoven, a group of folk-songs of seven nations, Sjeroff's "Rogneda," Rhea Silberta's "Jahrzeit," Dirk Fock's "Lindens," and Cadman's "The Moon Drops Low."

Greta Torpadie, soprano, at the Princess this afternoon, will sing airs of Caccini and Scarlatti, two Revolutionary melodies harmonized by Samuel Endicott, a Scandinavian group, some modern French, and manuscript songs by Samuel Barlow, Walter Golde, Kreisler, and Ornstein.

Alessandro Bonci, tenor of the Manhattan and now of the Chicago Opera, will reappear tonight in Carnegie Hall after an absence of five years, singing modern Italian, French and American songs, an air from Catalani's "Dejanire," and duets from "Manon" and "L'Elisir d'Amore" with Eleanor Brock.

John McCormick, at his hundredth concert in New York and tenth anniversary of his Manhattan début, tonight at the Hippodrome, will sing two airs of Handel, some Irish folksongs, and American songs by Arthur Whiting, Arthur Foote, Graham Peel, Charles Marshall, Edwin Schneider and H. T. Burleigh.

Kathryn Lee, a soprano from Maine who sang opera in Paris and Boston and did her bit in the army camps, will give her first recital tomorrow evening in Carnegie Hall, singing airs of Durante, Puccini, Marchesi, Leoncavallo Massenet, Rachmaninoff, Lerdo de Tejada and Ethelbert Nevin.

Doris Madden, an Australian pianist makes her first appearance in this country tomorrow evening at Aeolian Hall playing Schumann's "Carnival," some Chopin, Debussy and Scriabine, Liszt's "Venice and Naples," and arrangements by Tausig and Godowsky.

Ernest Hutcheson will play three of Beethoven's pianoforte concertos with an orchestra from the Symphony Society on Tuesday afternoon in Aeolian Hall the works chosen being Opus 37, in C minor; Opus 58, in G, and Opus 73, in E flat, the first two conducted by Willeke and the last by Damrosch.

The Philadelphia Orchestra will give the first of five concerts here in Carnegie Hall on Tuesday evening, when Leopold Stokowski will conduct Weber's "Freischuetz" overture, Beethoven's Seventh Symphony, Dvorsky's "The Haunted Castle," a novelty in New York, and Wagner's overture to "Rienzi."

Royal Dadmun, baritone, on Tuesday evening in Aeolian Hall will sing airs of Peri, Handel, Brahms, Cui, Moussorgsky, Faure, Fourdrain, and folksong arrangements by Mrs. Kennedy Fraser, Kenneth Macleod, and H. T. Burleigh.

Louise Hubbard, soprano, at an Aeolian début on Wednesday afternoon will sing Mozart's "Alleluia," Handel's "Skylark" arranged by A. Bunten, songs of Strauss, Franz, Henschel, Greig, Gounod, Chadwick, LaForge, and Spross.

Mayo Wadler's "modern program" on Wednesday evening in Carnegie Hall includes a violin sonata of Nicolaiew, a new "Ballade" by Kryjanowsky, pieces by Carl Busch, Cecil Burleigh, and Albert Stoessel, and several request numbers.

Walter Damrosch at the Symphony Society's matinée on Thursday in Carnegie Hall will produce four novelties, d'Indy's symphony "De Bello Gallico," Debussy's "Berceuse Heroique," Dupare's "Aux Etoiles," and Turina's "La Procession del Rocio," this last preceded by Schumann's pianoforte concerto in A minor, with Ossip Gabrilowitsch.

Flora Zygman, pianist, on Thursday afternoon in Aeolian Hall will play Beethoven's Sonata Op. 31, No. 2, and pieces by Tausig, Chevillard, Szymanowski, Borthiewicz, Rachmaninoff, MacDowell, and Chopin.

The Philharmonic Society will open its seventy-eighth season on Thursday evening in Carnegie Hall with Bernard Rogers's manuscript ode "To the Fallen," Brahms's second symphony, Wagner's prelude to "The Mastersinger," and Novaks "In the Tatra Mountains," by a young Czechoslovak compatriot of Conductor Josef Stransky.

Carolyn Cone Baldwin, pianist, at Aeolian Hall, on Thursday evening, will play Chopin's sonata, Op. 35, and works of Brahms, Busoni, Ravel, Debussy, MacDowell, Liadow, and Rubinstein.

Josef Stransky, at the Philharmonic matinée on Friday in Carnegie Hall, will present two symphonies, Beethoven's Eighth and Tschaikovsky's Fourth, between which is Brahms's double concerto for violin and 'cello, played by Alfred Megerlin and Leo Schulz.

Minna Kaufmann, soprano, will sing Beethoven's air, "Ah, Perfido," at her Aeolian matinée on Friday, with others of Handel, Sibella, Poldowski, Kjerulf, Dannstrom, Fox, Fairchild, and La Forge.

John Powell, pianist, on Friday evening, in Carnegie Hall, will play Schumann's C major Fantasie, Liszt's B minor sonata, a Schubert-Liszt march, and an "Impromptu" and "Ballade," by Daniel Gregory Mason.

Louis Cornell, pianist, who served in the army, will be heard Friday evening at Aeolian Hall in Liszt's B minor sonata, preludes of Chopin and Debussy, and pieces by Balakirew, Tausig, d'Albert, and Rudolph Ganz.

The Symphony Concerts for Young People open their twenty-second season next Saturday at Carnegie Hall with Beethoven's Second symphony, Debussy's "Berceuse Heroique," Liszt's Concerto in A, for Gabrilowitsch, and a march from Saint-Saëns's "Algerian Scenes."

Oliver Denton will play MacDowell's "Sonata Eroica" at the first of his three Aeolian recitals next Saturday afternoon, with other works of Beethoven, Schubert, Liszt and Chopin.

Helen Kanders, soprano, a Californian who has sung in opera at Strasbourg and Dresden, will appear Saturday evening at Carnegie Hall in Elvira's aria from "Don Giovanni," and songs of Brahms, Schubert, Dalcroze, Duparc, Sibelius, Elgar and Bantock.

Next Sunday's concerts include the Symphony Society at Aeolian Hall, Heifetz at Carnegie, Sam Stern at the Princess, Ysaye and Elman at the Hippodrome, and a Manhattan benefit for Beth David Hospital, with Anna Fitziu, Max Rosen, Leo Ornstein, and Cantor Kanewsky.

METROPOLITAN OPERA.

The Metropolitan Opera season's opening nights, one week away, have been announced, together with the fact that there has been a record-breaking subscription.

On Monday, Nov. 17, "Tosca" will be sung by Caruso, Farrar, and Scotti; Wednesday, "Aida," Muzio, Martinelli, and first appearances of Besanzoni, Zanelli, and Martino; Thursday, "Il Barbiere," Garrison, Hackett, Amato, Mardones, with Mme. Berat new; Friday, "Faust," Farrar, Martinelli, Rothier, with a new conductor, Albert Wolff; Saturday matinée, Halévy's "La Juive," Caruso, Ponselle, Rothier, and two newcomers, Evelyn Scotney and Orville Harrold; Saturday night, "Trovatore," Muzio, Kingston, Amato, and Jeanne Gordon, the seventh new artist to be heard in the opening week.

The company also will present "La Bohème," with Alda, Sundelius, Harrold, and Chalmers, on Tuesday, Nov. 18, at the Brooklyn Academy.

CHAMBER MUSIC PLANS.

Ernest Bloch's prize-winning suite for viola and piano, dedicated to Mrs. F. S. Coolidge, and produced at the recent Berkshire Chamber Music Festival, will be now to New York, at a concert of the Berkshire String Quartet in Aeolian Hall, on Nov. 18, when the assisting artists will be Emil Ferir and Harold Bauer. Mr. Kortschak and his associates will present Saint-Saëns's quartet, Op. 153, No. 2, in G major, for the first time here, and the quartet in A major, Op. 18, No. 3, of Beethoven.

The New York Trio, recently organized by Clarence Adler, pianist, with Scipione Guidi, violin, and Cornelius Van Vliet, 'cello, will give its first concert on Monday evening, Dec. 1, at Aeolian Hall. Included in its program is the first American performance of a "Fantasie" for these three instruments, by the English composer, John Ireland.

The Flonzaley Quartet will open its season with a subscription concert on Tuesday evening, Nov. 25, at Aeolian Hall.

The Russian Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Modest Altschuler, will start tomorrow on a five weeks' tour of cities in Pennsylvania, Ohio, the Virginias, Georgia, Alabama, and Tennessee. The soloist on the tour will be Sascha Votichenko.

The Orchestral Society, led by Max Jacobs, has announced its first subscription concert at Aeolian Hall on Nov. 23, when Mildred Dilling will be the soloist, in a fantasic for harp and orchestra by Dubois.

Teeth Do Not Stain

It is Film that Clouds Their Whiteness

Look in 10 Days

Note how the teeth glisten. You can see that the film is gone.

Learn the Cause of Decay

Dental science has now traced most tooth troubles to a film. To that slimy film which you can feel.

That is what discolors—not the teeth. It is the basis of tartar. It holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay.

The film is clinging. It enters crevices and stays. No ordinary tooth paste can dissolve it. A soapy tooth paste makes it more viscous.

So, despite your brushing, much film stays. Night and day it does its damage. It is the great tooth wrecker.

Science now has found a way to combat that film. The fact has been proved by many clinical tests. The method is now advocated by leading dentists everywhere.

For daily use it is embodied in a dentifrice called Pepsodent. And we are mailing 10-Day Tubes so that every home may try it.

Do This and See

We urge you for your own sake to write for this 10-Day Tube. See the results for yourself.

Pepsodent is based on pepsin, the digestant of albumin. The film is albuminous matter. The object of Pepsodent is to dissolve it, then to constantly combat it.

Pepsin must be activated, and science has discovered a harmless activating method. The usual method is an acid, harmful to the teeth, so pepsin long seemed impossible. Now everyone may apply it, morning, noon and night. And the evidence is that this invention brings a new dental era.

Send the coupon for a 10-Day Tube. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the slimy film. See how teeth whiten as the film disappears.

Compare results with the methods you use now. Then judge for yourself what is best. Cut out the coupon now.

BEST CLOSE-UP OF THE MOON

WHAT is regarded as the most striking photograph of the moon ever taken, and the best close-up view of that bleak, stark satellite, is reproduced today in the Pictorial Section of THE NEW YORK TIMES. It was made at the Mount Wilson Observatory in California by aid of the world's largest telescope which has a mirror 100 inches, or more than eight feet, in diameter. The lunar atlas of Professor Pickering is made on a scale of 100 miles to the inch, while this photograph of a portion of the moon's surface is on a scale of fifty miles to the inch.

Professor Charles Lane Poor, a well-known astronomer, and head of the Department of Celestial Mechanics at Columbia University, using the photograph as text, drew attention especially to the fineness of the detail which was due to the unusual illumination concentrated by means of the huge mirror.

"The importance of a telescope of such great size as the one at Mount Wilson," said he, "is its light gathering power. Its magnifying power, great as it is, is only of secondary importance. In the spectroscopic and photographic researches of today what the scientist wants is light, light, and yet more light. The pupil of the human eye is approximately one-fifth of an inch in diameter, and, applying a well-known rule, the mirror of the Mount Wilson telescope is capable of gathering 250,000 times more light than could be concentrated by mortal sight. The hundred-inch mirror collects 100 times as much light as does a ten-inch mirror, for we square the diameter, or fifteen times as much as the great Yerkes telescope, the largest ordinary telescope in the world.

"When one realizes that the faint light of a distant star must pass through a spectroscope and be spread out into a narrow band or spectrum before the scientist can begin his researches, one senses the importance of collecting as much light from that star as possible. As a gatherer of light this new mirror telescope is the most powerful instrument yet built, and from its use we may anticipate many important discoveries."

A study of the photograph in connection with the remarkable light effects of which Professor Poor speaks makes evident how much is revealed that would escape the camera in ordinary observations. The photograph of the entire moon on this scale would be about four feet in diameter. On the lower rim may be seen scores of the smaller craters, those evidences that once the moon was covered with volcanoes. Long sunset shadows are revealed, cast by the isolated peaks of the mountains of the moon on the left, and the shadows cast within the craters by the walls of these huge bowls can be plainly seen. The contrasts of light and shade are marked, as the craters are often two or three miles in depth, and make our earthly volcanoes seem like pigmies. Ever since the days of Galileo men have known something about the hills and valleys of the moon, but here they stand out in wonderful distinctness on the lunar surface.

The play of intensified light shows the crater of Copernicus at the right fifty-eight miles in diameter, and with the fine gradations of shadows about the lesser mountains. There is an exceptional clearness in the picture in the view of the lunar Apennines, the mountains which are high up and well to the left, and in those on the left and down from the centre the lunar Alps.

The largest of the craters just below the Apennines is Archimedes, and at the lower end of the Alps is old Plato. In the middle of the picture where there is a dark expan is a vast plain, which was called the Mare Imbrium by some of the early astronomers, who believed that there was actual water on the surface and conceived of the moon as made up of land and ocean. Galileo, who is usually credited with such a belief as this, had, however, apparently discerned even with his primitive telescope, which was without the mirror, that the moon was an arid waste.

Mount Wilson, in California, has long been identified with astronomical and physical research. Over thirty years ago its summit was selected by the late Professor S. P. Langley as a temporary station for the most delicate measurements of the solar spectrum. These calculations threw new light upon the character and the amount of the heat received from the sun. Those early researches revolutionized the method of observation and greatly modified the then accepted ideas regarding the solar light and heat.

After having been unoccupied for a number of years the site on Mount Wilson was again tenanted by Professor George E. Hale, who established there the present observatory, which he named from the height on which it stands. It was designed primarily for investigators of the physical and chemical constitution of the sun.

NATIONAL BLOUSE WEEK

Fashion Approves the Blouse

IN THE GRADUAL DEVELOPMENT of women's attire, the blouse in recent years has come to occupy a position of the utmost dignity. Once considered only a garment of utility, it is now so dainty and charming in its more elaborate forms that it is the foundation, rather than the incident, of a costume.

THE MODERN BLOUSE is an evolution of the shirt waist, a mannish design, first worn in England a quarter of a century ago, as an adjunct to the walking costume. Paris approved and elaborated the idea, at first in stiff styles to complete the tailleur suit, progressing from linens to the delicate silks, the gorgeous satins and the fine laces of to-day.

AMERICAN DESIGNERS have linked the superb artistry of Paris with the good taste of this country. Moderation of price naturally follows in the wake of big production. In the essentials of smart style, fine craftsmanship and durability, the American-made blouse is a creation that reflects the highest credit on those whose efforts have made it so universally popular.

NATIONAL BLOUSE WEEK
November 10th to 15th '19
"Remember the Date"

This Week, Blouse is Supreme

THIS IS NATIONAL BLOUSE WEEK. In 50,000 stores and shops from Boston Light to the Golden Gate the women of America will be afforded opportunities to inspect the latest models of American made blouses, and to select from more beautiful and more varied stocks than were ever before assembled in their home cities and towns.

THE DOMINANT IDEA in inaugurating National Blouse Week is to demonstrate that the American blouse is an established creation, a product second to none. The styles are created in this country, the fabrics come from American mills, the dyes are of American manufacture and equal to the best in the world.

THIS IS THE OPPORTUNITY for the women of the nation to become familiar with the wonderful work of American blouse designers and manufacturers. They will find models to suit every figure and complexion, and prices to suit every income.

TO BUY AT LEAST ONE American-made blouse this week will be an expression of good, healthy Americanism.

AMERICAN FEET AND FRENCH SHOES

The Short-Vamp Peril from Overseas in the Face of Comfort, Common Sense and Economy—The Glove Question

IF we are to use this reconstruction period of dress with reasonable foresight, then it seems we must adopt a new point of view toward the accepted coverings for our feet and hands. We shop for shoes and we find that things are no longer what they once were—that all of the standards have changed and that the cost is alarming. But the cost is the least of our troubles when we are threatened with a revolution in style as regards the footwear of the season. Shall our cherished and treasured pairs of shoes be relegated to the depths of the dark closet because fair fashion has decreed something quite different?

A wail comes from the women of America as soon as this possibility is suggested, for have they not owned, for years, the best-looking feet in the world and is this reputation won entirely by the inherited shapes of their national feet? No, the shoes provided by the shoemakers of the country have much to do with the case. Their shoes fit, and that is more than the shoes of any other country have any intention of doing. Then again, American women have grown accustomed to walking and this they could never do in the long-ago abandoned short vamp shoe.

For here is just where the rub comes in, and the fight is on between those who would keep the long vamp shoe as the height of style and those who would change it back again to the shorter, stubbier effect.

All over the world the shoes of the American women are famous. In other countries one hears the women say, with awe and respect in their tones, "I do wish I could buy an American pair of shoes." They like the long narrow appearance that an American-made shoe gives to even the fattest and shortest of feet. They like the trimness of the shoe that America has produced. And, above all, they like the durability and wearability of the American shoes, which keep their contour and their shape long after those made in other countries have gone the way of destruction. That is, we have a shoe here that will outlast and outclass any other known to man, and we have, at the same time, something which will allow our feet to develop in something like a normal manner.

Secret of the High Instep.

The high instep has, from time immemorial, been a thing to be striven for and envied. But a high instep, after all, is the result of a certain disuse of the feet. The women in countries where they take little exercise of any sort and do practically no walking have feet with abnormally high insteps. We in America who walk a great deal and whose ancestors were not averse in any way to standing upon their feet—we have, as a rule, rather lower insteps. This has little or nothing to do with the subject of shoes except that the long-vamp shoe is especially adapted to feet that do not rise into insteps too suddenly.

Now, the French women, for many reasons, have long worn and liked the short-vamp shoe. In the first place their feet are shaped so that they take more naturally to this sort of a model. They are wider as a rule and stubbier than most of the American women's feet. Then, during the war, it was necessary for the women of that country to do everything in their power to save leather along with many another commodity. One of the ways that they took for accomplishing this was to make a fetich of the short-vamp shoe, which takes less leather than most other styles of shoes. It saves as far as the leather is concerned, but it is hard on the feet, for the shoe of a French woman, after she has worn it but a short length of time, is full of humps and bulges, not only inside, but outside, and it is no longer a thing beautiful to look upon. The life of a shoe of that sort is short, and as for new soles—they cannot even be thought about.

The heels of the short-vamp shoes must necessarily be high. If they are not, then the shoes refuse to stay on the feet. They must have that height in order to push the foot into the toe of the shoe, and even this does not suffice to keep the shoe fastened securely. It must needs have a strap and a button or a ribbon and a bow fastening it over the instep if it is not to be left behind as its wearer hurries along the street.

But the soldiers who spent some of their war-holidays in Paris will tell you quite blandly that they loved the little bows on the feet of the French girls. What mattered it to them if the feet under the bows were humped and uncomfortable? And what did they know of the longing looks that these same French girls cast into the cases which displayed American footwear? They liked the little bows.

The Pull of Paris Fashions.

Now, along with the ending of the war and the return of the eyes of the world of fashion to Paris and Paris styles has come a tendency to imitate the women of Paris in the matter of shoes and slippers. But here is a place where the women of America must surely use their common sense even though it be in a matter of fashion, which, up to the present moment, has had very little to do with sense of any sort. American feet are certainly not suited to shoes of the short-vamp type. They cannot look their best when they are squeezed into things that have no relation to their natural outlines.

What is beauty anyway but a matter of the most perfectly suitable thing used in the most perfect way? And what is more suitable than the long, thin, well-fitting pump of the American woman? That pump stays on without any bows or straps. It displays the stocking to the best possible advantage and at the same time it allows the foot a chance to be itself.

The short vamped shoe has been worn in this country for many years past but it has never been considered really smart. It is sometimes used by women on the stage because it makes their feet look smaller at the angle from which they are viewed by the audience. Such shoes are also sold in specialty shops to accommodate women whose feet are shaped in this way. But they are not for the really American woman of a really American type, which we are now forced to admit does exist. She needs a shoe that is designed for the longness and thinness and muscular quality of her own particular feet. She has no extra time nor money to spend on the chiropodist, who in France does a thriving business.

Rage in Fifth Avenue.

A Fifth Avenue shoe dealer was interviewed on this important subject of existing and forthcoming styles in ladies' footwear. He went off into a rage when the short-vamped shoe was mentioned, for he explained that he wished to have his shoes retain their well-earned reputation for fit and general durability, which they could not possibly do if they changed their shapes to the impracticable short-vamped variety.

If women in America should decide now to adopt a totally new style of shoes they would run into all sorts of complications, which would add radically to the incidentals in the high cost of living. The lasts of all the shoes would have to undergo great changes, and this alone would add to the general cost of shoes, for it is the consumer who pays, not the man who makes the last.

Then there would be a wholesale readjustment when it comes to fitting the individual foot. The first last might not be the thing, nor the second one that was tried, and this fitting process would add considerably to the cost. However, the future looks hopeful to one who sees the American woman steadily rejecting the over-exaggerated hoop styles of skirts. That woman is asserting her independence, and while she looks on with much interest at the French styles which are presented for her delectation, she does not, as a rule, adopt the thing as her own to be worn to the exclusion of all other types and styles of dress. So, no doubt, it will be in this important matter of shoes and feet. She will indulge a little perhaps in the new fancy, but the day that her toes begin to pinch and cry out that they are cramped into Chinese postures she will fling aside the new shoes for those which she has found will stand the strain that she puts upon them.

By the way, the general tendency of leather to rise and rise in price does not show any immediate signs of abating. This, too, has much to do with the question of changing the styles of shoes. One longs to hold on to such shoes as are still wearable and presentable, and if the styles were to change radically the long left-overs would look anything but interesting in pursuing their way along the public highway.

While we are looking into this matter of leather accessories we naturally turn to the subject of gloves. Many are the horrors which, during the past war years, the American women have been asked to accept as coverings for their hands. The hardness and the unresisting quality of some of the gloves have been painful. Such boardlike effects as one was asked to slip over one's hands! And did they become soft with wearing? They most certainly did not. They grew harder and clumsier with age if such a thing were possible.

Mind Your Glove Buying.

Now, if one seeks and is diligent one can uncover gloves that are just a trifle thinner and better in quality. But one cannot go, as of old, and ask casually for a pair of gloves, expecting to be served with something that will be generally satisfactory. Unless the greatest zeal is displayed in demanding the best quality, one goes home with more of those hard-as-nails contraptions and, when wearing them, one is forced to keep one's hand static, as it were, in order to bear the weight at all.

As for the styles of gloves, they have, along with styles of sleeves, changed gradually but surely. Now it is the gauntlet glove and the mousquetaire glove that is all-fashionable, for the new sleeves call for accommodation and the matter cannot be accomplished with the older and shorter styles of gloves. When the sleeves are long they are very tight, (this is true also of coat sleeves that are not provided with fur cuffs,) and the gloves that are worn with them must wrinkle over the wrists in order to be termed smart.

Then so many of the afternoon frocks have short and shorter sleeves, and what good are these unless they are worn with long and ample gloves? The gloves meet the sleeves—almost—showing the gleam of a white arm between the spots where the two ends meet. Black and white kid gloves of this variety are very costly but they are extremely well made by manufacturers in this country and, if cared for, will last for some appreciable length of time. The French gloves, when they can be got, are still far superior to any American ones. And here is a place where we, the women of America, must plead with the manufacturers to improve their product so that we can cheerfully buy and wear the gloves which they put upon the market.

Street gloves of mocha and leather are also made in gauntlet fashion and are very fashionable when worn wrinkled over the coat sleeve. The suede ones are perhaps a little nicer to wear than those which are made of leather, though suede does not stand as much hard wear as does leather.

NOTES ON CURRENT ART

At the shop of Joseph P. McHugh & Son the exhibition room is given over by courtesy of the proprietor to a remarkably interesting collection of the peasant art of the Czechoslovak and Jugoslav craftsmen. The announcement of the exhibition by Marie Pantlova and Helen G. Smith, who have brought over posters, prints, embroideries, weavings, and other items gathered during several months spent in the new republics of Central Europe, is written with a pleasant informality and eagerness. "One of the amazing things of the Sunamer's experience," the writers say, "is that the peasants of these countries, both men and women, in the various fêtes and church celebrations that we visited wore once more the traditional costumes of richly embroidered linens as pictured by the Slovak artist Upkra." These costumes, of the greatest elaboration and beauty, are well represented in the exhibition and include a number of the brilliant headdresses. In all the work the strong bright colors are kept in harmonious relation and successfully avoid irudity. This is not the case with the pottery, which is included in the exhibition on account of the source of its inspiration, but hardly can be said to belong to it as it was painted in this country in imitation of the original wares.

The posters are numerous and have a character of design due to the fact that the artists think of them as important works of art and not as primarily announcements or advertisements. They are done by a society of artists for exhibition purposes and not for sale. Two that approach more closely the conventional art of the poster are those representing the freedom of Jugoslavia and the starting of the Czechoslovak Republic Oct. 28, 1918.

The beautiful execution of the embroidery and weaving should be noted and examples should be secured by museums and societies to keep up the standard of craftsmanship in this country, where there is so little chance to institute wholesome comparisons.

Daumier and Gavarni.

Lithographs by Daumier and Gavarni are on view until Nov. 15 at the Weyhe book shop. The former are filled with the beauty, the force, the knowledge, the kindliness, the fun, and the heroic satire of the greatest of social satirists. It is a class that buzz like gnats and sting like mosquitoes or wasps unless they are masters of art. It is easy to be impudent, but most difficult to be impressive as a satirist. Daumier never is less than impressive whether he fails in wit or not. Frequently the men who wrote his "legends" for him broke down in their task, but his task was to be an artist first and a critic afterward. It is not immensely amusing to show a Nadar "raising photography to the level of an art" in a balloon, but it is wonderful to be able to follow the diminishing grays of the receding city as Daumier does. It is nothing much to depict the grotesque modern human as the classic hero or heroine of Greek poetry, but how superbly drawn are the curves of their draperies, of their helmets, of their embonpoint, of the curling smoke of burning Troy. Daumier shows us a silly, toothless old man in a nightcap at a window watching a graceful lady crossing the lawn, and names his sketch "Regrets"—it is an absolutely commonplace trick, but any illustrator of today would give his expensive boots to be able to do one line of it. And he can read a lesson and point a moral when he chooses, and then he is thunderous.

Gavarni is more interested in little things. He draws charming interiors for his intimate scenes, he has an eye for studio properties and the costumes of women, he is casual and audacious, and would seem a very remarkable artist if you could pry him away from Daumier and let him be seen against some slighter background.

Competition Drawings for Herald Square Park.

A number of drawings illustrating schemes for the improvement of the small triangular park in Herald Square, submitted in the Municipal Art Society's contest, have been hung in the galleries of the Architectural League, 115 West Fifty-seventh Street, and the society invites a public inspection of them until Nov. 11 (exclusive of Sunday) from 10 A. M. to 5 P. M.

The competition, as will be remembered, carries with it three prizes offered by R. H. Macy & Co., and the design winning first prize will be carried out if deemed satisfactory by the jury of award.

The jury of award, of which William Emerson is Chairman, includes Henry Bacon, A. Stirling Calder, George B. de Geradoff, Robert D. Kohn, Carl P. Pfeiffer, and Jesse I. Straus.

Spanish Scenes.

William Sanger worked in Spain during the war and managed to do about forty paintings of Spanish subjects that are now on view at the Touchstone Galleries. He works seriously in a modern rather than "modernist" manner, paying attention to his volumes of color, but by no means disdaining recognizable portraiture of such interesting places as the Fountain of Fuencesa at Cordoba, the old bell tower, and the market, or the Ruins of Santo Domingo, Pontevedra, or the City of Vigo. His picture of the rococo monument at Cordoba, with its strange Spanish version of Louis XV. sentiment, is particularly interesting, and all his architectural subjects strike an authentic note. His color is steely and harsh, apparently true to the spirit of the country, and there is strength in his association of lines.

BAMBERGER'S OF NEWARK
One of America's Great Stores

The Bamberger Store Chooses Early November to Inaugurate Mid-Winter Fashions

Tomorrow will you find, in every one of our great divisions devoted to millinery, garments and accessories, fascinating and ultra correct displays of fashions for the season now approaching.

ONCE more is Bamberger's first.

Once more does this great store, not content with merely being abreast of the procession, step forward and justify its ability to lead.

This latest manifestation of leadership is a comprehensive, very complete assemblage of Fashion's most interesting models for mid-winter—ready for your choosing almost before your desires have become definite.

A direct demonstration of our belief that fashion interpretation and service do not consist only in supplying demand, but by careful study and research, determining what that demand is going to be and providing for it ahead of its time.

Beauty—exclusiveness—individuality—distinction—fashion accuracy—the qualities which women with a finer taste in dress are ever seeking—are embodied in this presentation.

Frocks for daytime wear—dinner costumes—evening gowns—opera wraps—great daytime coats in soft, smart wools, lavishly fur-trimmed—tailored suits—suits for dress—rich, luxurious fur coats and small furs—the newest blouses—

And—crowning all—a formal presentation of beautiful fur hats specially designed to accompany fur coats and coatees and the smarter winter costumes in cloth and velvet. Developed in genuine moleskin, nutria, Hudson seal (dyed muskrat) and squirrel, combined in delightful ways with metal tissues, brocades, panne velvet and soft ribbons and trimmed with the clever simplicity that only a milliner who is an artist can give.

CITY ELECTION

street, in the campaign during the six days of registration, when approximately three men came out and registered to each woman that qualified for the right to vote.

Then there is a theory that the failure of President Wilson to compel the incorporation in the League of Nations covenant of a provision for Irish freedom was responsible, and that the Irish element among the voters, the backbone of Tammany's and its allies' strength in this city, cut the Tammany candidates in Manhattan and the candidates of Tammany's allies in other boroughs, and in most instances voted the straight Republican ticket. Were the returns in districts where the Irish element is dominant or strong would indicate that there was some truth in the taunting post-election assertion of Major Michael A. Kelly, the Irish freedom candidate, whose name was eliminated from the ballot under instructions from Tammany Hall, that the Irish voters not only supplied Tammany's coffin but nailed down the lid.

The belief that the turning down of Justice Newburger or general dissatisfaction with Tammany Hall was responsible for the result is not wholly convincing, say the campaign managers, for the Democratic disaster extended to the boroughs where Justice Newburger's name did not appear on the ballot and where a vote against the Democratic candidates could hardly be interpreted as a blow at Tammany Hall.

One factor that undoubtedly contributed to the loosening of Tammany's grip on the voters was the fact that there were fewer jobs not in the competitive class, and that jobs in the city service no longer were as attractive as they used to be before the wages in private employment began to soar. City jobs today, if department heads are to be believed, go begging. There are in some offices more resignations than applications. And the hope of patronage in Tammany, as in other political organizations, was formerly a mighty spur to effort in the interest of victory at the polls.

Tuesday's victory, as observers of long experience in politics view it, has little definite bearing on the future. It comes fraught with no promise of permanency, for Tammany has not been crushed. Murphy not deemed to political exile. But it may mean the end of Fusion and the building up of a strong Republican organization in this city. Instead of forming a mere nucleus for an anti-Tammany fight, the Republican Party is expected to be a militant force, always on a war footing and ready to grapple with Tammany, without resorting to such extra-political and unwieldy agencies as the late Fusion Committee which made such a tragic failure in 1917 out of its attempt to re-elect one of the most worthy and forward-looking mayors that [illegible] in its service.

There was talk of such a ticket before the prompt campaign between [illegible] it was abandoned because the [illegible] regarded it as hopeless. The victory won by three Republican candidates in Tammany's own stronghold, and the circumstances under which their victory was won, will, in the opinion of many Republicans who are eager for the change, restore the party leaders' self-sufficient confidence to lead, instead of to being up the fence, in the fall campaign for the election of an anti-Tammany municipal ticket.

ASSEMBLYMAN MISS SMITH

politics, whenever she comes down from Albany. Clubhouses, theatres, and all manner of places have been opened to her already for this purpose. As the district is so large and the population so varied, she expects to meet her constituency in groups. Already she has started a card index of the voters, arranged according to occupation. It's a measure should come up, which she thinks may be of special interest to those in any calling, she will send out circular letters or postal cards asking them for an expression of their wishes in the matter. Thus the physicians or the dentists or the grocers will all be looked after.

The Horace Mann School has given to Miss Smith a reason for absence to attend to her legislative duties, but she will still keep up her work with that institution, part of her duties being taken over by assistants.

One of the first subjects to which Miss Smith will address herself when she gets to Albany will be the matter of rents.

"As a resident of this district," said she yesterday, "I consider it a duty to ask what can be done about rent profiteering. One of the greatest evils of the day is the hostile feeling existing between the real owners and the tenants of apartment houses, and who raises the rent merely for the sake of his own greed. Doubtless some method can be devised by which a legal percentage of the assessed value of the house and the land will serve as a fair rental. That is an important question to the people of Harlem, indeed of the whole city, and in taking it up I am willing to bear from my constituents. Surely a system of subsidies could be worked out, but surely some solution must be reached."

Miss Smith will also take up the question of the minimum wage, not merely for women, but for men as well. She believes that the men should be looked after as much as are the women. Especially is she determined to see that teachers get more pay, for although there has been a slight increase, probably 10 or 15 per cent., the educators, in her opinion, have not been able in any way to keep pace with the advanced cost of living.

"I have been asked for my views on prohibition," said Miss Smith. "All that I can say now is that if it becomes an issue, I believe in laying it before the people for a referendum vote. I shall be guided by my constituency."

Whether she is in favor of wartime or permanent prohibition or not, Miss Smith has no half-way opinion on the subject of having a job for every returned soldier, whether disabled or able. She does not believe that nearly enough is being done for the men who fought to make the world safe for democracy.

It is early, however, to predict the political course of Miss Margaret L. Smith, who, with the exception of Mrs. Gillette of Schenectady, will be the only woman member of the Legislature, since it was ordained that Mrs. Mary M. Lily should retire to private life and a lucrative law practice. Miss Smith says that she has no political aspirations whatever at this date, and also no qualms about making her maiden speech at Albany, if she should find anything on which she felt it her duty to talk. Just now she has one thought and one ideal—service.

FLOATING WAREHOUSES.

A $10,000,000 company to operate floating warehouses is being floated in Japan. About 250,000 tons of wooden ships of over 500 tons each were constructed in Japan during the war. Many were made in such haste, to take advantage of the war boom, that they sprang leaks on their maiden voyages and marine insurance companies refused to write policies on some of them.

The great shortage of warehouse space on land has caused a plan to use the ships as floating warehouses in the harbors of Yokohama, Kobe, and Osaka.

Presenting

Lerner Blouse Shops

A change in name accentuated by a wonderful display during National Blouse Week

THE chain of artistic blouse shops which have become so popular under the name of Adler will in the future be known as the Lerner Blouse Shops, thus linking in name as well as in fact the retail and wholesale ends of the world's greatest blouse organization.

THERE ARE NOW TWENTY-THREE LERNER BLOUSE SHOPS IN OPERATION

Through the Lerner Blouse Shops a wonderful assemblage of blouses, always in the latest mode through frequent additions, is available. The price range is so wide that every income, however modest or large, will find suitable models, in which style and value are predominant.

The Lerner Blouse Shops inaugurate a new era. By the use of the Lerner Visible System of plate glass wardrobes Lerner Blouses are displayed in all their original crispness and spotlessness. A customer merely names her size, the saleswoman slides back a glass door, and a nickel-plated rack is pulled out. Before her hangs every model, each on its individual hanger, the barest touch being sufficient to reveal every detail of style, trimming and finish. The prices are all in plain figures, so that absolute comparison is instantly possible.

A Sale Unique to Mark the Change of Name

Three Exquisite Blouses at Unusually Attractive Prices

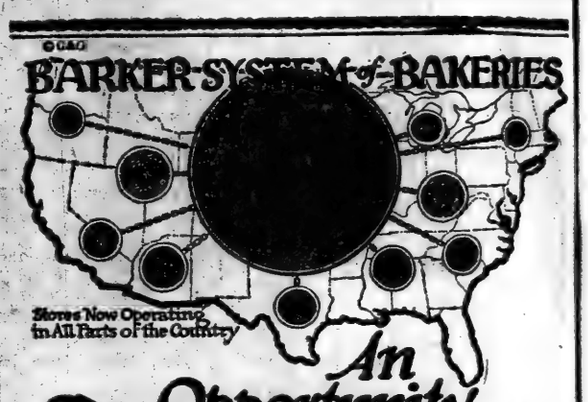
BARKER SYSTEM of BAKERIES



An Opportunity

FOR LIVE-WIRE BUSINESS MEN WITH $5000 OR MORE CAPITAL TO CONNECT WITH A SUCCESSFUL COUNTRY-WIDE CHAIN ORGANIZATION

WE are the only company in our field successfully operating its own chain of stores extending from coast to coast.

While we originally planned to operate all of our own stores we find we can never hope to cover the entire country within a reasonable length of time by this method.

Consequently, we are putting others in the business in certain locations where we find it advantageous. This opens up a wonderful opportunity for some live wire business men or women to connect up with an already established chain of stores, most of which are netting from $500.00 to over $2,000.00 per month—to gain the advantage and prestige of a well known name—a million dollar corporation—and the chance to operate your own chain of stores.

Practical business experience alone is necessary—for we can furnish the closest co-operation.

You no doubt have already seen the remarkable business our stores in this locality are doing, but in case you have not, by all means visit one today and see for yourself. If you do not happen to know the location, we will gladly supply it. If you are interested in this proposition, get in touch with us immediately.

Buying Fish by Mail

BUYING fish by mail is simply the working out of the old principle that "a straight line is the shortest distance between two points." And in this case, the "straight line" way—the direct way—is the easy, safe and satisfactory way. It's the way that insures freshness and flavor in your fish that is unobtainable otherwise.

Ever since that day, back in the early "eighties," when I sent out my first pail of mackerel, I've kept this one thought firmly in mind: "My fish must always be better than folks can buy in their local stores or I can't hope to sell it." The fish which your dealer offers are simply what he can buy from the middleman. He is too far from the source of supply to obtain selected grades of fish. I am right on the ground—I get the first choice of the best catches—clean and pack everything, fresh from the ocean, in the most sanitary and best equipped building possible to build. Then it is shipped direct to you.

No matter where you live, you can have from me, for your home table, just as good fish as we folks here on the seashore enjoy. I take all the risk of pleasing you—everything is sent subject to your complete approval—if you are not fully satisfied your money will be refunded without question. That my fish must satisfy and that my way of doing business must please is shown by the way this business has steadily grown, I now serve over 100,000 families in all parts of the country. Now is the time to send us your order and prove for yourself what a splendid treat Davis sea food will be for you and your family.

FRANK E. DAVIS,
President and Founder.

Salmon Mackerel—

The Davis Kind

Make the Best Fish Meal Ever!

With the cool weather here we advise you to buy some of your Fall supply of mackerel now. Fall fish are always the best—they are fat, thick and well meated; the fat running through the entire fish makes them tender and well flavored.

The Spring and Summer catch (while much cheaper) are poor, lank fish, which it is almost impossible to freshen, and, consequently, are dry and tasteless.

We have some of the fat Fall fish which we advise you to buy now, the larger sizes being especially desirable. If you think them too large, halve one lengthwise, which will be sufficient for several persons and you will find it good value, being even richer than the small fish.

The sizes and prices follow. Order at least part of your Fall and Winter supply now.

AN OPEN SHOP, WITH THE LABOR UNIONS STILL FRIENDLY

Extraordinary Contentment in Shoe Manufacturing Plant Where Organizers Have Failed After Having Free Opportunity to Unionize 13,000 Workers—How the Golden Rule Is Made to Pay

By WILLIAM L. CHENERY.

WHEN a Socialist leader, a labor union business agent, and a manufacturer—all honest, public-spirited, and intelligent men—agree that trade unionism offers no advantages to the workers in a great industrial establishment, a rare phenomenon is at hand. In this age industrial lambs and lions are not accustomed to lie down together in safety or in peace.

Yet such a situation seems to exist in the plants of the Endicott-Johnson Shoe Company. There, at least, prosperity appears to be so widely distributed, goodwill seems to be so general, the life of the community seems so rich in interest, that both labor organizers and Socialist proselytizers find the field unfertile to their doctrines. Accredited labor leaders and Socialists express the frank and friendly opinion that in the present state of the world there is work more important for them than the organization of the shoemakers of Johnson City and of Endicott into unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, or than the conversion of these workers to the tenets of socialism.

An attempt to seek an answer in experience to the question whether the recognition of collective bargaining would entail the closed shop resulted in the discovery of the remarkable situation in these shoemaking towns near Binghamton, N. Y. The President's Industrial Conference foundered in disagreement over the solution of that problem. A majority of the employers' group voted the opinion that in the long run the recognition of the right of workers to be represented by spokesmen of their own choosing meant trade unionism. This, in turn, the employers insisted inevitably brought in the closed shop.

No Unions, but No Discrimination.

In the President's conference H. B. Endicott, President of a shoe manufacturing corporation, was a leader among those who favored the national recognition of the right of workers to organize. He stated that his own corporation was not unionized, although no discrimination against union members was practiced. Because of this singular advocacy of the principle of collective bargaining by the President of an unorganized concern an examination of conditions in his plants seemed pertinent.

First of all, had the willingness of the Endicott-Johnson Company to employ union members eventuated in the actual, though unadvertised, establishment of the closed shop? Or, if the open shop still obtained, was the assertion that union members were employed actually borne out by the policies followed by superintendents and foremen? Again, if both the open shop and the employment of unionists were found, it would be enlightening to scrutinize the history of the company to see if these alleged contradictory conditions had been maintained at the cost of constant warfare. Finally, if industrial peace was found in an open shop which freely employed unionists, what was the secret of so significant a situation?

The secret, as it was told me, is the story of an interesting character, George F. Johnson, general manager and actual director of the enterprise from its inception. To Mr. Johnson's genius Mr. Endicott attributes the labor policies which have been the background of this generation of industrial peace and goodwill. In this opinion Mr. Endicott seems to be backed by the entire community. The formula of peace, however, is ancient, though difficult to practice. It is nothing less than an application of the Golden Rule. That has the highest sanction, but in detail it has not been deemed practical by many.

The Golden Rule Experiment.

George F. Johnson thought the Golden Rule would work in the shoe business. The result is that he and his associates who supported his experiment took a small factory in financial straits and made of it the largest enterprise of its kind in the world. But before reporting the particulars of the manufacturer's rendition of the historic rule of doing as one would be done by, it is worth while to hear the testimony of those who might normally be expected to be the most severe critics of the situation.

With the idea of finding the weak points in the Endicott-Johnson industrial situation I went to the offices of the Central Labor Union in Binghamton. There I found Jerry Ryan, who for sixteen years had been the business agent of thirty-four labor unions in his community. I asked Mr. Ryan if he as a trade unionist was satisfied with conditions in the Endicott-Johnson Company. He said:

"The company is, of course, not organized, but they do not discriminate against members of the union. I can see George F. Johnson or Harry L. Johnson at any time when I have business with them. In their building operations they usually let contracts to firms fair to organized labor. Always in the building trades some union men are employed.

"The shoemakers as a whole are not organized. There may be some union members among them. The point is that the company is carrying out a labor ideal of its own, and I say it is a good ideal. I say it is a good ideal because their workers are satisfied. If they are satisfied, why should I molest them? If there was a healthy sentiment among the shoe workers for organization, of course it would be my business to organize them. But there is not. They don't want to be organized.

"The fact is that if any worker has a grievance he can always get to George F. Johnson or to one of the members of the firm. That is understood. If a man has trouble with a foreman, he knows he can get a hearing with George F. Johnson. That prevents trouble. No matter what your business is, he will always listen to you. To show you what the spirit is, you should have seen the Labor Day parade a year ago. It was organized labor's parade, but the shoemakers of Johnson City and Endicott marched, and George F. Johnson led the way."

Mr. Ryan's estimate I found to be that of the organizer for the United Leather Workers' International Union. After Mr. Endicott supported collective bargaining in the President's Industrial Conference, it seems, the international union decided the time was ripe to organize the Endicott-Johnson Company. A general organizer arrived in Binghampton on Oct. 22. He went to the plant and was taken through by one of the officers. After putting in some time investigating conditions, he remarked that he could serve the shoemakers better by organizing in other fields. He departed.

Even, however, when trade unionists find wages and hours and conditions of labor so satisfactory that their organization principles proffer nothing better, hostile criticism usually can be had from Socialists, for their view regards the entire social order as unsound. Therefore, I sought the Socialist candidate for Mayor, Arthur G. Breckinridge, a member of the Typographical Union, a graduate of Cornell, and a convinced Socialist of many years' experience.

Mr. Breckinridge, who suggests the Southern Colonel rather than a Socialist politician, I found working for the paper in opposition to that one owned by George F. Johnson. Both on account of his social philosophy and by reason of his business affiliation, accordingly, he would have been the expected critic of the industrial policy of an unorganized factory. But he took the same position as that assumed by the business agent of the Central Labor Union, saying:

"The policy of the Endicott-Johnson Company has developed into something so far ahead of what the unions would demand that they have never been able to get a footing. For years Binghamton has been known as a low wage town. But when the Endicott-Johnson Company began to make money they began to raise wages and to improve conditions.

"It has not helped the Socialist Party. There is little radical sentiment in this community. Under improving conditions it is hard to make converts to socialism. While Socialists like what Endicott and Johnson have done, it has not helped our cause. I know many of their employes who are getting $40 to $45 a week, and I assume that the average must be around $25 and $30.

"The only quarrel which I as a radical have is that the management is doing from a benevolent feeling things which the community ought to be able to do for itself. They have never had a strike nor any industrial trouble. Some of the members of the firm are building houses to rent at about cost to their employes, and in many ways their public spirit is shown. All the workers get two weeks' vacation with pay, and lately the company has begun to give pay on the legal holidays. I think that is going pretty far for a piecework concern."

G. F. Johnson's Own Story.

Such was the testimony of the chief candidate of the Socialist Party in Binghamton, himself a veteran radical and a man of culture and breadth. Since the cities are so approving, it is, moreover, interesting to get the story of this industrial development from the man primarily responsible for it. In his office at Endicott, George F. Johnson is to be found. Mr. Johnson began life as a shoemaker. As a young man he was a "hand" in the small factory which later became the basis of the Endicott-Johnson establishment. When the original company was in financial difficulty and Mr. Endicott as a principal creditor tried to salvage it, his present partner was a foreman. Since he got the chance to manage a small shop just retrieved from failure, Mr. Johnson has continued on the job until the present. The industrial policy which characterizes his management is a product of his memory of the days when he was himself an artisan. He says he has tested his plans by trying to realize how they would impress him were he still an operative at the bench.

No formal system of management has been adopted. There are no shop committees, no works councils. None of the ordinary devices of the newer efficiency plans are visible. So far as collective bargaining, either by trade unions or by company unions, is concerned, the shoe company is simply undeveloped. The method of management is the simple form characteristic of the time when the shoemaker and his half dozen assistants and apprentices composed the entire factory. By skillfully distributing routine Mr. Johnson appears successfully to have retained the journeyman's attitude toward the members of his working family. And there are 13,000 members of that family!

"Our only plan is to try to get the point of view of the man affected by any decision we are making," said Mr. Johnson in summarizing his policies. "We try to imagine what we would like to have done were we in their position. The business is being run—with one exception—by people who worked at the bench. It was built by shoemakers and tanners. For that reason it should be possible for us to see things as a workingman sees them.

"We are not organized, but I am no enemy of union labor. If I had been at Washington in the President's Industrial Conference I would have liked to vote for a resolution on collective bargaining that ran as follows:

"'The right of workers to organize and choose their own leaders is absolute and perfect, just as the right of the manufacturers to organize and choose their own leaders is absolute and perfect.'

Policy of Mutual Understanding.

"The difficulty is that rival camps are organized to force their wills. We work on the principle that a bargain must be mutually satisfactory. Adjustments with individuals and groups are going on constantly. Occasionally, in fixing wages which are not as high as I would like to see them, my brother will say to a group, 'You name a figure and I will take it.' Sometimes one of the crowd suggests something too high. Others at once say, 'That isn't fair.' And they force him to name a just rate. That is good-will and that is what I mean when I say that collective bargaining is not necessary in our plants.

"There is just one way of controlling labor, and that is by good-will. The employer cannot control by direct authority. Neither can the labor leader. Look at the insurrection going on in the ranks of the unions. The officials are helpless. But good-will does control. You can bank on that.

"Don't think that we have gone in for welfare work and that kind of thing. You can't do the American workman a favor in that spirit. You cannot patronize him. He won't tolerate it. He ought not to. Any one who wants to understand the workingman has only to consider himself. What he wants the workingman wants, too. Nothing makes one so sore as the kind of patronizing which treats labor as something different from a manager.

"We have never had a strike here. I do not think that we ever will. I do not mean that we have no malcontents. What I mean is that our relations with employes are like our relations with our customers. We try every reasonable method of settlement before we lose a customer, and we try everything before we break with a worker. No man can be fired outright. He can be suspended and later have a chance to defend himself, but he cannot be peremptorily dismissed.

If There Should Be a Strike—

"Now, if things ever got to such an extremity that we had a strike, it would mean that we had exhausted every resource at our command. For my part I would be willing to say, 'I have done the best I can for you; now you run the business and see if you can do better.' But we operate on the square-deal plan. All of the better positions in this company are filled by promoting men from the ranks. By virtue of that policy there are hundreds in this organization who have faith in the system we have developed. I do not believe that when I and my immediate associates have gone the system will be changed. The success of the company and the prosperity of the community were built on the foundation of justice. Too many men in the company understand that to make a breakdown possible."

Mr. Johnson expressed a distate for elaborated welfare work, and he mentioned his hope that wages might be increased. But already Johnson City and Endicott, twin "satellites" of Binghamton, are interesting and pleasant places in which to live. The valley of the Susquehanna is charming country, and the builders of the industrial cities have taken advantage of the location. Houses occupied by the workers are dignified and spacious. They are of the type and scale ordinarily occupied by professors in small town colleges and universities. Slums do not exist. The so-called foreign colonies are relatively well housed.

In the three towns, Binghamton, Johnson City, and Endicott, curious personal relationships have grown up. There are numerous members of the Johnson family in the shoe corporation. The senior in the business and in the community is known always and by all as "George F." The sobriquet has become the symbol of the social and industrial implications of the company in the Susquehanna Valley. The term "George F." embodies the meaning of the organization to the people of the region. If you stop a man in the street and engage in a casual conversation, George F. is likely to be mentioned. For the shoemaker-manufacturer has many interests. Among other things he is a baseball fan, and when the recent world series was in progress he was one of the staff of correspondents of The Binghamton Morning Sun, which he owns. And in his home town they say that his stories had as many readers as the best of the literature of the great game were able to attract.

With George F., who, if his hair were gray instead of an Irish red, would be called "the old man," (not, however, because of his age,) stand others distinguished in part by their middle initials. Harry L., for example, is the younger brother of George F., and himself the manager of the Johnson City plants. Then there is George W., son and understudy of George F., and finally Walter, another son. George W. and Harry L. are building houses to sell and to rent at cost to the people of the industrial cities. Their only purpose, so far as I have been able to discover, is to do a decent human thing at a time when housing generally is scarce and costly. The "boys," George W. and Walter, indulge mild passions for horse racing. Around the football field at Endicott a half-mile track is laid out, and close by are the stables. On a Saturday afternoon the pacers and the trotters are brought out to perform for the diversion of valley and whoever along the Susquehanna has a horse which wants exercise can have it in plenty.

In this and in other ways a flavor suggestive of the squire of country life hangs about the great shoe concern. An existence of such a sort would not, of course, be possible in a populous city. Industry has to go to the country before it can find the space for such things. But a spirit is there which can be expressed anywhere and which has its value under all circumstances. That spirit is seen instantly when with the negligée of friendship the Johnsons are found to resolve themselves into a series of initiated Christian names.

One of the tests of the actual well-being of a community is the state of the health of its children. Taking the United States as a whole, scientists estimate that one-fifth of the school children are handicapped by underfeeding. I asked Professor H. H. Crump, Superintendent of Schools in Endicott and Union, how the children of the factories measured up to this criterion. He reported that last year out of 2,500 children only eight were found by the medical examiners to be suffering from malnutrition. Which should indicate that hunger at least does not haunt the valley of the Susquehanna.

In many ways the shoe cities are interesting places in which to live. Recreation facilities have been highly developed. Outdoor and indoor sports have been made possible. Horse racing is fostered. Swimming pools and tennis courts are available to all. Quite wonderful lunches are served in company dining rooms to the entire community. The hungriest may eat his fill for 15 cents.

New additions are in prospect, and even more generous plans are in the making. High on the hills overlooking the Susquehanna near the old town of Union a garden city is being considered. There many plots will be an acre in size. On each acre farm, as Mr. Johnson terms it, are to be built a bungalow and a garage. These plans are being made for shoemakers, not for foremen or officials. Only out on the Pacific Coast, where co-operation and municipal enterprise are more daring, does one find such developments in this country.

But the question recurs: "Is it democratic?" The veteran Socialist, a longtime advocate of economic democracy, found it good, if not socialistic. I suspect it is as apt as any other wholesome condition to build safely for the Republic. The statement of George W. Johnson, son of the co-founder and himself a manager of the enterprise, is significant. He pointed to a swimming pool and a neighboring athletic field: "These things produce a fine race. The coming generation is marvelous from the physical point of view, and they make good workers. It is right that these things should be provided. But don't forget, it pays, it pays."

Friendly Relations with Unions.

That is a sound and honest view. Then, when brought face to face with the problem of the control of industry, the present management is unflinching. For example, after the general organizer of the United Leather Workers' International Union visited the factories near Binghamton, George F. Johnson wrote to him in part as follows:

"We have tried to do as much as the men could in reason ask for even though they had a union organized to enforce their demands. We want to do all we can to improve our working conditions—which means increasing wages—and in every way improving all conditions affecting employes. I think our wages are better than union men draw elsewhere, and we have been able through a good organization to help the living costs in many ways. You made a wise decision when you decided (as I understand you did) that you could not do us very much good by remaining here and trying to organize the tanneries; that you felt that you had places to work where you could do some good and that was the place for you to work. Now, this has been exactly my attitude toward union labor for the last twenty years. Believing that unions have a big place in the industrial life of the people—acknowledging the obligation of the working people, organized and unorganized, to the unions which have done so much to improve wages and conditions—I still feel that there are local conditions very favorable to our industry as a whole and which would not be benefited by any attempt to unionize the plants.

"I would like to have you, at your convenience, reply to this letter, frankly giving me your impressions with respect to the situation and the needs of labor in this locality as you found it upon your brief visit here."

Not much hostility to organized labor or to the aspirations of trade unionists is breathed in that communication. It seems to be characteristic. With no enmity or prejudice against organized labor as such, the company appears to have been seeking, both because it was right and because it paid, much the same goal as that sought by the trade unionists. Relatively high wages, short hours, effectual remedies for irritations and injustices, with a wholesome working and living environment—what more has the labor movement sought in this country? Power, perhaps! Promotions from the ranks have probably supplied this want at Binghamton. Thus the company has managed to keep ahead of the procession. So George F. Johnson, expressing discontent with the wages his company feels able to pay, at the same time handles sanely the general situation, saying: "We sometimes talk of overproduction, but our greatest trouble is underconsumption. The larger percentage of the human family secures less than they need. Were it possible for them to secure what they really need for their comfortable and happy existence we would hear mighty little about overproduction. We are prone to assume that all are well supplied. This is a great error."

Causes of Labor Troubles.

Concerning the responsibility for present industrial conditions, Mr. Johnson has this to say:

"Labor has not had a fair chance. Capital has been selfish and arrogant and is to blame for present conditions absolutely."

But he added:

"Today labor is quite as insistent and disposed to 'crowd' quite as unreasonably—inclined to throw off 'reasonable control,' disposed to cancel obligations and existing contracts as capital in the old days when capital, feeling power, was disposed to use it unwisely. Now what is the difference in the results, whether capital is unfair, arbitrary, unreasonable, and brutal, or whether labor is unfair, unreasonable, and brutal?

"What does labor expect? Can labor overnight correct all the abuses and wrongs to which it is subject? Should not labor be willing to give employers a chance to adjust to rapidly changing conditions whereby labor tends to become a more equal partner with capital in the profits of industry? Shall labor make the same mistake capital has made?

"May labor and capital work together in harmony? The answer is 'yes,' provided each will take a fair share of the responsibility; provided labor is willing to give capital a square deal, as capital is expected and ought to be willing to give labor a square deal. The antidote for radicalism in America is the American worker. It needs but the introduction of the square deal in industry to guarantee our future."

Such is the conversation of the man responsible for the active direction of the largest shoe factory in the world. There is industrial peace at Binghamton and general good feeling between the classes. Trade unionists refer pleasantly to the Chamber of Commerce, and radicals acknowledge the benefits brought by the manager of an unorganized factory. The assets are substantial. Real wages, comfortable homes, an interesting social life, industrial organization whose purpose is justice—these are actual advantages which weigh heavily with the average man.

At Binghamton they have proved that the willingness to employ union members does not inevitably result in a closed shop. They have shown that unionism is only one method of reaching or of seeking a desired goal, and that where real progress is made unionism gets no headway. This at any rate is the conclusion of a quarter of a century. Who will may have the secret. It is neither patented nor copyrighted. But it is hard. It is, "Get the other man's view and do as you would have him do toward you"—as the King James version has it. Nothing is more difficult. To the extent it is possessed by the managers of a great employing company, to that extent another road to industrial peace has been surveyed. But human nature being what it is on the average, this road will scarcely be crowded. During nineteen centuries the Golden Rule has not been made a popular principle of behavior. Until it does, collective bargaining and the labor movement will hardly be made obsolete by the universality of generous justice. None the less, he would be indeed ungracious who failed to appreciate this industrial idyl of the Susquehanna Valley.

Other "Open Shop" Plants.

The extent to which shops hospitable to trade unionists and yet not closed to non-unionists exist in this country is a matter of dispute. In very many organized shops the practice is to hire men through the unions when they are obtainable in that way. But if the union has none to offer, non-unionists are sought. Once in the shop, however, these non-unionists are apt to join the union. In one of its forms this is the "preferential shop" which was associated with the name of Justice Brandeis.

A considerable number of establishments have shop committees and company unions. Some of these maintain friendly relations with organized labor. The so-called Rockefeller unions thus exist alongside the organization of the United Mine Workers in Southern Colorado. Testimony differs as to whether there is a real freedom to join the union or to stay out of it. Impartial observers report, however, that the Rockefeller workers very largely belong to both organizations. A number of other concerns, where general conditions are good, are said to be open to organization and yet not organized.

Hugh Frayne, general organizer for the American Federation of Labor, says that where organization does not exist in a so-called good shop it is because of a propaganda against unionism. Mr. Frayne argues that where there is no propaganda one way or the other it is as natural for men to seek membership in a union as it is for them to become naturalized or to vote. He regards union membership as economic citizenship.

So far as the recognition of collective bargaining necessarily entailing a closed shop is concerned, the railroads tell a story. There is no closed shop on the railroads, and yet nowhere is collective bargaining more intrenched. Unorganized men constantly are employed on the railroads. Once at work, they do tend to join the union. On the other hand, there are unions which demand that none other than unionists be employed.

The labor movement in America is so various in its development that vastly differing conditions and principles can be found without trouble. Certainly, however, the cases are numerous to show that the recognition of the right of collective bargaining is not inexorably followed by a closed shop. In truth, many of the most influential and most progressive unions are themselves opposed to the closed shop.

W. M. Wood Backs Endicott.

That the employers' group at the recent labor conference was not representative of the great mass of men at the head of American industry seems to be an opinion held by other business leaders besides Mr. Endicott. William M. Wood, President of the American Woolen Company of Boston, which employs between 40,000 and 50,000 men, in a letter to the shoe man, expresses himself strongly on the need of bringing about a feeling of amicability and co-operation between labor and capital. In his letter, dated Oct. 20, and therefore before the conference went to smash, Mr. Wood said:

"I have just received your letter of Oct. 17, and I heartily concur with you that employers must recognize that the relationship of the employed to the employer is changing rapidly and we believe that it should have changed.

"Personally I am trying to do everything possible in my company to bring about a much closer relationship between our workers and our management. We are encouraging constructive suggestions from our workers as to how we can best improve the conditions under which they work. I believe that the worker ought to have a voice in determining those conditions.

"With regard to 'Collective Bargaining,' which seems to be the bone of contention in the present Labor Conference at Washington, I am in accord with your amendment which I understand from today's issue of The Boston Herald has been added to the latest draft of the tentative resolution of compromise. As worded and as I understand it, it embodies the following idea: 'This must not be understood as limiting the right of any wage earner to refrain from joining any organization, or to deal directly with his employer if he so chooses.' I am strongly opposed to the 'closed shop,' but our company does not hesitate to meet committees composed wholly of union men, whether they represent a department or ours composed wholly of union labor.

"Our aim is to adjust all differences that may arise on the principle of the square deal. To this end we have created a special department of men in our own employ who will use every effort to adjudicate these differences within our own industrial household. We have never permitted the union to force any worker of ours to join their organization against the worker's best judgment. Better relations between employers and employed can be best attained by having the workers given a larger share in the consideration of those matters which affect the conditions under which they are employed. Employers generally must realise that the growth of their business depends upon the amount of intelligent co-operation that their workers are willing to give, and the best way, to my mind, to bring this about is to convince the workers that the treatment of them at all times is founded on the solid basis of the Square Deal.

"In the last analysis, all factions, capital, labor, and the public, are working toward the same goal, improvement of living and working conditions, promotion of success in industry and consequent industrial peace—and it seems to me that fair opinions, honestly and frankly expressed, will contribute much to the progress desired by all."

In commenting on this letter, Mr. Endicott declared that he was anxious for the country to know that all employers were not like the men who were supposed to represent them at the Washington conference, and that Mr. Wood's letter was indicative of the spirit of the best forces among them.

WIDE interest has been aroused by a recent statement of Henry B. Endicott, in a Sunday TIMES interview and in the late Industrial Conference, that his firm's vast shoe plants were real open shops—open to union workers as well as non-unionists, but wholly free from union influence. He said in effect that the unions had had every opportunity to organize the thousands of workers, but had stopped trying, because the employes were satisfied and did not want to be organized.

Many persons who read or heard this assertion received it skeptically, on the theory that any plant to which union men had free access would become organized sooner or later.

The writer of the accompanying article, Mr. Chenery, was asked to visit the shoe plants for the purpose of getting an impartial view of the conditions; to observe how the union men had used their opportunity for organizing the employes, and to see whether they agreed with the employer about the situation. In short, he went as an outsider to learn whether it was possible for a great industrial plant to remain non-union without some sort of pressure being exerted against union organizers.

Mr. Chenery is a trained investigator and writer. During the war he was attached to the War Labor Policy Board. Personally he is an ardent believer in labor unionism—and that fact adds pertinence to his conclusion that the shoe-manufacturing plants are genuine open shops, where union organizers have failed to make an impression and have given up their efforts.

SOME THINGS THE DOCTORS CANNOT DO

Discussing the Latest Rockefeller Gift, High Medical Authority Says No Specific Can Be Found for Tuberculosis, Cancer, or Pneumonia

By REMSEN CRAWFORD.

DISCUSSING Mr. Rockefeller's gift of $30,000,000 for medical education and research, Dr. William H. Porter, for many years professor in pathology and general medicine at the New York Post-Graduate Medical School and Hospital, remarked the other day that no specific medical cure for consumption, pneumonia, and cancer ever could be discovered. He said that the foremost men of medical science who had been delving for years to the roots of these blights no longer looked for such a specific remedy in the realms of therapeutics and pharmacy.

Dr. Porter does not share the optimism of Dr. Mayo, who recently asserted that since the civil war fifteen years had been added to the average life of man by innovations in medical and surgical advance. He holds that the chief source of decreased mortality, or increased longevity, is due to the increased knowledge concerning the hygiene and diet of infants. Reciting the progress that has been made in rural and urban sanitary regulations, he says "our sources of milk supply have been clearly scrutinized, until now enteric disorders in epidemic form are almost unknown," and this, he thinks, is one of the most important of all reasons for longer life today. Dr. Porter admits the failure of his profession to triumph over the more destructive diseases.

In response to a query about his views of the Rockefeller gift, Dr. Porter said: "Much good has already resulted from the funds established by Mr. Carnegie, in his lifetime, and by Mr. Rockefeller, for the advancement of medical science, and I am sure that these later donations on the part of Mr. Rockefeller of $20,000,000 to the General Education Board, created by him, to be expended for medical education and research, and of $10,000,000 to the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research, will go a long way toward enabling the American school of medicine to take its rightful place among the enlightened nations of the world.

"I am of the opinion, however, that the chief benefits which have arisen from these endowments thus far consist in the improvement of our laws requiring better qualifications on the part of applicants for a license to practice medicine. We still need more legislative safeguards, and there is room for reform in the matter of adjusting the curriculum and improving the clinical facilities of the average medical college.

Limited Field of Help.

"In the matter of research there is greater need today than ever for ample funds to extend the great work of experiment and investigation. But I believe it should be acknowledged at the outset that no research can ever possibly discover a specific remedy which will cure such diseases as tuberculosis, pneumonia and cancer. I don't believe that the experts Mr. Rockefeller has commendably brought together on his staff of medical investigators will waste much of their time, or much of his money, trying to find a cure for tuberculosis and pneumonia, for the reason that it is now a known fact that anything powerful enough to kill the germ may be equally destructive to the patient.

"With diseases which we all 'self-limited' it is now accepted as true that we can shorten their duration and decrease their intensity. I assume, therefore, that Mr. Rockefeller's scientists will direct their research in this direction.

"This is not pessimism. It is common sense. We all remember what a thrill of elation took hold of the medical profession, and what a feeling of satisfaction seized the civilized world, when Dr. Koch, famed for his mastery of bacteriology, announced that he had discovered a cure for consumption. Many doctors and scientists took him at his word. His brilliant achievements in the past made it imperative that he should be taken seriously. In my practice and my work at the Post-Graduate Medical School I made it clear then that we were not justified in believing that any specific 'cure' could be elaborated for any pathological condition, although nature does develop anti-bodies and defensive proteins, as well as encysting processes and other means of self-limiting certain conditions which remove or overcome toxins, and, in this way, facilitate a restoration to normal conditions.

"In connection with my work at the Post-Graduate Medical School and Hospital I insisted that I did not approve of any experiments involving human life with Dr. Koch's so-called cure. Years have passed, and the Koch 'remedy' has passed with the years, and we have all the 'remedies' offered by lesser lights."

"But why despair?" the interviewer added. "Isn't there a remote possibility that some day a germ culture may be found which will spare the life of the patient? Had not the medical profession given up all hope in the case of diphtheria and in the case of tetanus, and did not research bring at last the antitoxin which effects a profound amelioration for these diseases?"

"It required long years of medical research to find the germ of consumption, and longer to discover the germ of pneumonia," Dr. Porter replied, "and many long years have been spent in the arduous search for some specific for these germs. In the case of diphtheria, antitoxin does mitigate the severity of the disease. But, even here, the patient must undergo the strain of a well-nigh lethal dose. It is well to add in this connection that antitoxin is chiefly effective in the prevention and removal of the membranous exudation, which is the principle cause of death from uncomplicated diphtheria.

"It is just the opposite in the case of a new serum now used against the typhoid germ. After a patient has become infected with the typhoid germ it is of little avail to inoculate that patient with the anti-typhoid serum. It acts well, however, as a vaccine, and produces immunity from the disease quite as effectively as the smallpox virus.

"The pneumococcus, or germ of pneumonia, was discovered by Dr. Friedlander in 1883. Since that time countless experiments have been made in the hope of finding a specific cure. Dr. Sternberger, our noted army surgeon, has played a conspicuous part in this research work for a pneumonia cure. We have all heard the claims of enthusiasts to the effect that they can cure pneumonia by abortive means—by eliminating the disease through the liver and so forth. This claim is confused either with preventing or with decreasing the intensity and shortening the duration of the disease, for we do not have an actual pneumonia until the air sacs are filled with an inflammatory exudation, and the only way to remove this is by nature's process of fatty degeneration and liquefaction, the liquid product being removed from the lung only by being coughed up, or by being absorbed through the lymphatic channels. Once absorbed into the lymphatic channels these products are eliminated through the liver and kidneys.

"Where Mr. Rockefeller's donation will work its greatest good will be in medical educational lines, as well as along the lines of research. The medical profession in America must be made to study general medicine more. Specialism must be earned, not adopted. The specialist of the past studied general medicine and was graduated as a general practitioner. In time he found his talent, his skill, and his propensity or inclinations all led him into one particular branch, not by premeditated selection, but by natural bent. It doesn't matter what a young doctor wants to be. If he is ever to be successful in any branch of the profession of medicine he must follow the trail of his talents, and no matter what he undertakes he will never be a successful doctor until he has laid the foundation by mastering chemistry, physics, and biology.

"Our medical colleges are not teaching enough chemistry and physiology. In this respect they are falling behind the older institutions of medical training. When I went to a medical college some forty-five years ago, we had four or five lectures a week on physiology, so that in five months we had as many lectures on this very important branch of the science as they give nowadays in two years. We were compelled to continue to study physiology and chemistry long after we had taken the regular course, sometimes going over a textbook two and three times. Life, from start to finish, from maturity to decay, is one long chain of chemical processes, and our research work must be speeded up until we get our American schools of medicine up to the very highest possible standards of efficiency.

Favors Medical Propaganda.

"I note that Mr. Rockefeller's donation will be expended directly for education and research work, and not for propaganda. I don't know whether he classes as propaganda such work as eradicating hookworm, putting down pellagra, and so forth, which he has been accomplishing to such great benefit for the South, and to such great advantage to the medical profession everywhere, but I do know that it would be regrettable should he discontinue such

MOTOR ROAD PROJECTS SET NEW HIGH RECORD

An important report, which possesses peculiar interest for all motorists, regarding good road progress during the present year, has just been made by the Bureau of Public Roads of the United States Department of Agriculture. It shows that for 1919 the expenditures for hard surfaced highways establishes a new record, in so far as the department's road program is concerned, the total amount being $138,000,000. The indications are that the following year will exceed this record by a large margin, as the available funds for road expenditure by the bureau for 1920 amount to $633,000,000.

It is stated, however, that the spending of this sum will be chiefly dependent upon the quantity of materials that can be transported by the railroads, in view of their limited facilities.

"Unless the available open-top cars," says the report, "many of which normally lie idle in the late Winter, are utilized in that slack season the work which can be done will necessarily be curtailed for lack of materials. The total for 1920 is more than four times the amount that has been expended during any pervious year for like purposes. Therefore there must be a tremendous increase not only in the material supplies and shipping facilities but also in the labor supply, and an enlargement of contractors' organizations."

According to Thomas H. MacDonald, chief of the Bureau of Public Roads, the attention of all State, county, and city road-building interests should be directed toward overcoming this car shortage. To this end it is recommended that the shipping of materials begin earlier than usual. The first step in accomplishing this, Mr. MacDonald points out, is to place under contract during December and January as great a mileage of roads as possible.

"It has been customary, continues the report, to wait until contractors' organizations were ready to begin work before starting the shipment of material. Under these conditions many thousands of open-top cars lie idle during the latter part of February, all of March and the earlier part of April. During the past Spring the number of open-top cars that were idle totaled more than 250,000. This, of course, was partly unavoidable owing to the late date at which work got under way, following the signing of the armistice."

The items comprising the 1920 estimate are: From unfinished work, 1919 contracts, $165,000,000; available from State and county taxes and Federal aid, $273,000,000; one-fifth State and county bond issues, not before available, $50,000,000; one-third unexpended balances of State and county bond issues previously available, $45,000,000; available from new bond issues to be voted on in the Fall of 1919 and Spring of 1920, $100,000,000.

Tested 250,000 Miles
Three-Point Cantilever Springs
Greatest Improvement Since
Pneumatic Tires

OVERLAND 4 has been put through the most thorough and severe test possible.

250,000 miles of mountain trails, desert sand, heat, cold, mud and dust, demonstrated the quality of every part of the car long before we began manufacturing.

This remarkable test showed conclusively that Three-Point Cantilever Springs, exclusive with Overland, are the greatest improvement in riding comfort since the introduction of pneumatic tires.

They protect the car from road shocks and prolong the life of every part.

They enable the wheels to hold better to the road. They give greater comfort under all road conditions.

They do away almost entirely with side sway and rebound which twist and rack the car.

Diagonal attachment of the Three-Point Springs at both ends of a 130-inch Springbase gives the steadiness and smooth riding of the heavy car of long wheelbase.

Equipment is complete from Auto-Lite Starting and Lighting System to Marshall Divan Spring Upholstery.

MOTOR CAR FEATURES SEEN IN AERO DESIGN

Manufacturers of aircraft, who are turning their attention to the requirements of commerce to utilize their product are following the trend of automobile development in accomplishing refinement, elimination of unnecessary parts, increased safety, durability and "fool proof" operation, according to Chance M. Voight, one of the foremost aeronautic engineers in the country and designer of several types of planes used in the war.

"Every one knows what the airplane did in the war, and by that name taken one remembers that the airplane, as it stood, represented only a war machine, that is, was an excessive compromise based on military requirements only," said Mr. Voight. "The comfort and convenience of its passengers was subordinated to the speed and mobility of the plane itself. Today, every aeronautical engineer is considering these factors. Hence, the change in new planes. In basic principles of design and structure, the commercial planes we are developing will not be changed materially, no more in fact than the modern motor car has been revolutionized from its original conception. We are seeking reliability and safety, lower cost and moderate operating expense.

"From the standpoint of aerodynamics this development will produce extremely high speeds in the air with low landing speeds, thus enabling a machine to be landed on a small space. It will tend to produce a greater percentage of light weight to useful load so that with a given expenditure of power and given operation expense higher loads can be carried. In other words, the new commercial type of airplane will be able to carry greater loads than its predecessor."

Comparing aeronautical with auto motors, Mr. Voight said the former showed the exceptional efficiency of requiring less than a half-pound of fuel used for each horse power developed, whereas the average auto engine, particularly those adapted to auto trucks, needed about seven-tenths pounds of fuel for each horse power.

"Like the automobile in its early stages of development, the airplane has not been weatherproof, but the new machines are being designed to resist the elements," he added. "Planes are being fitted with brakes, strange as it may sound, to arrest momentum when landing on airdromes.

"In general, the work that is being done thus far in aviation seems to point to the desirability of the medium-sized cargo plane as best for commercial work. For example, 600 to 800 horse power would represent the total power plant; the high speed would be around 125 miles per hour, cruising, and 105 miles per hour as the economical speed. The landing speed could be as low as 37 miles an hour.

"The most serious weakness of prospective commercial aviation development, Mr. Voight believed, lay in a lack of suitable and reliable navigating instruments. The permanence and regularity of an air service or air line would rest solely on the development of these needed instruments, and not on the aerial carrier itself.

Auto Service Conference.

An important conference will be held in Detroit this week under the auspices of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce for the purpose of discussing matters relating to the proper repair and maintenance of motor cars. The service managers of many large factories will be the chief speakers.

Ralph C. Rognon, President of the Automotive Service Association of New York, will speak on what dealers require from the factory service department.

The conference will open tomorrow and will continue through Wednesday.

HONOLULU MOTOR HUMOR

From The Pacific Commercial Advertiser of Honolulu comes this interesting addition to automobile humor, and the motor theft problem:

"Thief is getting so now that they will steal the clock out of your car while it is standing in a churchyard.

"This might sound like the solace of the fellow that stole nickels from a blind beggar, but nevertheless it is a fact.

"Dr. J. J. Bagnall of Honolulu was the goat in this case.

"The medico, like the majority of local folk, believes in going to church and did so last Sunday, driving his Cadillac car to the church.

"During the services, we learned for the first time that we had been robbed, and that the wrench on the front door of the car had been removed and stolen.

"The moral, as H. L. Kalckerbocker, manager of the insurance department of the Von Hamm-Young Company, expressed it yesterday, is:

"Don't go to church."

THE FRANKLIN SEDAN

There is one fine enclosed car whose satisfactory performance does not depend on the addition of accessories, even when touring from three to four hundred miles a day.

The Franklin Sedan doesn't need shock absorbers because it is built to ride comfortably without them.

It does not carry spare tires, unless its tires be run well over 10,000 miles, because it doesn't pound tires out or make its owner tire conscious.

It uses no thermometers because it carries no water to boil in summer.

Franklin Light Weight and Flexible construction, the basic principles of riding comfort, safe, easy driving, tire economy, and low fuel consumption, require no assistance from accessories.

Franklin Direct Air Cooling (no water to boil or freeze), by eliminating the factor of temperature from motoring, the doctoring of fifty pounds of water, and the trouble of 177 unrequired water cooling parts—cuts out annoyance and expense, and permits all year motoring.

That the Franklin Sedan is exceptional in every way is conclusively proved by its nation-wide delivery to its owners of:

20 miles to the gallon of gasoline
12,500 miles to the set of tires
50% slower yearly depreciation

To its unequaled performance it adds these exclusive features of sedan design: Wide Observation Windows giving unobstructed outlook; two Wide Doors extending this view and making access easy; the V-shaped Slanting Windshield, allowing broad driving vision and perfect ventilation.

Before coming to investigate Franklin performance make a note of the things you would like to eliminate from your list of motoring troubles and limitations, and then see if the Franklin car meets your requirements.

JAPAN AT THE LABOR CONFERENCE

All Japan is taking the deepest interest in the International Labor Conference in Washington. K. Yamada and S. Muto were acclaimed by the Japanese press as ably qualified to represent respectively the Japanese Government and Japanese capitalists, according to a bulletin of the Japan Society. Dr. Yamada is president of Keio University, a leading private university of Tokio, which specializes in law, politics, and economics.

Muto is Managing Director of the Kanegafuchi Spinning Company, which has a capital of $8,713,825, and a yearly output of about $50,000,000, thus ranking as one of the largest spinning companies in the world. He was elected with the understanding that he would be accompanied by several advisers representing business interests other than spinning. K. Kumasaki, Consul General at New York, is in Washington as an adviser to the general Japanese delegation.

The election of the laborers' delegate caused excitement in Japan. When the election was called in the council room of the Ministry of Agriculture and Commerce in Tokio, seventy electors were present. Bunji Suzuki, leader of one of the four unions and known as the Gompers of Japan, declared that two-thirds of the delegates present represented capital and not manual labor, and that their nomination had been secured by unfair means.

Thereupon Suzuki, the heads of three other unions, and the six other labor representatives withdrew permanently from the meeting. The Government put forward the name of Uhei Masumoto as its choice for labor delegate, but four days later the sixty delegates remaining elected Dr. Honda as delegate and Dr. Takano as alternate. After two days' consideration Dr. Honda resigned, leaving the latter as labor delegate. Later Dr. Takano resigned, leaving Masumoto, Managing Director of the Toba Shipbuilding Company, as delegate.

The Yorodzu declared that if it is impossible to obtain a suitable candidate among real laborers the duty of representing Japan's labor may be intrusted to the delegate chosen, but he should take several real laborers as advisers.

The Asahi states that the process for the selection of the labor delegate and the candidates appointed are both unusual, but that this probably is due to the undeveloped condition of labor in Japan.

The Hochi pointed out that of the 1,812,000 factory workers in Japan, 716,000 are women and girls, and urged the necessity of reducing their working hours. It predicted that their interests would be properly vindicated by the woman adviser to the labor delegate.

PICTURES AT SEA'S BOTTOM.

You can't make any storage battery last forever—that's a fact.

You've got to keep it filled with water and test it, just like a tire has to be kept filled with air, or it will cost you money.

Some day—if you have an ordinary battery—it's sure to have to be re-insulated, no matter who made it.

But—if you'll buy a Willard Battery with Threaded Rubber Insulation, you'll get clear away from the biggest cause of battery troubles. The insulation will probably last as long as the plates.

URUGUAY'S CONSTITUTION

Powers of President Are Restricted, and Congress Has Authority to Interpret the New Document

According to the editor of The Inter-America Magazine, Uruguay may well be considered the republican social laboratory of America, and as such she is rendering an important international service. A brief outline of her new Constitution is given as one reason for his contention.

URUGUAY, the advanced South American republic, has just instituted in her political constitution reforms so unexpected and radical that they have occasioned profound wonder everywhere.

No one dreamed that a republic of South America would have the audacity to adopt a new political measure without giving heed to the precedents established by the great nations. These great nations are precisely the ones which today show most interest in the study of the new machinery of government which from March 1 began to function in Uruguay.

In the first place, this new constitution limits the powers of the President of the republic in a manner hitherto unknown in any of the most advanced countries of the world. Another peculiarity of the reform is that it divides the executive power of the republic into two branches, one of which is the President, and the other, the Comisión Nacional de Administración. This commission is composed of nine members, elected by popular suffrage, for a term of six years. A third of the members of the commission is elected for two years, as in the case of the Senate of the United States. As in the English system, the minority is assured representation by recourse to the plurality of votes. According to the old constitution, the President was elected by the Congress. According to the new one, he is elected directly by the popular vote.

The faculties of the commission are of an administrative character, especially those that pertain to public instruction, labor, the industries, banking institutions, public health and beneficence. The commission must account to the Congress and must prepare and submit the general budget to that body every year.

All the legislative powers remain as formerly in the hands of the Congress, which will continue to be composed of the two chambers, as in the United States and the other republics.

The Congress elects the members of the highest court of justice and approves or rejects all treaties concerted by the Executive.

As in England, bills may be presented to either of the chambers by any of the members of the Cabinet, who are entitled to participate in the legislative sessions and to take part in the deliberations. By the vote of a third part of each chamber, a member of the Cabinet may be summoned to answer the questions that may be put to him.

When the Congress is not in session a permanent committee, composed of two Senators and five Deputies, elected by their respective chambers, takes its place and represents it in all the affairs which it must ventilate with the Executive. This committee is responsible to the Congress, and in case of urgency it may convoke the Congress for an ordinary or extraordinary session.

Another of the peculiarities of the new constitution is that by its Article 176 power is conferred upon the Congress to interpret and explain the new constitution.

This measure constitutes a new step forward of extraordinary scope. Even in the United States, it has already been pointed out that it would be an advantage to confer upon one of the branches of the Government this power of interpretation, which tends to prevent doubts, misunderstandings and litigations of every kind that arise from lack of authority to determine in necessary cases the true meaning of a clause of the Constitution.

In the United States there exists no organism with the express power to explain the Constitution, since all that the Supreme Court can do is to decide in the course of a suit whether or not any law constitutes a violation of the Constitution, which, as may be seen at the first glance, is very different from what has been instituted in Uruguay.

STUFFED FOOTBALLS

FOOTBALL, which now holds the athletic stage in colleges and high schools, is considered a strenuous game, but the style of play in this generation is tame as compared to the original form of the sport.

The history of the Autumn classic is described by J. R. Hildebrand in a communication to The National Geographic Society, which follows:

"Running, throwing, hitting, and kicking are the fundamental muscular operations of America's characteristic sports—baseball, football, tennis, and golf. The peoples of antiquity manifested all these instincts in cruder form.

"Luzon Bilimen, the Polynesians, and the Eskimo and Sumatra Islanders had games played by kicking a ball. Greeks played it, and the Roman game, harpastum, derived its name from the Greek 'I seize,' which is evidence that carrying the ball was practiced by them. With shoes of hide, the medieval Italians played a game which seems the direct ancestor of the Anglo-Saxon college sport. Gaelic scholars point to a football game in Ireland before the time of Christ, and until comparatively recent times Shrove Tuesday was as distinctively an occasion for football as is our Thanksgiving today.

"In old England football was even rougher than most sports of those hardy times. James I. thought it was 'meeter for hamoring than making able the users thereof.' Henry VIII. and Elisabeth ruled against it. Edward II. frowned upon it for its interference with archery and also because of the commotion it aroused. In those times it was played in the city street. A writer of the sixteenth century called it a 'devilish pastime' and charged it with inciting 'envy and sometimes brawling, murther, and homicide.'

"Nevertheless, by the time of Charles II. football had become firmly established at Cambridge. It was ever held in high esteem in Ireland. There, when all other sports were prohibited for archery's sake, 'onely the great footballe' was exempt. Women joined with the men in playing it on Shrove Tuesdays. So many participated that few knew the whereabouts of the ball. An expedient which not so long ago aroused a furore in the American sporting world was adopted by a player who shook out the shavings with which the balls of those days were stuffed and carried it under his shirt to the goal.

"Abandoned as a general pastime because of its roughness, it was retained in colleges until, within the last half century, it sprang into renewed popularity in greatly modified form.

"The British carried football into Jerusalem when they recovered the sacred city. Missionaries have taught it to heathen tribes.

"The reason why it has become a handmaiden of civilization and is so popular among college men of America was summarized by Howard S. Giles, writing about the Syrian Protestant college at Beirut, of which he was President, in an article for The National Geographic Magazine:

"'You will find the son of a prince playing football under the captaincy of a peasant or the son of a cook. We believe in football there and we have seventeen or eighteen different football teams in college. The game develops the ability to receive a hard blow without showing the white feather or drawing a dagger. This means that when the men get out of college they will stand upon their feet as men.'"

In purchasing furniture you should always keep in mind the fact that you are going to live with your furniture a long time. It isn't like an article of wearing apparel that you wear only for a short period and then discard. Furniture that is hastily selected and bought simply because the price is low very often develops into an eyesore after living with it a short time. We also extend to you activities. I don't know whether he intends to cease his endeavors before Legislatures to bring about higher standards of proficiency in our medical schools, but I do know that this work ought not to be stopped until all institutions have a uniform standard of excellence.

"Indeed, I am of the opinion that our profession of medicine would gain more just at this time in the way of uplift by having Mr. Rockefeller's fund directed toward education and laws requiring education as well as by spending it for practical research. We need more groundwork. Let us get back to teaching chemistry, and keep on teaching chemistry with physiology, and then teach chemistry with pathology, and keep on teaching chemistry to the last lesson in therapeutics, and we may hope to put our medical college on the proper basis and hold it up to its essential standards.

"Much research has been expended by these endowed institutions in seeking a cause for cancer as well as a remedy for this condition. Only within the last few years a woman of Boston left at her death nearly half a million dollars for a commission of American, British, and French doctors to spend trying to find the origin of cancer and its cure. Those doctors studied cancer in every land and every clime, and the upshot of it all was that we stand today about where we have always stood—no positive medical or surgical remedy has been found.

"There is no cure for cancer in the realms of our present knowledge of medicine, because cancer, so far as we know, does not originate in a microorganism. Cancer is not one of the 'self-limited' diseases, because it has its origin in an embryonic cell, or in a group of embryonic cells, caught in some tissue which, subsequently, because of irritation, or through some twist or defect in the nutrition of the area, becomes a fertile soil for the development of the growth of the cancer cell. Hence, we can see that research work in the investigation of cancer ought to be confined to those chemical processes involved in defective metabolism, and in the development of a nutritive pabulum which tends to excite super-activity in these embryonic cells. If research work could develop some method by which these embryonic cells could be discovered, and if a safe way could be devised for their complete removal, then the cure for cancer might be established, assuming that this is the true cause and method of development of the cancerous process."

Poor Medical Education.

In his allusions to the way of American students in their primary lessons or preliminary courses, a hop-skip-and-jump with little regard for the mastery of chemistry, Dr. Porter strikes at what Dr. Abraham Flexner found to be one of the greatest evils in the American system of medical education. He was chief investigator for the Carnegie Institute, and is now General Secretary of the General Education Board, founded by Mr. Rockefeller, and will have in hand the task of distributing Mr. Rockefeller's late gift of $10,000,000 to the board in such ways as the board members may prescribe. He wrote of medical colleges in America:

"Scandals in medical education exist in America alone * * * where acquaintance with disease is derived not from the study of the sick but from the study of textbooks."

In these and similar conclusions, Dr. Flexner was sustained by Dr. Henry S. Pritchett, who wrote an introduction for his report, saying that the American system of medical education was more or less a farce, and that American colleges were almost wholly without clinical facilities.

"If the lowest terms upon which a medical school can exist abroad were applied to America," wrote Dr. Pritchett, "three-fourths of our existing schools would be closed at once."

In this connection, however, it must be remembered that in nearly all the States great improvements have been made by legislative enactment since the activities of Dr. Flexner and Dr. Pritchett and others of these Carnegie and Rockefeller endowment funds began. The "Practice of Medicine Law" of New York State, enacted in 1916, as a result of the disclosures of these men, has gone a long way to improving the standards of the medical profession in this State.

FUTURE OF THE Y. M. C. A.

It Will Be Decided at the International Convention in Detroit

By HORTENSE McDONALD.

Y. M. C. A. delegates from Canada, the United States, and insular possessions will gather in Detroit Nov. 19-23, at the fortieth international convention, to determine matters of future policy. An attendance of 5,000 is expected, representing the membership of more than 1,000,000 men and boys and the 30,000 welfare workers who have served in foreign countries since 1914.

Many issues of urgent importance are to be considered. Three special commissions were appointed several months ago to study the problems confronting the association and to make recommendations. The rapid spread of Bolshevism and means of combating it, the continued high cost of living and how to overcome it, the question of continuing women Secretaries in the work, and many other matters of similar interest are scheduled to come up for consideration. Co-operation of the Y. M. C. A. in repatriating into American and Canadian life the 4,500,000 men who served in the army and navy, and 500,000 men who constituted the Canadian forces, will be another topic the convention will study.

The recruiting of permanent Y. M. C. A. workers for service in Europe from the ranks of successful secretaries who worked with the A. E. F. and the soldiers of the allied armies is another matter Y. M. C. A. leaders are now considering. A thousand war workers are expected to be present.

Official recognition of the service of the Y. M. C. A. in helping to maintain the morale of the American troops in wartime, will be stressed in speeches by Secretary of the Navy Josephus Daniels and Commander Mayo, representing that branch of the service, and Colonel J. S. Joy, representing the army. A complete statement will be furnished as to the present status of the Y. M. C. A. in Europe, and the opportunities open to the associations in the various European countries and in the Near and Far East. While the extension of the work in European and South American countries will have a prominent place on the convention program, the work at home, especially in rural communities, will claim an equal share of attention.

An insistent demand for industrial and community athletics has come from all sections of the country, and as a result the Red Cross, the Boy Scouts, the Community Service and other kindred organizations are co-operating with the Y. M. C. A. in a nation-wide movement for organized play and the promotion of physical education.

These industrial and community athletic programs, worked out along lines that made army athletics the great morale builder for the A. E. F., will be presented for adoption at a convention of Y. M. C. A. physical directors Nov. 24 and 25, immediately following the session of the international convention. The convention will serve as a clearing house for new ideas that have developed as a result of war experiences. More than one hundred physical directors will work out the proposed nation-wide program of athletics.

The question of the employment of women in the permanent work of the association in this country and abroad will probably evoke considerable discussion at the meeting. A Commission on the Conservation of the Value of War Work has been named, and its report will, it is expected, contain definite recommendations either favoring or disapproving the use of women on the secretarial staff. Should the convention decide to continue the women's work as a result of the very efficient service they performed overseas, it would mark a departure from its long standing policy.

Are Your Coal Bills Stealing All Your Building Profits?

This poor building owner has just figured his profits and they look like this—00000000. He thought his building was going to make money for him and now he finds that his coal bills are stealing all the profits from his pocket.

He didn't "Look in the basement first" and so he is stung with a finicky boiler that demands "Bellins Baby Food"—and there isn't any more.

He has to beg to get any coal of any kind. He has to take the kind of coal he can get. But his boiler was never made to burn that kind of coal and so he is in a rotten fix.

There is one, and just one, safe and sane solution—and it isn't the coal; never has been; and never will be. A Kewanee Smokeless Boiler burns any coal that was ever dug out of the ground anywhere. And it burns it so completely that none of it is wasted up the stack as smoke. The real solution of your coal question and the real insurance of building profits is a Kewanee Smokeless Boiler.

There are thousands of building owners in every part of the country who are making their buildings pay them money every day. But they are the wise owners who "Looked in the basement first" and are heating their buildings with boilers that burn any kind of coal.

For heating Schools, Apartments, Churches, Hotels, Factories, Garages, Large Residences, Theatres, etc.

JAPAN'S FOREIGN POLICY.

IN judging the Japanese people one must bear in mind that there are four sources from which the foreign policy is expressed, according to a statement by Lindsay Russell in the Japan Society's official publication. He says the public opinion in Japan might not harmonize with any of the four sources. In identifying the sources he says:

"First, there has been the diplomacy of the Gaimusho, (Foreign Office.) The China policy as defined and pursued by that department is the 'authentic' one. It is the only legitimate policy of the Japanese Government.

"Second, no less potent as a political force and earlier than the first in point of historical growth is the China policy of the Japanese General Staff, (Etat-major.) This is the policy of Japan's militarists.

"Third, in point of historical growth has come into existence the China policy of the 'Shina-Ronin,' those gentlemen who are conspicuous by the lack of wealth, occupation, and profession, but have a lot of big political ideas. Some newspaper articles very aptly use the words 'outs' and 'ins' in China. Well, the 'Shina-Ronin' are the Japanese 'outs,' whose specialty is China politics and who fraternize with the Chinese outs.'

"Fourth, in point of historical growth, but more important than the third because based on common sense business ground, comes the China policy of the few leaders of industrial and commercial Japan.

"Hearing the enunciation of the policy which each of these groups would like to see Japan pursue in her relations with China an outsider would naturally be struck by their incongruity. Not being able to judge how much is the mere 'say' and how much the 'practice,' it will be only natural for an average American having no time to give careful attention to form erroneous conclusions."

POOR AND ENGLISH LAW

System Which Provides Justice for the Needy Described by a Barrister-Social Worker

THE different methods which England uses to bring aid to the poor litigant are described by Holford Knight, one of the leading barristers of that country, who has recently come to the United States. Mr. Knight pictures the conditions there as far different from those in America, taking as his source of knowledge of our courts the recently published report of the Carnegie Foundation, which was prepared by Heber Reginald Smith. In it Mr. Smith said the poor could not find justice in our courts. Mr. Knight says:

"H. G. Wells once said to me that the organization of the legal profession in England was still in the Middle Ages. We were engaged in one of our frequent discussions of how to bring law to the door of the people. I have been active for years in England in improving the machinery of justice. To this end I started the movement in 1913 to open membership of the bar to women, and I have vigorously supported all proposals designed to facilitate and render justice less expensive.

"Naturally, the report issued by the Carnegie Foundation on 'Justice and Poor' has been of absorbing interest to me in view of my concern in the same problems as presented in England. I would not be understood as accepting or rejecting Heber Smith's conclusions. They relate to matters necessarily unknown to me. But I am concerned to learn that Mr. Smith's indictment is corroborated by such eminent authorities as Elihu Root and Dr. Henry S. Prichett, the President of the Carnegie Foundation. That being so, it seems clear that a grave problem has been revealed for treatment. Without presuming to offer suggestions to those much better able to tender them than I, perhaps some account of the way we have dealt with the problem in England may be of interest and service.

"It is not too much to say, I think, that in the modern State the machinery of justice is of supreme importance. I am frequently reminded of a penetrating remark by Anatole France that 'on reflection, everything becomes difficult.' The complexities of modern life have induced a condition of unceasing movement in the mental sphere. We discuss without end, we canvass each other's conclusions, we oppose each other's proposals, until action is forgotten in a whirl of words. Meanwhile, the matters about which we talk unceasingly retain their simple outlines. If only we could face the facts of life instead of perpetually discussing them, many of our current difficulties would end.

"Thus, such a report as Heber Smith's should dispose us to confront the quite simple question,—'Is justice available to the poor?' Again,—'What are we doing to make it available?' and, yet again, 'What can we do to improve the administration of justice?'

"Let me answer these questions on the basis of nearly twenty years' experience in England as a practicing barrister and a social worker.

"In my country we accept as an axiom that to insure public tranquillity justice must be inexpensive, expeditious, and available to all, irrespective of social condition. I do not pretend that our arrangements fully satisfy these requirements, but a continuously serious attempt is proceeding to provide them.

"In the first place, the idea is gaining wide acceptance that no person should be hindered in obtaining justice owing to want of means. Taking the civil side first, the machinery of our County Courts (known as 'the poor man's courts') is designed to insure cheap and expeditious justice. A poor litigant unrepresented by counsel or solicitor, is invariably assisted by the Judge, who takes care that the case of the litigant is not prejudiced owing to the lack of a legal representative. This is the result of the high standard of disinterestedness and impartiality which our judiciary, in all its branches, has upheld for centuries.

"A movement is on foot to enlarge the jurisdiction of the County Courts, enabling larger suits, at present triable in the more expensive High Court, to be dealt with in the County Courts. In particular, it is being sought to invest the County Courts with jurisdiction in matrimonial causes, but, pending the adoption of this necessary reform, other plans are in operation to assist the poor litigant which I shall now describe.

"Ascending the scale on the civil side, we have in recent years worked out a system of relief to poor litigants in the High Court. We have established a Poor Person's Department in the High Court to supplement the relief formerly provided to persons sueing as paupers. These persons now provide particulars of their claim or defense to a civil action, and these are investigated by barristers who act gratuitously as reporters on such cases. If the reporters are satisfied that the particulars disclose a genuine cause of action or a defense, a barrister and a solicitor are assigned by the Poor Person's Department to conduct the case. In no circumstances is the barrister permitted to accept a fee. His name is taken from a list of counsel who volunteer for the service, and I know of no recent action of the Bar of England which redounds more to its credit than the generous way in which this gratuitous assistance to poor litigants is gladly proffered.

"On the other hand, the solicitor is entitled to charge for out-of-pocket expenses, and I am bound to add that this circumstance is causing increasing complaint from the body of poor litigants. When these Poor Persons' Rules were promulgated some years ago, the then Attorney General announced that a public fund would be established so that out-of-pocket expenses should not be drawn by the solicitor from the poor client. I regret to say that this promised fund has not been instituted, and it is clear that before this generous system of relief to poor litigants is completed the fund must be provided from public funds if not from public contributors as originally intended.

"I ought to add as a matter of deep social significance that the overwhelming mass of applications for this assistance by poor litigants relate to matrimonial suits. Thousands of proceedings for various kinds of matrimonial relief have been filed and conducted. This is on the basis of the old law of divorce, and when the proposals of the recent Royal Commission on Divorce are carried out and the recommended transfer of such cases to the county courts is effected it is clear that considerable relief from matrimonial grievances will be sought.

"Hence, on the civil side in England a generous and workable scheme of relief to poor litigants is in operation. With regard to criminal matters, whether prosecutions or defenses, similar assistance is provided.

"No man or woman can suffer injury for whom the State does not at once undertake protection. All prosecutions in England, except in cases where private persons choose to undertake the costs of prosecutions are carried out by the State officials.

"As to defenses, liberal provision is made by law for the assistance of the poor prisoner, and this relief is sometimes withheld by conservative Judges. But in so far as Parliament can insure that no prisoner shall suffer by reason of his want of means to obtain assistance, statutes and regulations have been adopted for this purpose.

"In the lowest courts, those of magistrates or local justices (the latter not being necessarily lawyers but citizens appointed by the Commission of the Peace), no specific assistance to the poor prisoner is supplied. The theory is, and the practice exemplifies it, but not to anything like the extent seen on the civil side, that the magistrate's duty is to see that the case of the prisoner is not prejudiced when not legally represented. A movement is spreading to insure as a right to all prisoners in our courts representation by a new official to be created, called a Public Defender. I have long advocated this reform and feel sure that it will be established in early days.

"But, in the higher criminal courts, the defense of poor prisoners is provided for in a variety of ways. Here again, however, the relief is not always supplied as it should be.

"In the first place, a prisoner is entitled to the services of any barrister in court, however eminent, for the fee of one guinea. He selects his representative from the dock (hence such defenses are called dockets) and the honor of the Bar of England requires that these instructions should be accepted, however difficult and prolonged the defense incurred.

"Then, again, under the Poor Prisoners' Defense act, the Judge, on the application of the prisoner, can assign a counsel for the defense taken from a rosters of barristers volunteering for such service. The only fee is the nominal one of one guinea paid by the Court, not by the prisoner, and there are never wanting barristers who gladly proffer this service to distressed countrymen and countrywomen.

"I would not have you think that these arrangements I have described are perfect. They are not; but we are willing to correct established defects."

The Tire Guaranty! WHAT IS IT?

It clears up the misunderstanding about the guaranty that misleads many a tire user and dealer.

It shows them how their rights and safety are best secured in the sale of a tire. It means more protection to the user, and a stabler business to the dealer.

Why does a user buy a certain tire? Nine times out of ten because he has been led to expect a certain mileage from it.

Therefore, it is vital that the user understands clearly what service he has a right to expect from a tire.

DOES the tire guaranty make this clear between him and the dealer? What does it guarantee? Where does it begin, and end? Read and see.

All the leading tire manufacturers, The B. F. Goodrich Rubber Company the same as the rest, guarantee tires with these identical words:

> "We guarantee all Pneumatic Automobile Tires bearing our name and serial number, to be free from imperfection of material and workmanship. . . . .
> . . . . Pneumatic Automobile Tires are not guaranteed to give any definite number of miles."

This guaranty means that if "in the judgment" of the manufacturer usage reveals an imperfection of material or workmanship, the manufacturer will "repair or replace it at his option," adjusting it according to his own judgment; and it means nothing more.

"BUT how," the tire user very properly demands, "is the adjustment of an imperfect tire made? Where does the adjustment begin?"

To such questions, the guaranty against imperfection makes no specific answer whatever.

But to all these questions, the Goodrich Adjustment makes a specific answer, open handed as Justice. It takes up a tire where the guaranty stops, and leaves no room for misunderstanding, or controversy, between user and dealer.

It says that a Goodrich Fabric Tire, with proper usage, will deliver at least 6,000 miles; and a Silvertown Cord at least 8,000 miles.

AN imperfect Goodrich Tire is so rare that an adjustment is an immaterial thing to The B. F. Goodrich Rubber Company; but a single imperfect tire to the individual user who gets it is too material a thing to be ignored.

Yet without an adjustment basis, clearly and definitely stated, a tire user with a claim against a tire, goes into a court where there is no law. But the Goodrich Adjustment lays down the law, fair to user and dealer—clear to both.

Thus Goodrich first insures the user against an imperfect tire with the guaranty; then specifies clearly the amount of his insurance with the Goodrich Adjustment basis—6000 miles for Fabrics—8000 miles for Silvertown Cords.

That takes the risk out of the sale of a Goodrich Tire, both for dealer and user. It takes the guess out of its service.

LATE RALLY TIES GAME FOR HARVARD

Forward Pass in Closing Minutes of Play Against Tigers Evens Score, 10 to 10.

CASEY CARRIES BALL OVER

35,000 SEE RIVALS PLAY

Palmer Stadium Is Packed—Aerial Attack Helps Princeton Players to Early Lead.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 8.—When the Palmer Stadium was bubbling over this afternoon with riotous enthusiasm over an impending Princeton victory Harvard's battered football eleven rose on the wave of a desperate rally and fought the Tigers back in an irresistible drive which carried the Crimson up on even terms with the Orange and Black and ended one of the most spectacular gridiron battles of the season with a 10 to 10 score.

For more than three periods Princeton outplayed Harvard, and the crowd of 35,000 which looked down from the concrete tiers of the vast amphitheatre was overjoyed at the rejuvenation of the Tiger team. Throwing themselves at the loudly heralded Crimson giants at the start, Princeton bewildered the undefeated Harvard team with forward passes, and before the confident lads from Cambridge recovered from the shock Trimble had swept a Princeton touchdown over Harvard's goal line.

In the third period Harvard braced and started its uphill fight when Ralph Horween booted a field goal from the 27-yard line. The Tigers' joy seemed complete in the fourth period when Murray came into the game for Princeton and boosted their total to 10 with a field goal from the 18-yard line.

It looked gloomy for the Crimson. For eight long years Princeton has been waiting for a chance to overthrow its football enemies from Cambridge and in Captain McGraw's team the Tigers firmly believed they were looking at the team which was going to triumph over their ancient rivals

Victory Within Grasp.

The Princeton students were yelling themselves hoarse over the victory which was within their grasp. The band was blaring forth college airs and the great mass of Princeton supporters were waving the Orange and Black on high in what appeared to be the most stunning football sensation and upset of a tempestuous gridiron season. Only a few minutes more and Princeton would be the victor. The seconds ticked along for Princeton with sluggish, tardy progress. For Harvard the seconds galloped.

There were but a few seconds more to play. Many of the Princeton supporters were hilariously dancing toward the exits. It seemed impossible for Harvard to push back the scrappy, aggressive Princeton eleven. Students had thrown away their hats in the wild anticipation of the bets which they were going to collect from the host of undergraduates from Cambridge.

"Wow, wow, wow, hear the tiger roar!" bounded across the gridiron into the faces of the Harvard partisans. Princeton was on the verge of a hysterical outburst, which this quaint little Jersey town has been waiting for since the cold, wet November day in 1911, when Sam White picked up a mud-covered pigskin and galloped down the field for the touchdown which gave the Tigers their last victory over the Crimson.

Princeton's joy was premature. In their joyful excitement the Tigers overlooked the tremendous power which was lurking in the Harvard football machine. When the end of the game was only a few minutes away the Crimson eleven suddenly found itself. In sheer desperation the Harvard players broke forth with a rushing forward pass attack which took Princeton unawares just as the Tigers had surprised the Crimson earlier in the game. Harvard kept the ball in the air all the time. The field suddenly seemed alive with Crimson jerseys. Princeton fought back in desperation, but their courageous drive for victory had taken much of their stamina.

Forward Pass Turns Tide.

Harvard played as only a team can play when it faces defeat. The realization of impending disaster instilled the Crimson with new life. With undefinable fury they rushed on toward Princeton's goal line and finally crushed Princeton's hope of victory when Felton tossed a forward pass to the fleet Eddie Casey, who galloped over the line with a touchdown.

The Princeton crowd was shocked into silence. A dead, depressing calm came over the great crowd as Church kicked the goal which tied the score at 10 to 10. It was a sorrowful ending for the first great gridiron spectacle Princeton had seen since before the war. It was almost as sorrowful for Harvard, for the Crimson eleven came here a decided favorite with its widely flaunted undefeated eleven. Harvard was expected to win an easy victory this afternoon, but instead the Crimson quietly left Princeton tonight inwardly entertaining a glad little feeling that it was not defeated. It was a close call for Harvard.

While it was a thrilling football game to watch, with its dazzling runs by Casey, its long, beautiful spiral kicks by Scheerer, and the elusive open tosses of Strubing and Trimble, the deadlocked score brought gladness to no one.

From early morning the crowds came to Princeton on special trains and in motor cars. By noon the campus was choked with automobiles, and these automobile parties opened up their hampers and were satisfied with a picnic lunch, for Princeton was swamped with the crowd and could not feed it. A cup of coffee and a sandwich were as welcome as a lunch at the Ritz.

Princeton Girl Shines.

Princeton grads and their families and friends turned out for Princeton's biggest football holiday. The Princeton football girl blossomed out in all her splendor. All these football girls were good to look at with their leopard skin coats and hats to match. Great yellow chrysanthemums covered the front of their coats and gave an added glow to their perpetual smile. Win, lose, or tie, the football girl always enjoys herself, and she did today, even though her escort was downcast and forlorn as the assemblage trooped silently out of the stadium.

Harvard didn't ride roughshod over the Princeton eleven at the start. Instead, the Tigers came out full of fight and put the Crimson on the offensive. Harvard kicked off, and when the Tigers lined up on their own 36-yard line Trimble jumped into the line of Crimson for a couple of yards, and then Garrity tried to gain, but was halted by this massive wall of Harvard players. Trimble sent away a punt and Eddie Casey caught it. He was forced out of bounds at Harvard's 40-yard line.

Casey ploughed through for an eight-yard lunge, and Humphrey dug through for a first down. Captain Billy Murray tossed a forward pass to Casey, and it gave Harvard another first down. Then Harvard worked its mystifying revolving shift, and Casey broke loose on a twenty-four-yard sprint which took the ball to Princeton's 15-yard line. The Tigers showed their mettle, however, and refused to be pushed back. Murray dropped back and tried a field goal from the 24-yard line, but the ball went wide of its mark.

Then Princeton started. From the twenty-yard mark the Tigers were on their way. It was a steady, continuous parade. Trimble and Garrity tore off big gains outside the tackles and through the line. Harvard's herculean forwards seemed slow and were thrust aside.

A Steady Advance.

The Princeton procession went slowly but surely down the chalk-marked field. Trimble, Strubing and Garrity refused to be stopped. Trimble tossed a forward pass to Davis which carried the ball into Harvard's territory at the thirty-four-yard mark. Trimble tried another forward pass, and Strubing fumbled, but quickly recovered the ball. Things were breaking well for the Tigers.

Trimble got away another long heave to Williams, who carried the ball to the fifteen-yard line before the Crimson toppled him over. Trimble tore his way through the line for a five-yard gain, and then Strubing dropped back as if to kick. He caught the pass from Callahan and made an accurate lateral pass across the field to Trimble, who galloped over for a touchdown. Strubing kicked the goal.

The Princeton crowd broke loose. The Tigers had advanced the ball eighty yards for a touchdown without once losing the ball. It was as impressive a march as had been seen on a gridiron this season. It was little wonder that the undergraduates went wild.

Harvard was so dumfounded that the Crimson eleven didn't get over its surprise during the period. Garrity, Strubing, and Trimble continued to rip holes in the Crimson forwards until the period ended.

It was an even fight in the second period. Ralph Horween went into the game in this session and he added new life to the Crimson backfield. Humphreys did a lot of gaining for the Crimson at this stage, and so did Eddie Casey, but Harvard was unable to get within striking distance of Princeton's goal.

Kicks Field Goal.

Garrity kicked off in the third period and Billy Murray ran the ball back to Harvard's 26-yard line. After an exchange of kicks Princeton started on the 35-yard line, and once more Garrity and Trimble galloped through the Crimson forwards. On one of these plays Garrity fumbled and Humphreys pounced upon the ball on Princeton's 30-yard line. Horween and Casey tried to break through the Tigers' line, but found it solid, and Felton tried a forward pass to Casey which failed. Ralph Horween dropped back to the 27-yard mark and booted over a field goal. The score then: Princeton, 7; Harvard, 3.

The Harvard eleven woke up in the third period and started a bitter uphill fight. Casey, Horween, and Humphreys were able to plunge ahead at times, but Harvard could not sustain the attack long enough for it to be effective. Just before the period ended Felton got a twenty-yard forward pass away to Steele which took the ball to Princeton's 35-yard mark.

Ralph Horween dived through for a five-yard gain and the Princeton line was beginning to weaken under the punishment.

Horween dropped back to the 24-yard mark and made it appear as if he was going to try for another field goal. Instead he caught the Tigers unawares and tossed a forward pass to Felton. There was another delayed pass, and Felton brought the ball to the 18-yard line after shaking off several Princeton tacklers.

Eddie Casey then took the ball, and just as the whistle blew, ending the third period, he was toppled over on Princeton's 8-yard mark.

When the elevens lined up for the fourth period Horween jammed his way through for 4 yards more, and the Harvard supporters yelled for a touchdown. The goal line seemed but a step away. The Princeton line then showed what it was made of, and after Casey, Humphreys, and Horween had hurled themselves into the line, the Tigers stood firmly and the ball was still on their 4-yard line. As a last resort Felton tried to throw a forward pass to Jack Desmond, who stood in one corner of the field near the goal line. The pass failed and Princeton took the ball, with Harvard only 4 yards away from a touchdown.

Scheerer's Long Punt.

This heroic stand by the Tigers brought the crowd to its feet, and the cheering became louder and louder when Scheerer, Princeton's master punter, was called into the game from the side lines. On the first line-up under the shadow of their own goal post Strubing, the Princeton quarterback, tried to jam his way through the Harvard line. He collided with the Crimson wall with such terrific force that he was laid out and had to be carried off the field. Don Lourie took his place. It was a wise move on Princeton's part to call upon Scheerer. Standing behind his own goal line this phenomenal Tiger kicker booted a gorgeous spiral kick far down the field and Felton got it in midfield. The kick carried nearly sixty yards.

Felton tossed a forward pass to Steele and Garrity intercepted it on Princeton's 30-yard mark. Garrity and Trimble tried the Crimson line and found it solid, and then Scheerer sent away another fine kick to Harvard's 30-yard line.

Harvard was unable to gain, and Church fell back for a kick. The Princeton forwards tore through, and McGraw blocked the kick. Davis recovered the ball out of bounds on the 6-yard line. Princeton yelled for another touchdown, but the Harvard line hurled back the plunges of Garrity and Trimble.

Murrey, Princeton's dropkicker, then came rushing in from the sidelines. Trimble was taken out of the game, but this was evidently a mistake, for Trimble was the Tigers' most powerful back field asset. Trimble went out because Referee Langford would not permit them to bring him back once he had started to the sidelines. Murrey first tried to go through the line on a fake kick formation, but he was stopped short. Then he kicked a field goal from the 18-yard line, making the score, Princeton, 10; Harvard, 3.

The game now looked safe for the Tigers and the crowds acted accordingly. They did not reckon on the fighting spirit which was dormant in the Crimson eleven. Harvard then began a rush which swept the Tiger eleven aside and carried the ball sixty-five yards for the precious Harvard touchdown, which saved the Crimson from defeat.

Casey Makes Long Run.

Casey caught the Tiger kickoff and zigzagged his way down the field for thirty-five yards through the Tiger players in a thrilling dash before he was downed on Harvard's 40-yard mark. In this sprint Casey was at his best and bowled over half a dozen Princeton tacklers.

Harvard failed to gain, and Church kicked to Lourie. Princeton was playing safe, and Scheerer kicked back to Casey, who again had the ball and was forced out of bounds on the 40-yard mark. Then Harvard sallied forth in all her power. Felton threw a forward pass to Eddie Casey, who made a beautiful dash of forty yards before he was downed.

With the ball well within Princeton's territory, Felton threw another pass to Casey, who covered ten yards before he was downed. Gratwick tore through the line for a four-yard gain, and Church cut loose with a desperate plunge through tackle which took the ball to Princeton's 15-yard mark. Gratwick again plunged through to the 11-yard line.

Harvard then made a change. Arnold Horween was switched from centre to the backfield and Gratwick left the game, Philbin going to centre. When the elevens lined up the Princeton stands waited anxiously for the whistle to blow the end the game. Felton barked out a signal and the Harvard team was in motion. Felton dropped back and the Tiger forwards came rushing down upon him. He coolly tossed the ball to Casey, who was planted far out to one side of the line. Casey made a pretty catch and rushed over the goal line with the ball, scrambling along behind the goal posts until he reached the centre. He refused to be brought to earth and kept his feet until he had gained his objective despite the fierce tackling of the Princeton players.

A hush fell over the field as Church started to kick the goal. The ball went straight and true from his foot and over the middle of the crossbar. The score was tied and Princeton was silent in her disappointment.

From the Harvard stands a great shout went up for Eddie Casey. Here was one player, anyway, who had lived up to the great reputations which have been coined at Cambridge. Casey was Harvard's trump card today. His great dash of 40 yards through a broken field in the second period after he caught Trimble's punt and his magnificent work in the last period, when he made another 40-yard gallop, which was the greatest factor in Harvard's touchdown, stamped him as one of the fleetest and most skillful open field runners of the tempestuous football season.

SYRACUSE SUBS TOO MUCH FOR BUCKNELL

Special to The New York Times.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Nov. 8.—Syracuse University's football eleven, with several regulars on the side lines, defeated Bucknell here this afternoon by a score of 9 to 0. Syracuse kept seven of its first string players on the bench watching the game, only using Captain Alexander, Robertson, Schwarzer, and Gulick against the Pennsylvanians. Syracuse got its points in the first quarter and in the third period. Just as the whistle was about to blow for the end of the initial quarter, Jack Malone, playing his first game of the season, dropped back to Bucknell's 28-yard line and with unerring aim lifted the ball held by Schwarzer, and the oval sailed directly between the uprights for the first three points of the day. The ball had been rushed from midfield to Bucknell's 20-yard line where Coach Reynolds's boys held, which made it necessary for Malone to resort to the placement kick.

About the middle of the third period Bucknell had the ball in midfield when Malone dropped back for a punt. His kick was blocked by Schwarzer, who scooped up the oval on Bucknell's 44-yard line and he was off like a scared deer for the goal posts. He raced faster than any the Bucknell men who pursued him and he score a touchdown. Malone's try at kicking the goal failed, the ball hitting the cross-bar and bounding back on the field.

Bucknell had its best chance to score in the last quarter when McDermott tried a goal from placement from Syracuse's 25-yard line, but the ball fell short when he had to hurry away his kick.

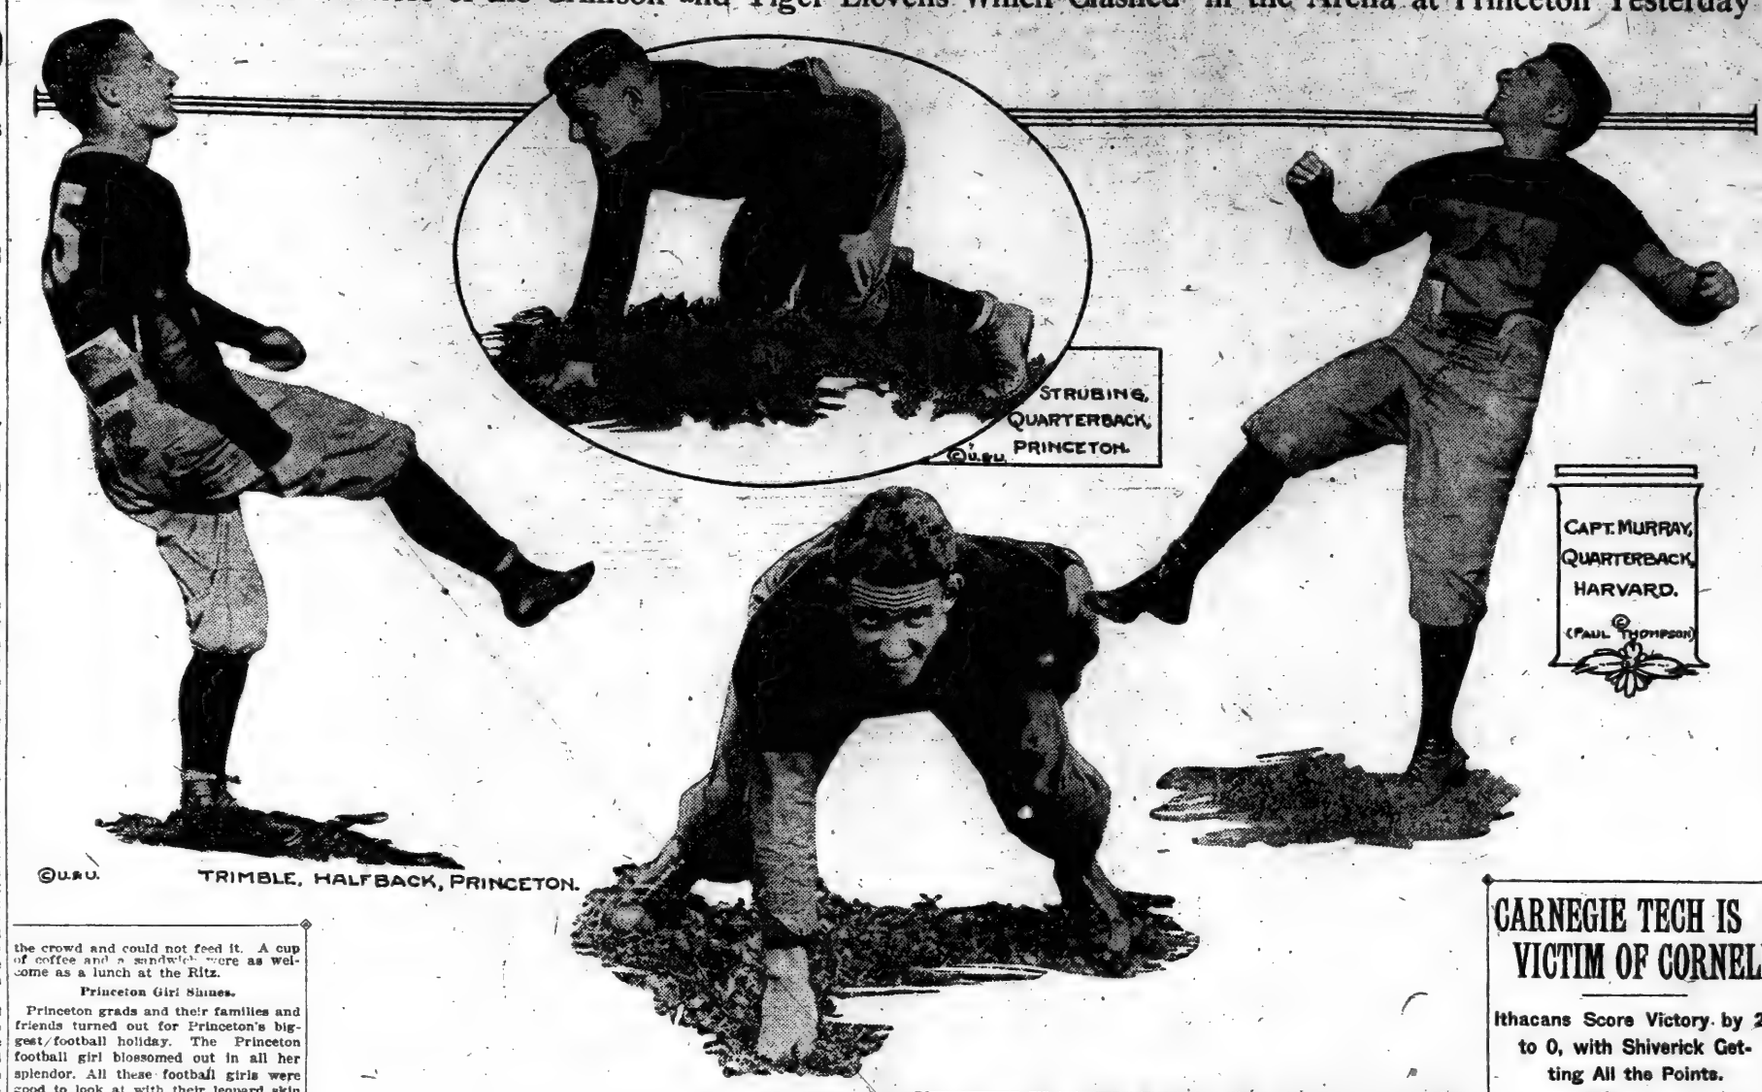
Notable Gridiron Warriors of the Crimson and Tiger Elevens Which Clashed in the Arena at Princeton Yesterday



DARTMOUTH BEATS PENN BY 20 TO 19

RESULT IN DOUBT TO END

Lead Seesaws Between the Two Teams, Each Scoring Three Touchdowns.

ROBERTSON IS BADLY HURT

Green's Punter Breaks Leg After Spectacular Run—30,000 Spectators Thrilled by Struggle.

In the most spectacular game of football ever seen at the Polo Grounds, Dartmouth yesterday defeated Pennsylvania, 20 to 19, but lost her star back, Jim Robertson, as the price of victory. The great punter of the big Green team was carried off the field early in the second half, after completing a brilliant end run, and it was discovered later that his right leg had been broken just above the ankle. At the Hotel Pennsylvania, where the followers of both elevens kept up their singing and cheering long after the historic battle had ended, Coach Bob Spears gloomily announced that his prize player was out of the game for the rest of the season.

The game itself was a sensational see-saw affair, with never a dull moment in the entire sixty minutes of play, and presented the astonishing spectacle of two absolutely evenly matched elevens making three touchdowns apiece, and deciding the issue by the number of goals which followed these scores. Dartmouth was able to tally twice and Penn only once out of three chances, and this single point proved the margin of victory.

Within five minutes of the opening of hostilities, the Hanoverians were already denting the ground behind the Quaker goal posts, Holbrook slipping past left tackle for a 35-yard run, which resulted in the first touchdown, from which Cunningham kicked a goal. Before the first quarter had ended, however, Pennsylvania had also crossed the goal-line on a beautifully executed forward pass, Light to Brunner, and only a few inches kept Miller's kick from tying the score. Another forward pass, Bell to Light, gave the Red and Blue a second touchdown in the next period, but again the goal was missed.

Penn Leads at Half Time.

Trailing at 7 to 12 at the beginning of the second half, Dartmouth got started again and earned a touchdown by straight rushing, Holbrook carrying the ball over after Robertson had been disabled. A few minutes later, Jordan apparently put the game on ice by intercepting a forward pass and running seventy yards for a third touchdown, Holbrook's goal making the score 20 to 12.

But Pennsylvania came back with still another touchdown and goal, carrying the ball over by a sustained attack in the final quarter, and threatening to win the game in the last few minutes of play. Captain Bell had two chances to try for goals from the field, but lost them both.

Dartmouth came to New York yesterday with not only a splendid fighting team, that knew no such word as defeated, but also with a neat and exceedingly helpful string of horseshoes concealed somewhere in the background. All the breaks of the game favored the New Englanders, and the cold figures show that they won from an eleven which was superior in every department of play except punting. Dartmouth made only three first downs during the entire afternoon, as against ten by Pennsylvania. The Quakers completed ten forward passes out of seventeen attempts, whereas the Green succeeded in only one out of half a dozen experiments in aerial attack. Exclusive of long individual runs, Pennsylvania gained more than twice as much ground as Dartmouth, and also suffered less by penalties. Yet Dartmouth won, and when the records are put away for the year, that is all that will be remembered.

The 30,000 spectators who stormed the Polo Grounds, however, will not soon forget the amazing struggle that was fought out to the bitter end by two of the greatest teams that an extraordinary football season has produced. Luck was with Dartmouth, in the opportunities that were offered for scoring, but the Green-clad players followed the ball so closely that they never let these chances slip. Moreover, they left the kickers to add the highly important points after the touchdowns were scored, and on this little detail the final decision hinged.

Ball Misses Important Tackles.

Pennsylvania can put the blame for the defeat of her fine scoring machine squarely upon the shoulders of Captain Bert Bell. Playing as the last man in the defense, he twice allowed touchdowns to score when a comparatively simple open field tackle was offered him. In each case his effort was half-hearted and the runner easily slipped past him. But aside from these flagrant errors of execution, the Philadelphia leader showed a consistent lack of judgment in his selection of plays at crucial moments. After completely bewildering the Dartmouth defense with forward passes in the first half, he abandoned this system of attack in favor of line-plunging in the third quarter, and promptly saw his opponents rush into the lead again. Then, when another opportunity for a score was offered, with straight rushing a dependable means of advance, Bell tried an untimely forward pass, by which he presented Dartmouth with an additional touchdown. His own attempts at field goals were also weak affairs, while an early chance for a placement kick, after a fair catch, with a penalty added, might more profitably have been turned into a continuation of the successful running attack.

Out of the sparkling display of football the names of a few individuals stood out in spite of the evenness of the competition. Holbrook, Jordan, and Captain Cannell were the big Dartmouth luminaries, while Captain Bell and Quarterback Light were the shining lights for Pennsylvania.

The final score came in the last minute of play, when Shiverick from the 30-yard line booted a low dropkick that just cleared the crossbar by a few inches.

YALE BEATS BROWN BY A 14 TO 0 SCORE

BULLDOG ATTACK STRONG

Fumbles Prove Costly to New Havenites, However—Both Teams Try Many Forward Passes.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 8.—The fur flew when the Yale Bulldog and the Brown Bear clawed each other in the bowl today before 30,000 persons. The Brunonians gallantly held off the canine attack during a pluckily, although defensively fought first half. Their line crumbled, however, in the second, and Yale tasted Bruin meat for a total tally of two touchdowns, the final accounting leaving Yale a 14 to 0 winner.

The game dissipated the legend that the Yale attack was blunt and shapeless. Today the Yale eleven drove over 363 yards of ground against a Brown defence which knew scientific football of the latest 1919 model. The attack found itself, but the individual execution was ragged. Four times Yale fumbled, twice losing the ball in enemy territory, and twice the visitors threatened to score, surrendering the oval only when the Eli twenty-yard mark had been reached, once on downs and again on Armstrong's attempted field goal, which fell short.

Eight times Yale went over the top to the Brown twenty-yard trenches, but only twice was the play clean enough to give the final touchdown punch. Four times the ball was lost on downs, twice within the Brown five-yard mark.

It was essentially a punting and a forward passing game, Joe Neville and Herbert Kempton, the Yale toe artists, boosting the oval aloft eight times for an average of 43 yards, while Armstrong and Doody, the Brown skyrocketers of the leather, lifted 13 punts into the air, for an average of 38 yards.

Forward Passes Numerous.

A total of 26 forward passes completed the aerial display, Yale heaving 10 and Brown 16. Yale completed 7, to 5 for the visitors, gaining 76 yards through the aircraft game, to 64 for Brown. The Brunonians, however, raised 9 which were uncompleted, to 3 which Yale could not put through. Two of the Brown heaves were intercepted to only 1 of Yale's. The Brunonians also smashed the tradition that the Yale defense could not be fooled. They ran up 9 first downs, to only 14 for the Elis. Williams, the colored end on the Brown team, completely fooled the Yale defense on four occasions, slipping past the Eli frontier till he was brought down from behind.

The game was cleanly played, no penalty for more than five yards being given, Yale being set back for a total of 25 and Brown 35.

Of the 30,000 who witnessed the bout the Providence university sent down a cheering section of nearly 800, while the Yale singing and cheering division was in full action for the first time in three years.

Quarter Back Herbert Kempton starred. His field generalship, his running back of punts, and his broken-field running time and again threw the Brown Bear back into its cave. Rush line wrecker Jim Braden renewed his claim to his sinister title, while the punting and end running of Joe Neville shifted the scene from a reverse to a victory march on two occasions.

First Half Goes Scoreless.

Although four times within the shadow of the Brown goal during the first half, Yale was unable to register a point. An advance of sixty yards was halted during the first five minutes of play by the rock-rib Brown defense, which held the Eli attack until fourth down, when Braden's field goal trial went low and short. This down-the-field march included a twenty-yard run back of kickoff by Joe Neville, a thirty-yard end run by the same player, duplicated immediately by Kempton, and fifteen yards of line smashing and short gains by Jim Braden and Fred Webb.

Yale's second march, the longest feature of which was a twenty-yard run back by Neville, was halted by a forward pass of Fred Webb, which Armstrong of Brown intercepted. The Brown fireworks were set off for a forty-yard advance, in which a forward pass by Fox to Jemail, and its mate, Armstrong to Brooks, were the chief factors. Yale's granite defense at its thirty-yard line compelled Brown to employ four downs, Armstrong's heave, which went incomplete, accounting for the last of the four. In the closing minute of this half Fox's fumble of Neville's punt gave Yale the ball at the visitor's twenty-yard line, presenting Yale with a rosy outlook for a score in opening the second period.

Brown's breathing spell, however, gave that team renewed backbone, for it compelled Yale to surrender the oval through an attempted drop kick by Braden, which fell short at the Brown five-yard line.

Yale Misses a Chance.

Two minutes later Yale was presented with another scoring chance on Armstrong's short punt to the Eli forty-yard line, Neville's ten-yard run back, and Kempton's ten-yard end run. The Brown defense again stiffened, and Yale handed over the ball to Armstrong, who punted to the Eli's forty-yard mark. Kempton split centre into the open for twenty yards, only to fumble the ball to Brooks, and the Brown attack, led by Jemail and Williams, carried the ball to the Yale thirty-yard mark, where Armstrong attempted a field goal, which went low into the Yale rush line, Galt falling on it.

Another Yale fumble immediately surrendered the ball to Brown at the forty-yard mark, but Armstrong's attempted field goal again fell short. A sensational forty-yard end run by Kempton brought the ball into Brown territory as the first half closed scoreless.

With the lateral pass, which Brown employed constantly, Crowther and Armstrong gained early in the third period. But Armstrong, on fourth down, punted to Yale's 25-yard line, where Kempton's 25-yard run back was followed by his plunge of twenty more around right tackle. Pile Driver Braden was turned loose against the Brown centre for 20 yards in four consecutive attacks, and Kempton's forward pass, which came down in Neville's hands, shifted the scene of the scrimmaging to the Brown 5-yard mark, where Braden carried half the visiting team behind their goal.

Brown Holds for Downs.

Three minutes later Yale was sailing full tilt for another touchdown, with Kempton's 20-yard run back, followed by another forward pass to Neville which netted 30 yards. In her last ditch Brown battled successfully enough to wrest the ball on downs and Armstrong's punt to Yale's 30-yard line started the Eli onslaught back again. Kempton's forward pass to Braden gained 10 yards and Howard Campbell, who had just entered the game at half back, plowed to the five-yard mark as time elapsed.

Smashing through centre to the Brown goal, Campbell propelled himself over for Yale's second touchdown in the opening play of the fourth period.

Five minutes later Yale rushed the ball on short gains to the Brown 15-yard line, where a poor pass allowed Brisk of Brown to fall upon it, and Armstrong punted to midfield. Yale had reached the Brown 20-yard mark on Kempton's forward pass to Campbell when another Yale fumble gave Brown the ball, and Doody punted to the Yale 10-yard mark after Coulter had heaved a forward pass to Brisk which netted twenty yards.

Aldrich punted to midfield, where Coulter fumbled, Galvin falling on the ball. Aldrich punted again to the Brown 10-yard line. Doody punted back to midfield, and Yale had reached the Brown 5-yard line and had been held until fourth down again when time elapsed.

mouth heroes, with Robertson shining, especially as a punter, up to the time of his injury. Holbrook's first touchdown was the result of a wonderful piece of individual running, and his second was one of those desperate efforts, with the goal line only a few feet away, which represent more than many a spectacular play in the open field. Jordan not only made the touchdown which assured Dartmouth of victory, by intercepting a forward pass and dodging his way 70 yards through a broken field, but was throughout the game the most consistent ground-gainer for the Green, and one of the strongest players on defense. Cannell was a constant menace in his clever running back of kicks, and it was a magnificent 40-yard dash of this kind that put his team in a position for its second touchdown, the only one of the three that was unquestionably earned.

Brunner and Light Star.

On the Pennsylvania side, Brunner and Light starred in the back field, the former doing some valuable punting as well as taking an active part in the forward passing and defensive work. Heinie Miller was a giant at left end, with Little a prominent figure in the tackle position beside him.

The forward passing game displayed by the Red and Blue was one of the prettiest things in the history of the gridiron, and for the greater part of the contest it had Dartmouth completely at sea.

Often several Penn men were waiting for the ball, with not a single opponent near them. Short passes, just over the line of scrimmage, proved most effective as steady ground-gainers, but these varied from time to time by longer tosses, two of which proved good for scores.

Rival student bands enlivened the preliminaries, and Pennsylvania produced a novel mascot in "Happy" Gibson, the colored groundsman of Franklin Field, who celebrated his first vacation from Philadelphia in a blue swallow-tail coat, a red vest, and a high hat. It was a big day for "Gibby," and he worked hard to amuse the crowd.

Steady Gains Through Line.

Dartmouth started impressively with some steady gains through the line, and, after profiting by the early exchanges of punts, threw a bomb into the proceedings with Holbrook's flashing run for a touchdown. The Green back fumbled the ball as he started outside left tackle, but picked it up and was clear of the line in no time. Bell made a pitifully weak effort to stop him, and he sailed on unmolested for fifty-five yards to the goal-line. Cunningham kicked the goal.

Penn's first sign of life came in a 30-yard gain on a forward pass from Bell to H. Miller. But the next attempt was fumbled by Heinie's brother, Ray, and Cunningham got the ball for Dartmouth. A long punt by Robertson gave the Quakers another chance, and after Bell's good run-back, Light threw a 20-yard pass to Brunner, who dashed nearly half the length of the field for a touchdown. A fair catch by Bell offered another possible score in this quarter, but Miller's placement kick fell short, from the 40-yard line.

Two of the three forward passes tried by Penn in the second period were successful, one of them resulting in a 22-yard run by Light for a touchdown. But the missing of both of these first tries for goal, while seemingly unimportant at the time, eventually proved fatal.

Dartmouth finally managed to work a forward pass of its own near the close of the half, Cannell receiving the ball from Robertson on a fake kick, and gaining thirty-five yards on the play. In the third quarter both teams temporarily abandoned the passing game, and Dartmouth was the gainer by the change of tactics. It was a fine run-back of a punt by Cannell that put the Green in a position to score again, but no less than eight plays were needed to get the ball over the line, a timely penalty for off-side giving Dartmouth a first down when her rushing attack seemed to have failed. Shortly before this, when Robertson's 25-yard run had made a score imminent, and at the same time removed the star from the game, Pennsylvania had taken the ball on downs.

Penn Gets Started.

Just as the quarter was about to end, Penn got her attack well started again, and seemed on the way to another score by straight line-plunging. An attempt at a forward pass, partially blocked, bounded into the arms of Jordan, who set sail for the goal-line, seventy yards away, easily avoiding Bell's tackle after he had cleared the forwards. It was perhaps the most spectacular moment in a game overflowing with thrills. When Holbrook kicked the goal from this touchdown, Penn's fate was sealed.

But the Quakers fought on gamely to the finish, and put over still another score after getting close to the goal-line with forward passes. They continued to threaten until the final whistle blew, Bell missing two favorable opportunities for field goals, after a fumble and another forward pass to Light had brought the ball inside the 20-yard line. Fortune remained on the side of the Hanoverians, however, and every effort of the Red and Blue went for nothing. The game ended just after Bell's final dropkick, with the ball in Dartmouth's possession.

NOTRE DAME AGAIN WINS BY AIR ROUTE

Uncorks Baffling Forward Passes and Defeats West Point, 12 to 9.

Special to The New York Times.

WEST POINT, Nov. 8.—Notre Dame, always a fast, aggressive eleven, beat the Army today, 12 to 9, in one of the most interesting and hardest-fought games ever staged on the plains. The Westerners flashed their usual repertoire of air-line plays, and when all other methods of attack failed them they made these overhead tosses work to excellent advantage.

Only during the initial period did the Army look better than the visitors today. The Hoosiers, with a team somewhat lighter than they are in the habit of bringing here, nevertheless outplayed the soldier aggregation in all except the first quarter.

Bahan and Gipp, two powerful backfield men, figured prominently in all of the visitors' forward pass plays. Both these huskies tossed with unerring accuracy, and Bahan was on the receiving end most of the time. Occasionally E. Anderson got clear, and a long toss found him under the ball with outstretched arms.

Unusual Variety of Forward Passes.

The Westerners probably launched fifteen or twenty of these overhead plays, and all except four or five were successful. Long and short passes, wee ones, just over the line of scrimmage, were frequently resorted to, and they threatened the Cadets to such an extent that old-timers were reminded of the wonderful work here in 1913 when Dorias and Rockne threw consternation into the Army ranks and beats the Cadets by just such tactics.

Rockne, by the way, is head coach of the Notre Dame eleven and took delight in his team's victory today. The West Pointers started well in the opening quarter, McQuarrie's excellent kicking finally giving the Army the ball at midfield. It was from this point that the soldiers made their big drive for a score. McQuarrie, Lystad, and Schabacker, the latter a hardy player built like Oliphant, smashed their way through Coughland and Degree on off tackle plays until the oval finally rested on Notre Dame's 3-yard mark. From here the Army, with the Hoosiers contesting every inch, took four plays to put it over, Lystad being finally catapulted over the line with not an inch to spare.

McQuarrie Kicks Placement Goal.

Once more soon after the kickoff McQuarrie gained on the exchange of kicks with Degree, and the Army was at midfield with the ball. Another drive which was halted on Notre Dame's 22-yard line took the leather close enough for McQuarrie to boot a placement goal. He did this while standing on the 31-yard mark.

Until this time Notre Dame's attempts at line smashing had gone for naught and it was at this time that the Westerners began their airial attack. The first three trials were failures, not because of the Army's defense so much as the fact that they were really poorly executed. However, nothing daunted, the visitors kept at it until they had the Army men running around in circles, and a long toss, Gipp to Bahan, finally put the ball on Army's 10-yard line.

The soldiers fought hard, but on the third down Gipp sliced through for the score. Bahan missed the goal.

The first half ended: Army, 9; Notre Dame, 6. Soon after the opening of the third quarter a forward pass, Gipp to Bahan, put the ball on the Army 20-yard line. A penalty for offside took it five yards closer to the goal posts and then the Army took the ball away on downs. It was a good flash of defensive work, but a moment later, when Lystad kicked to midfield, the visitors launched a long pass, Gipp to E. Anderson, and again the ball was on Army's 10-yard line. Miller got by White for this score in two plays, but again the goal was missed, Kirk failing in this try.

During the final quarter the Army, always fearful of a forward pass, was on the defensive.

COLGATE BEATS ROCHESTER

Hamilton Eleven Does All Its Scoring in the First Period.

Special to The New York Times.

HAMILTON, N. Y., Nov. 8.—Fighting a plucky battle every inch of the way, Rochester was defeated by Colgate here this afternoon by a score of 21 to 0. All of the scoring was done by Colgate in the first quarter. Rochester braced and was able to hold Colgate in the remaining periods.

One of the mysteries of the game was the inability of the first team to score again in the third quarter. The regulars were started in the game and played throughout the first period. The second team to a man took their places for the second period.

At least one more touchdown was expected when the first team trotted out at the start of the second half. Whether the Maroon had orders to take it easy or whether Rochester was capable of holding the team that had come through a hard season without defeat, is still a question in the minds of those who watched the game. That Rochester was able to withstand the second team as she did in the second and last periods did not surprise many.

The third period was also a nip and tuck battle in spite of the fact that the Colgate 'Varsity was in the game. Only toward the end of the quarter did Colgate show any superiority over the Rochester team, and then it was too late. Cottrell intercepted Hummell's forward pass on Rochester's 30-yard line and ran through a broken field to the 10-yard line. Colgate was about to send the ball over when the whistle blew.

The fourth period started with Rochester fighting harder than she had before. She pushed Colgate up the field to the latter's 10-yard line. There the scrubs took a stand and held Rochester for downs. But by the time Colgate was in a position to score the game ended with the ball on Rochester's 15-yard line.

WEST VIRGINIA IS BEATEN BY CENTRE

Special to The New York Times.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Nov. 8.—Another upset featured West Virginia's gridiron season here today, when the Centre College of Kentucky, almost unheralded and little feared, gave the Mountaineers a neat lacing, to the tune of 14-6.

There was no question of Centre's superiority. West Virginia, in the first quarter, looked like an easy winner, shoving Rodgers over for a touchdown after five minutes of play and exhibiting a most businesslike offense that had the Centre team bewildered. At half time the score stood at 6-0 for West Virginia, but Centre had braced in the second quarter and outplayed the Mountaineers.

In the third quarter, brilliant running by McMillen and Roberts gave Centre its first touchdown, after which Weaver kicked goal, putting Centre in the lead.

West Virginia made a frantic effort to come back and three times lost the ball on downs within the Centre 10-yard line, after having carried it there by a powerful attack. T. Roberts got off a bad kick, when hurried, that gave West Virginia the ball on Centre's 12-yard. Centre staved off a touchdown and then took the ball straight down the field herself for a touchdown. In this march, McMillen, Roberts, and Davis featured.

West Virginia outweighed the Kentucky eleven, and the Blue Grass players were frequently down for the count, but played on pluckily. West Virginia's tackling was high and ineffective, Roberts especially could not be downed usually without a gain of from three to ten yards.

WILLIAMS IS WINNER.

Special to The New York Times.

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass., Nov. 8.—After getting a scare at the outset of the game Williams settled down here today and proceeded to drub Middlebury College by the score of 19 to 0.

Two successful forward passes by the visitors, Parker to Good, resulted in a total gain of 55 yards, bringing the ball to the Purple's 5-yard line in the first few minutes of play. Parker then crossed the Purple goal line, but was called back as offside play had been detected. Williams then held for downs on its 1-yard line and Middlebury was never again dangerous.

Williams scored three touchdowns and had all the better of the playing after the initial period. The first score came in the second period, after consistent gains had carried the leather nearly the length of the field. Boynton went over for the score after circling the end for 10 yards. The second Purple score was also made by Boynton on a 5-yard dash outside of tackle. The forward pass was brought into use for the final touchdown. Boynton tossed to Joslyn, who sprinted 20 yards over the goal line in the last period.

As usual, Captain Boynton starred for Williams, while Hibbard and Fargo also did commendable work. Parker was Middlebury's best bet.

TWO FIELD GOALS DEFEAT THE NAVY

Special to The New York Times.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 8.—Georgetown won over the Naval Academy eleven this afternoon by a score of 6 to 0, because of its greater daring, versatility, and staying power, but the only thing which figured in the actual point making was the drop kicking of Malone. The visiting quarter back kicked two goals in the final quarter. The first time, he was standing on the navy's 15-yard line, and the second time on its 35-yard line, and the latter was really something of a kick, as the navy forwards were working desperately, and were almost upon him when he got the ball off. Both were cleanly between the uprights.

The factor of second importance in the Georgetown victory was its superiority in the punting game. McQuade distinctly out-distanced King. He kicked from a close-up position and got his punts off in wonderful fashion. Several times he kicked the ball over the heads of the navy backs, and a gain of fifteen or twenty yards on an exchange was not an uncommon thing. This had a great effect upon the game in the second half.

Upon the whole, the honors of the game were with the navy in the first half, and until late in the second quarter the ball never was held by Georgetown outside of its own territory. The navy backs, particularly Koehler and Clark, were making short gains on almost every attempt, while Georgetown seemed unable to put over any ground gaining.

The game was not without some elements of encouragement for the Navy, though the defeat by Georgetown was felt keenly. A good deal of power was displayed at times by the back field men, and during most stages of the game the line held splendidly. However, the midshipmen played the least varied game of any they have exhibited this season, whether by instruction that they should not uncover too much or whether they did not have anything to vary their play. Five out of six plays were drives off tackle, and the forward pass was attempted less than in any game this season. When tried, it was only the short kind, and resulted in little gains, always less than 10 yards, when successful.

PENN STATE DOWNS LEHIGH.

Special to The New York Times.

STATE COLLEGE, Penn., Nov. 8.—Before the greatest "Penns Day" crowd ever gathered on new Beaver Field, Penn State downed Lehigh this afternoon in one of the hardest fought games of the season. The final score was 20 to 7, although when the whistle blew the visitors were in possession of the ball on Penn's 3-yard line. With the exception of the final quarter, Coach Bezdek's team completely outplayed Lehigh, but in the closing minutes of the game Rote opened up a forward passing attack which had Penn State worried.

The crowd was estimated at 6,000, and every available inch of standing room was occupied. The field was in fair condition, considering the rains of the past week.

Penn State entered the game minus the services of two of her best men, Rauch, a guard, and Way, the sensational half back. On the first kickoff another star half back was so badly injured that he had to be carried from the field. Penn State's scoring consisted of two touchdowns, and the subsequent goals, and two beautiful placement goals by Larry Conover, the husky centre. Lehigh's touchdown was the result of a blocked kick late in the fourth quarter.

Booth broke through the line and blocked Higgins on the 15-yard line and fell on the ball behind the goal line for his team's only score.

U. S. S. PENNSYLVANIA WINS.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Nov. 8.—The football eleven from the U. S. S. Pennsylvania, now stationed in the Brooklyn Navy Yard district, won the title for the North Atlantic division here this afternoon by defeating the dreadnaught Utah team, 34 to 0, in the elimination series for the Atlantic Coast naval service championship. The Pennsylvania team will next meet the winner of the Southern division series.

The Pennsylvania sailors have had an undefeated team this season, and won the right to play the Utah by recently conquering the Arizona team. Kaiser was the star of today's contest and scored two of the five touchdowns. Chezik, Malden, and Brown tallied the others. The Pennsylvania team, which is coached by Lieutenant Harrison, a former end on the Annapolis eleven, showed form today equal to the football of the average college team.

Barnard and Marquand Teams Tie.

Barnard School and Marquand School battled through a scoreless game yesterday on the gridiron at Dyckman Oval. Marquand's eleven showed surprising strength and several times held its goal line against the Barnard onslaught. In the second period a Marquand kick from the 30-yard line just missed sailing between the uprights. Trippe made a 30-yard end run for Barnard in the final period, bringing the ball to Marquand's 20-yard line, but there the Brooklynites presented an impenetrable defense and the threatened score was turned back.

N. Y. U. DOWNS UNION, 17-6.

Weinheimer and Cann Score All the Points in Second Half.

Special to The New York Times.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., Nov. 8.—New York University won a comeback game over Union here today by 17 to 6 after leaving the field with the score 6 to 0 against it in the first half, which was an evenly staged battle until Lyman, Union's half back, broke loose for a 60-yard run on a tackle play, successfully evading the entire New York backfield. New York carried the ball to Union's 5-yard line in this half, but lost it on a forward pass which Lyman caught on the goal line.

The second half was a bitterly contested affair. New York came with a rush, but Union stopped their tactics. A long forward pass from Cann to Weinheimer put the ball on Union's 4-yard line. Weinheimer carried it over on a criss-cross play around Notmann.

Weinheimer repeated Lyman's feat by circling Union's right end for a 50-yard run and touchdown. In the last quarter Captain Cann wound up the scoring by drop-kicking from the 35-yard line.

The play was of a mixed up sort throughout. Union, after taking the lead, went back to its form before the Columbia game and as a result failed in the second half, the line and ends failing to stop New York's fast end runs. Poor tackling lost Union its chance to win the game, as time after time New York's runners had no difficulty in charging right through the Union team.

Union attempted a lot of passes in the last quarter, but completed but one.

Cann, Weinheimer, and Brinn starred for New York University. The two former men were hard to stop, while Brinn was all over the field on defense. Cann had the better of the punting when Wittner was doing it for Union, but Murray, who took up this work for Union, more than held his own. His high spirals saving Union many yards of ground.

Gregory, Klein, and Lyman were the Union stars, the former two proving invincible in the line and the latter making most of the Union ground. New York could not get its passing attack under way in the first half, as Union backs caught all of them, but its first score was the result of a long pass in the third quarter, after Union had held it for downs on its 35-yard line only to have the stand upset by one of the players being offside.

The game was cleanly played and few substitutions were necessary.

AMHERST BEATS WESLEYAN.

Scores Three Field Goals to Touchdown and Goal for 9-7 Victory.

AMHERST, Mass., Nov. 8.—The hitherto unbeaten Wesleyan football team was defeated by Amherst this afternoon by the score of 9 to 7. Wesleyan was outplayed in every department of the game, Butler's work at left end and Boote's kicking being the sole redeeming features of the visitors' playing. Zink and Kilby starred for Amherst. A record crowd of 3,000, including the entire student bodies of both colleges, kept the rivalry at the highest point.

The game opened with Boote kicking off for Wesleyan. Zink ran back ten yards, and Amherst then began hammering at the line and carried the ball down the field until it was within drop-kicking distance. Zink put it over the bar for the first score that an opponent had made against Wesleyan this year.

In the second period, Amherst failed to gain and an exchange of punts followed, Wesleyan gaining on the exchange. Captain Harmon of Wesleyan finally succeeded in getting the opening for which he was waiting and carried the ball thirty-five yards for a touchdown. Boote kicked goal. Wesleyan's winning streak came to a sudden stop soon after, and, from that time on, Amherst began to gain. Zink repeated his successful drop-kick again in the third period, following a forward pass to card, which netted twenty yards.

The last period opened with the ball in midfield. Failing to gain, Zink kicked. Boote returned the compliment and gained on the exchange. The Purple and White again began a march down the field, Davison gaining forty yards on a forward pass from Zink. A third dropkick for goal by Zink followed.

In the remaining time the visitors tried several forward passes, none of which gained. Amherst took the ball on downs and started to repeat its previous performance when time was called, with the ball on Wesleyan's 40-yard line.

Wesleyan has been unable to win a football game on Pratt Field for fifteen years.

TUFTS WINS IN WEST.

Bay State Collegians Defeat Detroit University, 7 to 3.

Special to The New York Times.

DETROIT, Mich., Nov. 8.—Showing reserve power and an attack that gained strength as the game progressed, the Tufts College eleven yesterday at Navin Field administered to the University of Detroit the first defeat that team has suffered this year. The score was 7 to 3.

It was a beautiful contest, hard and cleanly fought, with the breaks in it being somewhat in favor of the Easterners, who twice were spared the ignominy of having their goals crossed by the blast of the referee's whistle. Each time the Tiger offensive reached the zenith of its power seemingly toward the close of a half.

ENGINEERS THRASH COLUMBIA ELEVEN

LOSERS SADLY OUTPLAYED

Tech Athletes Show Skill and Prowess in All Departments and Humble Men from Heights.

Stevens came into more glory for its unbeaten eleven yesterday afternoon on South Field, by taking hold of the Columbia outfit and twisting it right and left, up and down, and finally shaking it off by a score of 13 to 0. It was the grandest kind of a victory for those scarlet-jerseyed technicians from Hoboken, who this season have triumphed over Haverford, Connecticut Aggies, Rhode Island State, and Rensselaer. They have ferried over to Morningside twice since Columbia resumed football, once to bow in defeat and in 1916 to hold the New Yorkers to a scoreless tie. Yesterday's third battle more than evened the old score.

Starting right in with the opening whistle, Stevens exhibited enough football knowledge and ability for three teams. Those Jerseymen, coached by Leroy Durburow, showed 6,000 rooters who crowded into the field that they have forgotten more real, substantial, winning football than the Columbia 1919 team knows. When a line buck or an off tackle play seemed imminent, Stevens tricked their opponents with a spread formation or with a neatly executed forward pass. When the team looked to be all set for a wide end run, Half Back Goodale or the snappy, peppery Quarter Back Bloss knew just how to cut through the line, swerve again in back of the linemen of both teams who were clenched, and gain distance until stopped by the Columbia tacklers on the secondary defense.

Stevens had won the game by Goodale's drop kick from a hard angle in the second period, but they stowed it away out of danger by Bloss's touchdown in the final stanza. And then, as Linesman Hennessey was counting the seconds on his stop watch at the close of the battle, Goodale added sore injury to the battered and insulted Columbians by lifting another drop kick over the crossbar. The three points were unnecessary, but they were added for good measure in favor of the Stevens clan as a reward for their stellar playing.

Sad Outlook for Columbia.

There's a deplorable state of affairs at Columbia this Fall. The end of the so-called "preliminary" season was reached yesterday, and now the Morningsiders must face Wesleyan, N. Y. U., and Brown in succession, and each one can muster a football eleven infinitely better than any of Columbia's opponents heretofore. Alumni at Columbia are frank about their disappointment. They are supporting the team more steadfastly than ever this Fall. They are filling South Field for all the games. But they cannot understand why a squad of thirty or forty big, willing huskies who trot out on the gridiron every Saturday afternoon have been able to show no more football ability than that demonstrated in the five games to date. Only the Amherst and Vermont games have been victories, and each by the barest margin, whereas Williams and Stevens have walloped the Columbians, and Union held them scoreless. Whispered rumors have gone the rounds that there have been dissensions within the team, beginning with the election of Canapary for Captain over Kennedy; but that shouldn't prevent the Blue and White combination from knowing football. The fact remains that they play games like a team hastily put together and almost without coaching.

During yesterday's disaster for the New Yorkers there was really only one play which seemed to be used. That was the line buck, generally between tackle and guard. Columbia played three full periods and part of a fourth without once using the forward pass, and the reason is obscure, since the pair of Swedes for the Hobokenites, Carlson and Swenson, showed early in the game that they could swoop in and smear the Columbia backs as they charged into the line. Columbia's forwards did as well as could be expected. For half the game the tackles and the guards answered every call to open the holes for the half backs. As the second half developed, however, Tower and Scovil tired, and then the Stevens line almost to a man charged with the snap of the ball, and frequently dropped the New York runner before he had got off to a good start. Columbia showed a marked dislike of anything approaching an open game. Only four forward passes were tried, all in the last quarter, and even end runs were rarely attempted.

No Ray of Light for Losers.

Stevens outplayed, outguessed, and outdid Columbia in every department. The engineers amassed a total of sixteen first downs, all except three of which came from rushing the ball, whereas Columbia netted only six, one of which followed a forward pass and one resulted from a penalty on the visitors. Columbia and Stevens were each penalized twenty-five yards, and the New Yorkers punted nine times to four boots for the Jerseymen. Stevens tried a total of twelve forward passes and completed two of them, one for twenty-six yards and one for nineteen. Canapary tried one drop kick and Goodale essayed two others in addition to the two he scored.

Only once throughout the hour of play did a Columbia score seem imminent. About the middle of the third period, Forsyth, the big New York left guard, intercepted Ford's forward pass on Columbia's 25-yard line and raced sixty-eight yards down the field. The would-be Stevens tacklers, as he started, were blocked by some brilliant interference by Kennedy and Tower, but Forsyth was built for strength and not for speed. He did his best, but his 200 pounds were too much for a sprint and he began to tire, wobble, and as he checked his speed at the threshold of Stevens' goal line, Carlson pounced upon him. Columbia had four downs to make the seven yards to the goal line, but they failed. Eccles, who had replaced Captain Canapary, subscribed three, and Johnson, who was rushed into Shaw's place, added another. Busch then flopped Applebaum in his tracks. Eccles couldn't gain and Stevens took the ball on downs on its 3-yard line. In the last period Columbia's best quarter back, Quigley, was hustled out from the trainer's care and into the game, and although he seemed to instill the lacking punch, it was only momentarily, and the flash soon died down.

Stevens got within twenty yards of a touchdown in the first period, but Ford, the crashing, smashing, sure-gaining full back, tried a forward heave on a fourth down without success, and Columbia took the leather. The first score came, however, before the second period had progressed far. Bloss returned one of Shaw's punts to Columbia's 41-yard line, whence Ford tore around the New Yorkers' left end for fourteen yards, pushing off Columbia tacklers with his vicious straight arm jabs. Stevens here used twice in succession the old-time spread formation, which thoroughly baffled the Morningside crowd, with such success that a first down was netted and the ball was brought to Columbia's 16-yard line. One forward pass was incomplete, but Ford then dropped back to the 21-yard line and hoisted the pigskin between the uprights on a drop kick made from a bad angle.

Bloss Carries It Over.

The Stevens' touchdown came soon after the lineup for the fourth period. Johnson had missed catching a punt late in the third period, the ball rolling back to Columbia's 30-yard line before he recovered it. He punted to Bloss, who returned the leather to the 37-yard line, and Ford and Goodale brought it eleven yards closer on two rushes. The Columbia line had the stiffness of tissue paper and failed to hold the Stevens onslaughts. Bloss circled the right end, but fumbled near the goal line, and Columbia took the ball. Standing behind the line Eccles punted out to Bloss on Columbia's 30-yard line, and, tucking the ball under his right elbow, the little Stevens quarter back dodged, shifted, half stumbled, but kept going until he had side-stepped and straight-armed the whole Columbia team, and before he had finished running back the punt he had the ball down behind the goal. It was at the corner of the field, and Bloss kicked out to Deghuee in a good position for Goodale to kick the goal.

The Hoboken band, which Stevens had brought across the river along with 2,300 rooters, was all set to strike up the victory march for the snake dance when Goodale added the three points at the last minute of the game. After a punt, the Stevens backs alternated in making three first downs in rapid-fire order against the weakening, broken-spirited, battered Columbia line. The ball rested on the New York 25-yard line. Columbia stiffened for a minute and held Bloss. Two forward passes were incomplete and Stevens held the ball on a fourth down directly before the goal posts. Goodale here dropped back to the 32-yard line, scratched a line in the turf, took the snap and booted the pigskin between the posts just before time was called.

The Stevens team has only one thing in its disfavor. It sticks to the old prejudice against modernity in football, and enters games without numbering the players. All of the big teams have long since adopted this aid to the spectators, and the engineers from Jersey should follow suit.

RUTGERS ELEVEN WINS.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Nov. 8.—In one of the stiffest gridiron battles of the season Rutgers defeated Boston College at Fenway Park this afternoon, 13 to 7. Both lines proved invincible at critical moments, but the visitors showed the cleaner work in holding onto the ball, and thereby triumphed. Boston College suffered severely through fumbling. The game was rough, both sides being penalized.

Rutgers was first to score, making a touchdown in the first period after a fumble which gave them possession of the ball in Boston College territory. Redmond blocked Fitzpatrick's punt, Garrett falling on the ball on the 25-yard line. Interference with a forward pass advanced the ball to the 15-yard line. Two rushes netted 10 yards, and then Boston College was penalized 2½ yards and Gardner took the ball over for a touchdown on the next play. He failed at the try for a goal.

End runs of 25 yards by Fitzpatrick and 20 by Corrigan were features of the second period, in which McElany finally went over for a touchdown and Fitzpatrick kicked the goal, putting Boston College in the lead, 7 to 6.

Rutgers came back strong in the third period, however, and in five plays after the kick-off crossed the goal line. A forward pass for 8 yards, French's run around left end for 3 yards, and Duffy's dive through centre for first down, followed by the same player's 30-yard run around right end for a touchdown, were the leading factors. Gardner kicked the goal, making the score: Rutgers, 13; Boston College, 7.

The home team worked the ball to Rutgers 19-yard line, and, finding it could not make this distance, essayed a forward pass. Rutgers securing possession of the ball. The period closed with Boston College holding the pigskin on its own 48-yard line.

Boston College opened the fourth period with its best forward passing of the game, two from Fitzpatrick to Urban landing the ball on Rutgers' 30-yard line. Corrigan smashed through centre for 6 yards, but his team was penalized half the distance to its goal for unnecessary roughness, and Fitzpatrick was forced to punt. Baker returned the kick, and shortly afterward intercepted a Boston forward pass, taking the ball to Boston College's 30-yard line. Rutgers had the ball on first down on Boston's 29-yard line as the game ended.

PRESIDENTS SCARE PANTHERS AT CLOSE

MISSED GOAL SAVES PITT

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 8.—The University of Pittsburgh football machine nailed the championship of Western Pennsylvania this afternoon, when the Panthers defeated the Washington and Jefferson team, 7 to 6, in the most exciting and hotly contested game ever played on Forbes Field. From the opening whistle until Referee Nathan Tufts signaled to the players that the game was over, the 35,000 spectators were treated to an exhibition of crisp modern football that excelled anything Pittsburghers have ever seen on the gridiron.

Pitt's supposedly weak line gave a wonderful exhibition and turned back W. and J.'s plunging backs three times inside the ten-yard line. But the third time, late in the final period, they failed to protect Andy Hastings when he attempted to punt out of danger after W. and J. had surrendered the ball on downs and Wickersham rushed through, blocked the kick, and fell on the ball as it rolled over the goal line. Several minutes before this unfortunate break—unfortunate from a Pitt standpoint—the Pitt line had turned back the wonderful Erickson three times for losses and held Full Back Smith to a gain of two yards, and the spectators had just about made up their minds that the Presidents did not have the punch necessary to score.

Misses an Easy Goal.

Self-confidence probably cost the visitors a tie score. The touchdown was made in the corner of the field, but Stein, goal kicker for Washington and Jefferson, elected to carry the ball out rather than try the kickout for position. Captain Carroll pleaded with him, then Tufts took a hand and brought the ball out to Stein. The big tackle waved his team mates away and stepped forward to kick as if the angle was an easy one. But he failed miserably.

Pitt already had seven points to her credit, due to a touchdown and goal scored in the second period, and her supporters heaved a sigh of relief. The relief was short lived, however, for after the kickoff and an interchange of punts, Erickson broke loose for a 20-yard run, bringing the ball into Pitt's territory.

A forward pass was tried and gave Jimmy Morrow, Pitt's quarter back, who has been out all season with a bad leg and was substituted for McCracken a few minutes earlier, a chance to earn the gratitude of every student and alumnus of the university. Morrow grabbed the oval right out of the hands of the Washington and Jefferson back and carried it deep into the visitors' territory, eliminating the danger that threatened the Panthers.

Pitt's score was the direct result of the brilliant playing of Andy Hastings, who was by far the most consistent ground gainer of the day. The sorrel-topped back returned a punt 41 yards to the W. and J. 34-yard line and followed it up by splitting the line for a first down on the 23-yard mark. With the visitors' line set to stop another plunge, Hastings double-passed to Davis, who tossed a forward to Laughran, subbing for Captain De Hart, who was forced out in the first period with a bad leg. Laughran was dropped on the 4-yard line. Hastings needed two tries to get over and he kicked the goal.

Wash-Jeff had an excellent chance to score in the first period when Smith fell on a punt fumbled by Davies on the Pitt 15-yard line. Smith was sent into the line for three yards and Erickson made four off tackles, but Pitt smeared the Great Lakes star on the next play, and on the fourth attempt Hastings grounded a forward pass, Pitt taking the ball on downs.

Presidents Miss a Chance.

The visitors kicked often on the first down and the ball changed hands several times in the first period, with Pitt having the better of the play. After Pitt had scored, W. and J. again had the ball in Pitt's territory. With the ball on the 10-yard line it looked as if the Presidents would tie the score. But, as on the first occasion, the Pitt line braced, and the forward pass was resorted to, being grounded behind the line by Davies for Pitt.

With the peril almost over, Laughran got around W. and J.'s right end for 37 yards, but Carroll spoiled the next two Pitt plays and Hastings tried for a drop kick from the 27-yard line, missing by inches. W. and J. continued her kicking game and Pitt had the ball in midfield when the half ended.

Pitt was well on the way to a score in the third period, when Ellson intercepted a forward pass on the 19-yard line. Pitt got the ball back immediately and carried it to the 14-yard mark, Hastings tearing through the visitors' line for short gains and Laughran skirting the end for two advances of 11 yards. Hastings was forced to try the field goal route, and for the second time failed.

Ellson punted on the first down and Pitt started another march goalward. This time it was Tom Davies who did the work. The fleet footed back skirted the end for five yards and was brought down from behind with only ten yards to go. Again Pitt's offensive was stopped and Hastings missed his third attempt at placement goal, Carroll blocking the ball.

The visitors appeared to be playing to tire the Pitt team and kicked at once. Pitt returned the punt and on the next interchange a Pitt man interfered with the catch and W. and J. was given the ball on Pitt's forty-five-yard mark. At this point the visitors showed their best sustained offense of the game, carrying the ball to the ten-yard mark. Smith and Erickson both were called upon twice to make the remaining ten yards but failed. Pitt went wild, only to have near heart failure in the next minute when Wickersham blocked the punt and scored for the visitors.

Pitt outplayed the visitors for the most part and the breaks of the game went against her. Without Carroll, Loucks and Erickson, the little Washington aggregation would not have had a chance. The two end men played wonderful defensive football and the half back tried hard to evade Pitt tacklers.

Besides Hastings, Pitt's stars were Davis and Loughran. The latter had several long runs and the former displayed an uncanny ability to shake off tacklers. His best performance was the fifty-six-yard run. De Hart, the Pitt captain, was only in play a few minutes, and Morrow, the best quarter back in the university, was only allowed to play a while in the last period. Three regular linemen were out also.

CHICAGO BEATS MICHIGAN

Brilliant Aerial Attack Conquers Wolverines by Score of 13 to 0.

CHICAGO, Nov. 8.—Playing before a crowd of 25,000 persons, Chicago triumphed over Michigan, its historic football foe, 13 to 0, today in a game in which forward passes played an important part. It was the first test of strength between these two elevens since the memorable 2 to 0 victory Chicago scored over the Wolverines in 1905, and Stagg Field was jammed to stand capacity.

Brilliant use of the forward pass turned the tide in Chicago's favor after unsuccessful attempts had been made to batter down the Michigan defense. The Maroons, failing to pierce the Michigan forward wall from the 1-yard line, opened up a dazzling array of forward passes that resulted in a touchdown in the second period and another in the fourth.

GOLDEN TORNADO BEATEN.

ATLANTA, Ga., Nov. 8.—Washington and Lee defeated Georgia Tech here this afternoon, 3 to 0. It was a hard-fought game, but the Generals outplayed Tech throughout. Mattox drop-kicked a goal in the fourth quarter for the only score of the game. The ball was kicked over from the 20-yard line.

The Generals kept the ball mostly in Tech territory. Raines and Cobb did herculean work for the winners, tearing through Tech's line for big gains on numerous occasions. The Tech backs failed to gain consistently and the line yielded to the superior charging of the Generals. Flowers failed on several attempts to dropkick a goal, and only once or twice displayed his famed broken field running. Judy Harlan, the mighty Tech full back, got into the fray in the last half, and gained fairly well.

Al Exendine, the W. and L. coach, is a Glenn Warner pupil, and the formations of W. and L. are those now used by Pittsburgh, the only victor over Georgia Tech since 1914.

This was the third meeting of the elevens, and each has now won one game, the other being a tie.

ANOTHER FOR OHIO STATE.

Chick Harley Stars in 20 to 0 Victory Over Purdue Eleven.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Nov. 8.—Captain Chick Harley's entrance into the game at the start of the second quarter proved the psychological factor in Ohio State's defeat of Purdue today, 20 to 0. Hampered by the absence of two star linemen, Flowers and Holtkamp, and minus the services of Harley, Ohio State was unable to make much progress during the first period.

In the second quarter Ohio State opened up and Harley, with an elusive run of thirty yards in which he shook off three tacklers, scored the first touchdown. Ohio State's eagerness caused frequent penalties and two 20-yard runs for touchdowns by Captain Harley were not counted.

HOLY CROSS SWAMPS COLBY

Special to The New York Times.

WORCESTER, Mass., Nov. 8.—The powerful Holy Cross team played all around Colby here today and won a one-sided game, 41 to 0. The Maine eleven was on the defensive almost throughout the game, for it could do nothing on the offensive against Holy Cross.

Only twice during the game did Colby register a first down. Coach O'Donnell used practically a second team during the second half. Holy Cross used straight football during all the game. Gagnon, the fleet-footed Purple back, covered plenty of ground. His two runs, one of fifty and the other of sixty yards, netted Holy Cross two scores. In the third period Niles, the Colby star, had his leg fractured and was removed to a local hospital.

PRINCETON FRESHMEN WIN.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Nov. 8.—The Princeton freshmen football team flattened the Harvard freshmen eleven this afternoon in the Stadium by a score of 13 to 0. Sparkling open game and successful end runs figured in the two Tiger touchdowns, and likewise in two drives for Crimson goal line which ended a half-yard from their objective, Harvard taking the ball on downs. Another Princeton score went amiss when Gilroy missed an easy pass behind the Harvard goal line.

BILLIARD TITLE IS SHROUDED IN MIST

Upsets and Surprises Expected in Remaining Games of Three-Cushion Tourney.

Although the national three-cushion billiard championship tournament started in Cleveland last Thursday and several of the forty-five games on the schedule have already been played, the ultimate winner of the title is still shrouded in doubt. With ten of the best players in the country entered in the event upsets and surprises have already been scored and can be expected during the remainder of the matches.

Byron Gillette of Buffalo is a strong player, but local followers of the carom game did not expect him to defeat Charley Otis, the Brooklyn entry. Otis had shown excellent form in his practice matches and started the tourney one of the favorites to win the crown. This upset was the first surprise of the titular play. Charles McCourt, a former champion, turned the tables on Bob Cannefax, the most recent champion, in the second game on the schedule. This was not wholly unexpected, for Cannefax had played erratically in his practice matches. At times he played with exceptional skill. At other times during his practices he played very disappointingly.

Prior to the start of the tourney Otis had taken the measure of Cannefax in a three nights' match, and had shown such fine execution and strong safety play that it was fully expected the Brooklyn player would defeat Cannefax the first time they met in Cleveland. He didn't. Instead Cannefax beat him. All of which emphasizes the uncertainty of billiards. It is this uncertainty that arouses and maintains interest in tournaments of this kind.

Jess Lean of Cincinnati has also been defeated, but it would not be at all surprising if he showed greatly improved form during his remaining matches. He, too, is a strong player and, when in stroke, can hold his own with the best of them. Pierre Maupome of Milwaukee is another player who can play the angle game with all the finesse necessary to win titles.

Thus far some of the players entered in the tournament have shown signs of nervousness in their games. Others have been handicapped by unfortunate breaks. Of all the styles of billiard play there is none in which the breaks of the game enter to the extent that they do in three cushions. In a great measure this explains why a player will win one game and lose another when playing against the same opponent.

There are still a sufficient number of games remaining to be played to permit of many changes taking place.

Baseball Briefs.

While there is some sentiment in the National League in favor of a schedule of 168 games next season, a majority of the club owners will vote for a return to the 154 game system, in vogue up to the 1919 season.

Both ball parks in St. Louis are drawing in revenue for their owners. The National League park is used by a professional soccer league, and the field used for baseball by the Browns serves as the home football gridiron for St. Louis University.

Ambrose Puttman, a pitcher with the Yankees in the early days of the old Hilltop grounds at 168th Street and Broadway, is now a prosperous oil merchant in the Middle West.

Dick Hoblitzel, former first baseman of the Boston Red Sox, is planning to resign his commission in the army and return to professional baseball. Hobby has been connected with the Dental Corps. It might be added that he underwent two operations while the war was on in order that he might be accepted for service.

Among the early birds, as far as the 1920 season is concerned, is Catcher Eddie Ainsmith of the Detroit Tigers. Ainsmith has signed a contract for next season and he is now in Texas on a hunting and fishing expedition.

While the argument is on as to whether Roush or Hornsby led the National League in batting somebody raises the point about Cravath. Gavvy hit many points above either Roush or Hornsby, but he dropped out of the regular ranks after becoming manager of the Phils.

Gainesville, Fla., residents still are hoping that the Giants will return there to do their training next March, but it would not be surprising if McGraw decided upon some other city. The Gainesville field falls somewhat below major league requirements.

It is expected that the new All-Canadian League will add Montreal to its circuit for the coming season. Montreal is free territory since the city was passed up by the International League.

Dave Shean, who was let out by the Boston Red Sox in mid-season, received an offer a few days ago to take over the management of a Virginia League club, but he turned it down. Dave may land with a higher class league and is not inclined to sign now and regret later.

George Columbia Smith seems to be a fixture in Philadelphia, as he has signed with the Phils for 1920. Smith has been shifted around the big leagues considerably, usually to be recalled by the Giants, but now the recalling apparently is over.

SCHOOLBOY RUNNERS TIED FOR LAURELS

Stuyvesant and Erasmus Wind Up Series on Even Terms at 18 Points Each.

The Public Schools Athletic League's championship triangular cross-country running tournament concluded yesterday with the fourth series of runs held over a two and one-half mile course in Van Cortlandt Park. As a result of yesterday's races Stuyvesant H. S. and Erasmus Hall H. S. are deadlocked for the title, each having scored eighteen points in the tournament.

A method of deciding the tie will be adopted Tuesday at a meeting of the High School Games Committee. At the same time a protest entered by the Stuyvesant officials will be discussed. The east side schoolboys have protested the race held last week in which Richmond Hill H. S. defeated Stuyvesant by three points. The score was 26 to 29. The Stuyvesant hill-and-dalers contend in their protest that the officials at the runs were lax in their compilation of the order of finish. In the event that the protest is upheld it is probable the disputed race will be ordered re-run before the scholastic championship race scheduled for Nov. 22.

Both Stuyvesant and Erasmus Hall teams scored three victories and one second place. Manual Training H. S. and Evander Childs H. S. are tied for third position, with 16 points each. These schools have each registered three victories and one third place.

Stuyvesant yesterday defeated Curtis H. S. and Richmond Hill H. S., emerging from the race with the low total of 30 points. Jermin led the victorious team home, covering the course in 15 minutes 18 seconds. This was the fastest time returned by any one of the great number of schoolboys who participated in the five races conducted.

De Witt Clinton H. S. defeated Townsend Harris Hall by 15 to 40, making the first perfect score of the tournament. In this race Bryant was also scheduled to start, but defaulted. Manual Training and Flushing were rivals in another race, which went to the former team by 25 to 40, Jamaica also defaulting. In the other races Commerce and Erasmus Hall were successful.

PLAY FOR BILLIARD TITLE.

N. A. A. B. P. Metropolitan Class C Tournament Starts Tomorrow.

Billiard competitions that lead up to the national championships of the National Association of Amateur Billiard Players will have their beginning in the Metropolitan Class C 18.2 balkline championship tournament. It will be the first of the contests of importance to be decided under the direction of the National Association and will begin tomorrow night at the Rational Recreation Academy in Brooklyn. At the completion of this tournament, which is in the way of a preliminary, the National Class C championship will follow at Lawler Brothers' Academy.

The entry list for the Metropolitan Class C event is thoroughly representative of the leading players in this section. It includes Ferdinand Adams Unger, the former national class champion, of Montclair, N. J.; Robert J. Steinbugler, recent winner of the Metropolitan Handicap; Louis A. Servatius, the remarkable veteran of Manhattan; Sidney Brussel, who has stood among the prize winners of the national tournaments; Frank Boyd, one of the Brooklyn stars; Charles Steinbugler, the young Flatbush expert.

THIRTY-SIX RIDERS IN SIX-DAY RACE

Annual Cycle Grind at Garden Will Have Remarkable Field of Entrants.

Eighteen high-class teams will face the starter in the coming six-day race at Madison Square Garden during the week of Nov. 30 to Dec. 6, making up the first real international contest in five years. Owing to the war, it was impossible during this period to bring the foreign cracks to this side, forcing the six-day race management to make up the field from good and bad American riders.

With at least six teams made up from the stars of the European tracks, Manager Young can find room for only twelve teams from the American talent, and only riders that have been "in the money" in six-day races will be selected. Many riders of exceptional ability have been developed, both here and abroad, since the war ended, which means that the coming race will be the most keenly contested in years.

Such stars as Goullet, Magin, McNamara, Madden, Hill, Hanley, Wiley, Coburn, Kopsky, and Champion Ray Eaton are sure to represent America, but it will be no walk-over for them, with twelve of the best foreign men in the grind, among the better known riders being Egg, Brocco, Dupuy, Verri, Bolloni, Girardengo, the Italian champion; Thys, winner of the Brussels race, and Spiessons and Buysse, the leading Belgian riders.

The foreign agent for the race has called a meeting for today in Paris, when terms will be offered the riders. Little trouble is expected in signing the men, as a foreign rider can double his income during the summer in Europe if he can win the New York race. Egg and Dupuy won the race in 1916 and were easily the biggest money getters in Europe the following two years. Egg has already agreed to terms, but insists on being paired with one of the leading foreigners.

GOOD HANDS VITAL ASSET IN BASEBALL

Matty Points Out Similarity in Equipment of Maranville and Honus Wagner.

By CHRISTY MATHEWSON.

"Why doesn't McGraw get some one to play the infield like Wagner?" a baseball follower—but not a very close follower—asked me the other day, lamenting the present aging and weakening Giant infield. "McGraw ought to be able to get some one like Wagner. The New York club has plenty of coin."

"There was never but one Wagner," I replied, "and I doubt if baseball ever produces another like him. However, I saw a story in one of the Cincinnati papers the other day that McGraw is dickering for a man a whole lot like Honus. I don't know whether the report is true or not."

"Who is that?" demanded the eager fan.

"Maranville," I replied, and my listener, always a strong New York rooter, looked disappointed.

"Why, he's nothing like the Big Dutchman," he countered, evidently disappointed.

Offhand, the casual observer would not believe there was any similarity between Wagner and the midget, Maranville. The "Big Dutchman" could almost take the little Boston short stop, tuck him in his pistol pocket, and walk away without noticing Maranville was with him.

But the Rabbit has that greatest asset of all star ballplayers—"good hands." Just what does this expression mean? Well, if you ever shook hands with Maranville, you would know. Good hands in the baseball sense are big and powerful ones. When Maranville shakes hands, he has a great grip. With such hands, a player can make the ball stick in his glove. In this particular, which is one of the most important and valuable in big league baseball, Maranville resembles the big Honus.

I have seen managers size up new ballplayers by shaking hands with them. I have heard of sharp baseball men who have almost decided to release a promising prospect because of the weakness of the newcomer's grip when he shook. On the other hand, I recall when Arthur Fletcher first joined the Giants. After McGraw had given him the customary shake, he remarked:

"There's a fellow who ought to make good. He has a great pair of hands."

And McGraw was right.

Of course, the similarity between Wagner and Maranville fades out, after the comparison of the hands, except that each carries or carried the assets of a great ball player. Wagner was big and clumsy looking in action, while Maranville, probably because of his size, appears fast and rather graceful. The Rabbit's hands are all out of drawing with the rest of his architecture.

And I have no official information whether McGraw is trying to get Maranville or not. Of course, we all know he will make some changes in his infield next season, not being satisfied with it as it stands at present, but I should say that Arthur Fletcher is the one man of the present four who is almost sure to have on the Giant spangles when the bell rings next Spring. Perhaps, Mac figures he could use Maranville somewhere else.

I don't want the reader to get from what I say the idea that Wagner was slow and clumsy. In fact, he was just the opposite in his prime and a great ground coverer. He also carried a wonderful wing. When I first saw the Big Dutchman, he was playing right field for the Pittsburgh club. That was in 1900, and he certainly could whip the old apple to the plate from the depths of the ball yard.

Worrying the Pitcher.

It was then discovered that, in spite of his apparent awkwardness, he had great ground covering ability and a wonderful pair of hands. He was also the sort of base runner who was very annoying to a pitcher, especially on second base. He would dance away from the bag and take tremendous leads. If a pitcher tried to catch him, because he was so powerful, he could get a quick start and return to the base and usually make a monkey of the twirler who whirled to nail him. He liked to keep this up to get a pitcher's goat and often succeeded.

Honus also used to worry us on the old Giants a lot with the double steal, particularly Frank Bowerman. He seemed to possess an almost clairvoyant knack of being able to outguess the catcher. If the throw was made to second base, Wagner would have a big lead and come on home. If the short throw was made to the pitcher, as we used to make it sometimes, he would usually be found resting comfortably on the bag with the other runner arriving at second.

Only once do I remember slipping it over on the Dutchman. With Wagner on third and Kitty Bransfield on first, Bowerman threw the ball hard, and it looked as if it were going through to second base. I saw the Dutchman start for home out of the tail of my eye, so I jumped and speared the throw. We caught Wagner standing up. But Honus would show a pitcher and catcher up more times than he would be shown up on this play.

Bashful Big Leaguer.

Honus was one of the most bashful men I ever knew. No pressure could ever get him to attend a banquet, except the annual one of the Hot Stove League in Pittsburgh, where he knew all the diners well. He also hated barnstorming trips, which usually included some social functions. If the Pirates in their palmy days were going on a barnstorming junket to the coast he would write and say he would like to take his brother. The club would reply that it was all right for him to bring his brother at the management's expense, and then Honus would stall some other way. I don't think the Pacific Coast ever saw Honus Wagner.

But I want to add there was one thing he wasn't bashful about, and that was punching a ball on the inside of the plate. Ordinarily it was sure death to pitch to him on the inside. He was a natural leftfield hitter, and he would get the ball in front of him and drive it over third base with terrific force. There are not many such blushing, bashful boys entering the big leagues nowadays.

One season Wagner carried his automobile all around the circuit with him and spent most of his money that way. He would ship it from Pittsburgh to Philadelphia, drive it to New York, and then ship to Boston. He would usually take up with some one player on the club and make him his pal. This was, as a rule, one of the younger men, and he would coach him along. Sometimes he would appoint himself personal coach for two or three youngsters. He was very generous in trying to help young ball players. He was largely responsible for the successful development of John Dots Miller. They were great friends when John Dots first joined the Pirates.

Many times I am asked whether there is a dearth of baseball material at present and whether old timers like Wagner were better than present-day performers.

I regard Honus as one of the greatest performers and boosters baseball ever had. If he had had the fighting temperament of Ty Cobb, and had played with that spirit behind him, in my opinion, he would have been a greater performer than Cobb and of more value to his team. Wagner never fought the crowd and the other players the way Ty Cobb does. His was the placid, mechanical, persistent spirit.

I don't think there is any great dearth of material at present. Devlin, the old Giant third-sacker for instance, was a great man and a heady player, but I don't believe that he or any other old-timer was as good at third base as Heinie Groh is today. I think Heinie is the best third baseman in baseball.

The old-timers always look the best to the old fans. Only a baseball big leaguer's reputation gets better with age—not his work. As far as I know, age helps only wine and shoes.

How tough is your beard?

When the water is cold or hard
—when it is slow work getting up a lather with ordinary shaving soap
—then shaving shows you just how tough your beard really is.

YOUR beard is chiefly composed of keratin, the same horn-like substance that makes the fingernails hard and sharp. Each hair is surrounded by an oil film that tends to repel water and keep the soap from working.

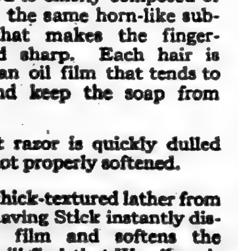
The sharpest razor is quickly dulled if the beard is not properly softened.

The creamy thick-textured lather from Woodbury's Shaving Stick instantly dissolves the oil film and softens the keratin. You will find that Woodbury's Shaving Stick forms its rich abundant lather and softens the toughest beard quickly even when the water is hard or cold.

From the first minute that the brush is applied you will experience a pleasurable sensation of lather comfort that you have never before enjoyed.

The after-effect on the skin will be a welcome surprise, for the face is left smooth and refreshed.

After your first purchase, it is entirely unnecessary to buy a container with each new stick. Every druggist is ready to supply you with both the stick in the metal container at 35 cents and re-fills at 25 cents. The Andrew Jergens Company, New York, Cincinnati, and Perth, Ontario.



What soaking in warm water for several minutes does to your fingernails, shaving soap must do instantly to the beard

ROYCE ROOLS FIRST IN BOWIE HANDICAP

LEADS CUDGEL BY A LENGTH

Mad Hatter, Poorly Handled, Gets Show Money—Jack Stuart and Fort Bliss Other Winners.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Md., Nov. 8.—The biggest surprise of the racing season was sprung here today when W. T. Wilkinson's Royce Rools, a horse which has been defeated by some very common performers, sneaked down in front to capture the $10,000 Bowie Handicap at a mile and a half from a field that contained the cream of America's distance runners. Royce Rools won by a length and a half from Commander J. K. L. Ross's Cudgel, while S. C. Hildreth's Mad Hatter was third, with Boniface and Exterminator bringing up the rear.

The result of the race gave rise to a great deal of caustic comment, for, as a form upset, it rivals anything that has occurred this season. Royce Rools had made a miserable showing in his last start at Laurel, finishing fourth to such horses as Brideman, Slippery Elm and Midnight Sun, twenty-three lengths back of the winner. On that occasion he carried 112 pounds and today, with only five pounds less, he was good enough to beat some of the best horses in the country. The entry of Royce Rools was once refused because of inconsistent racing, but he was restored to good standing after passing into new hands. His race today was the biggest upset of his career. He was the outsider in the betting and paid $31.40 to holders of $2 mutuel tickets.

While Royce Rools won the race handily as it was run, being in receipt of many pounds from Cudgel and Exterminator, he was indebted to Jockey Fator for the chance to gain the victory. The Hildreth rider rode a very poor race with Mad Hatter, which was the favorite, and, through his lack of judgment, deprived the colt of whatever chance he had to win. Cudgel ran a very good race and had no excuses, but Exterminator, which was expected to show much at this distance, was never a factor and appeared to be raced out when it came to the final test.

Fator never gave Mad Hatter a chance to run his race, keeping him under a strong pull all the way to the head of the stretch, when he had to go to the outside and lose ground. While going wide with Mad Hatter, Fator permitted Royce Rools to steal through on the rail and come down a winner. Mad Hatter was full of running throughout the contest and had his head pulled high to prevent him from going as he pleased.

Mad Hatter in Front.

Fator had all the best of the early part of the race, and came past the stands the first time with Mad Hatter leading by a small margin, but enough to gain the lead and the rail position at the first turn. Once at the turn, Fator made his first mistake by remaining in the deep going and permitting Boniface, stablemate of Cudgel, to come up on the outside. Fator did not attempt to let out with his mount, but held him in, and when Boniface came up and took the lead Fator soon found himself shut off. Half way through the backstretch Cudgel moved up and put Mad Hatter into a pocket, and the Hildreth colt raced in that position all the way to the far turn, when Fator had to take up and go to the outside to avoid interference.

The fact that Cudgel, always a slow beginner, was up with the pace from the very start, was an indication that the race was being run slowly, and that all hands were waiting for a pacemaker. Exterminator was the only one of the favored ones which failed to show speed. He was last from the start, and seemed unable to improve his position at any time.

Boniface led all the way to the head of the stretch, but on the last part of the turn Cudgel moved up and was almost abreast of the leader, while Mad Hatter was third and on the outside. All went wide at the turn, and Royce Rools, which had been kept off the early pace and had been running back near Exterminator, crept up, sneaked through on the rail and saved a length or more by the move.

Once the horses were straightened out Fator gave Mad Hatter his head, but it was too late, and though he made a fine effort he was hopelessly beaten. Cudgel, which is at his best in a stretch drive, made a game effort also, but Royce Rools had the light weight as well as the lead and was able to last to the end.

Jack Stuart Takes Handicap.

It was a bad day all around for the Hildreth colors, as the New Yorker lost another race in the fifth event when his Lord Brighton finished last in a field of four in the Southern Handicap at a mile and a sixteenth. This race went to F. Cook's Jack Stuart, with Leochares second, and Slippery Elm third. Lord Brighton carried 120 pounds in the race and seemed unable to concede weight to the winner. He ran a good race, but was never able to keep up, and once Jack Stuart raced out in front on the back stretch Lord Brighton was defeated. Fator made one effort with him and this failed. Leochares raced with Jack Stuart right to the head of the stretch, when the winner began to draw away and the aged racer could not keep up with him.

Aside from the feature races, a good card was arranged for the crowd, which taxed the capacity of the grounds. Good horses were in evidence in all but one of the events and close finishes marked at least two of the contests.

The first race went to James Fitzsimmons's Liola, which graduated from the maiden class in a close finish with Clarabella in a six-furlong dash for two-year-olds. Colonel Murphy set the pace all the way to the final sixteenth, but weakened there and Liola came on to gain the decision. Clarabella passed Colonel Murphy and beat him for the place.

Lawrence Waterbury's Torchbearer, a well played favorite, went down to defeat in the third race, at six furlongs, when W. Durnam's Fort Bliss nosed him out for the winner's share. Hauberk was third. Fator had the Mount on Torchbearer and gave another very bad exhibition of riding. Torchbearer was well up throughout the early running and was in a contending position at the head of the stretch, but Fator did not make a move with his mount till it was too late and Fort Bliss was able to hold the lead despite his heavy weight. Fator was sitting straight up on his horse until the last sixteenth, when he made a hopeless effort to get in and failed by a nose.

Weldship Wins 'Chase.

E. M. Weld's Weldship came back with a good performance and won the Green Spring Valley Steeplechase at two miles and a quarter from Flare, Stonewood, and others. Weldship was in front all the way, opening up a gap of several lengths at one time, but had to be ridden hard at the finish to beat Flare, which came with a rush in the last turn of the field.

A. L. Austin's Belario romped off with the sixth race, a mile and a sixteenth test for three-year-olds and upward, defeating the favorite, War Smoke, with Dorcas third. Belario was the long shot of the day, paying $32.60 for a $2 ticket. Weiner kept the horse off the early pace and brought him up on the last turn, saved ground, and came into the stretch with a rush. War Smoke, which had been well up all the way, was raced into submission in the final furlong, and Belario took the race with a length to spare.

Lawrence Waterbury found consolation in the last race, when his Tom McTaggart ran another good race and defeated some good ones at a mile and an eighth. Irish Kiss was second, and Woodtrap third. Paddy Whack, which was a recent winner, was among the also rans. Tom McTaggart did not appear dangerous in the race until he reached the head of the stretch, when he came with a rush and caught Irish Kiss, which had set the pace from the start.

Breaks 96 of a Hundred Flying Targets, Despite Haze Which Mars the Sport.

A haze which hung over Long Island Sound made it difficult for the marksmen of the New York Athletic Club to distinguish the targets at the Travers Island traps yesterday afternoon, and as a result the scores turned in were poor. Altogether forty-six gunners participated in the shoot.

The high scratch gunner was M. McVey, who broke 96 clay pigeons out of a possible 100. The high handicap score went to McCutcheon, who, with an allowance of 18, cracked 99 targets. In addition to winning the Travers Island cup, C. L. King also won the Ghost trophy event. The gunners with a 25 won a leg on the Haslin and Monthly cups. T. H. Lewis, with a score of 49 out of a possible 50, obtained a leg on the Buermeyer cup. The special scratch prize went to G. H. Hutchins and G. F. McCutcheon drew down the special handicap prize.

BANKER-GOLFERS IN PLAY.

Novel System of Scoring Gives Guaranty Trust Victory on Links.

When it comes to the intricacies of golf, leave it to the New York bank employes. Not satisfied with the match, the medal play, the Nassau system and other devices of scoring, yesterday they introduced a method all their own and one where originality is evident. The occasion was the tournament at Fox Hills for the representative banking men of Manhattan. Nine institutions entered five-men teams, and there were some really good golfers on hand. But the Fox Hills natives and club members looked on in amazement at the close of the day while those credit and debit experts added and subtracted, divided and multiplied hundreds of figures into the final result which showed that the Guaranty Trust Company team had won. There were never so many points scored before in one day on the golf links in the history of the ancient and honorable game. It looked like the aggregate of a dozen billiard matches.

For instance, the Guaranty Trust Company won, and yet they didn't. The National City Employes, captained by F. W. Potter of the Westchester County Country Club, actually had a lower total of strokes, but evidently were not so adept at juggling. Potter circled the Fox Hills round in 76 for the low score of the day. He went out in 33 and back in 40. This, when added to the totals of his team mates, gave the National City golfers a total medal play tally of 438, whereas Guaranty had 440.

"Fair enough," said the major domo of the tourney, "but, according to our own system, the Guaranty is the victorious team." And so he explained, or rather he didn't explain, that the bankers counted Potter with 24 points instead of 76 strokes. Then Starring, who made the round in 89, got 49 points. Thence it is a problem for the accountants. The relative points on the bankers' system follow:

GUARANTY.		NATIONAL CITY.
Lee	57	Potter	94
Bishop	77	Starring	49
Hanson	84	Pritchard	66
Marvin	62	Fowler	71
Total	341	Total	335

The Equitable Trust Company's team finished in third place with 158 and the Federal Reserve Bank was fourth with 87. Down near the foot of the last-named team Kellogg and Wendell received minus scores for some reason, but harken to the scores of the five other teams! Although Equitable totaled 481 strokes and the Federal Reserve 500, the fact remains that the others must have wandered well up into the thousands.

The committee announced that the Chase National Bank was in fifth place with minus 353 points. Then followed the American Express with minus 263; Central Union, minus 150; Irving National, 137, and the Bankers Trust, minus 18.

DECIDE OWN GOLF HANDICAP

Players in New Jersey Tourney Adopt Novel Scoring Method.

One of the most interesting of the late Fall golf tourneys was played yesterday at the Upper Montclair Club in New Jersey. It was a blind handicap, with each contestant deciding his own handicap allowance, and the prize went to the man whose net score came nearest to a number selected by the committee. The committee named 75, and E. I. Schulhof took the honors with a net of 83. He completed the round in 116, and allowed himself the liberality of thirty-three strokes.

Other players follow in order: R. B. Burton, 103, 20—83; W. A. Johns, 121, 35—86; J. B. Harfford, 103, 17—86; E. W. Whitfield, 107, 20—87; A. H. White, 111, 1—110.

The windup of the golfing year will be observed next Saturday, and will be followed by a stag dinner at the clubhouse, when prizes for the season's tournaments will be presented with due ceremony.

JACK DEMPSEY INJURED.

Heavyweight Champion Will Be Forced to Use Crutches for a Time.

BATON ROUGE, La., Nov. 8.—Jack Dempsey, world's heavyweight champion, will be unable to box for several weeks as the result of injuries received last night during the performance of a circus with which he is traveling. Dempsey, who arrived here today, will be forced to use crutches for some time.

CLINTON SWIMMERS WIN.

Erasmus Hall and Manual Training Also Score Victories in Tourney.

Another Manhattan victory was scored in the Public Schools Athletic League dual swimming tournament at Evander Childs yesterday when the De Witt Clinton H. S. watermen defeated Curtis H. S. in one of the three meets contested at the second installment of the tournament. The margin of the Red and Black success was measured by 46 to 6, the most convincing victory of any yet recorded in the tournament. De Witt Clinton started with a defeat in the first day's activities last week, so that the team is now trailing Stuyvesant H. S. and Manual Training H. S., which are tied with two victories in as many meets.

In the other two meets contested Erasmus Hall H. S. defeated H. S. of Commerce by a score of 39 to 14, and Manual Training H. S. defeated Boys' H. S. by 29 to 24. Stuyvesant H. S. and Bryant H. S. were credited with victories by default when their scheduled rival teams failed to appear.

In registering its victory De Witt Clinton's team captured all six events on the program. Lowenthal was one of the big guns in the success of the team, scoring two second places. He finished second to his teammate, Shoemaker, in the plunge, trailing by a matter of one foot, and in the fancy dive he finished second, four points behind his teammate, Ostrow, who win with 26.5 points.

The Manual Training Boys' meet developed the closest competition of the series, the result hinging on the relay, the last event on the program. This went to the Manual Training lads, and gave them the meet by five points over Boys. Previous to this event Boys' swimmers had registered four victories, leading in the 50 and 100 yard swims, the plunge, and the fancy dive. Manual Training swimmers got home first in the 220-yard swim and relay and managed to annex point placements in the other events which gave them victory.

C. C. N. Y. BEATEN IN RUN.

Lafayette's Cross-Country Team Scores Easy Victory, 15 to 40.

The College of the City of New York was decisively beaten in a cross-country run by the score of 15 to 40 by Lafayette yesterday. All of Lafayette's runners finished ahead of those of the local institution. Bob Crawford, the crack Eastonian, ran away from the field at the start, and covered the first lap of the Van Cortlandt Park Course in 16:46 minutes. He ran the six miles in 34:19 minutes. Kemper of Lafayette was second with 35:52 minutes. Dicker, the first to score for the College of the City of New York, made the course in 39:34 minutes. Coach Mackenzie was not greatly disappointed by the showing of his men, in view of the little practice they have had.

The order in which the men finished and their times follow: Crawford, 34:10; Kemper, 35:52; Heisler, 36:14; McFall, 39:55; Evens, 37:12; Gilbert, 37:34, and Albrecht, 38:15, all of Lafayette; Dicker, 39:34; Rosenblum, 39:40; Cohen, 39:52; Biegler, 41:30, and Siegel, 41:44, of the College of the City of New York.

YALE HARRIERS TRIUMPH.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 8.—Yale scored easy victories over Harvard in both the 'Varsity and freshmen cross-country runs today, the count in the 'Varsity event standing 16 to 62 points, and that in the freshmen 23 to 33. The 1923 youngsters covered a course of three and one-half miles, the 'Varsity one of six.

The two Eli Captains, Harvey Reed of the 'Varsity and Thomas Campbell of the 1923 squad, won individual honors in the respective races. Reed's time was 33:36 4 5, and Campbell's 22:26 1-5. In the 'Varsity event five Yale men, Reed, Crosby, Hillis, Kelly, and Dudley, kept the lead most of the way, but Captain Lewis of Harvard finally finished fifth, crowding Dudley back to sixth place. Otherwise Yale would have made a clean sweep in the event.

SCHOOL CHESS TEAMS BUSY

Seven Games Played in Interborough League—Other Notes.

Seven more matches were contested yesterday in the annual Interborough High School chess championship competition at the Central Y. M. C. A. in Brooklyn, the victors being Boys High, Erasmus, Manual Training, and Curtis over Commerce, Morris, Evander Childs, and Stuyvesant, respectively. Three of the matches were drawn between Commerce and Townsend Harris, Curtis and Richmond Hill, and Commercial and Stuyvesant. The leading teams are those of Commercial, Curtis, and Richmond Hill, each with 1½—½, and Boys and Manual Training, each with 1—0 in matches played.

Columbia, Harvard, Yale, and Princeton will resume their series of annual intercollegiate chess matches this year and will meet in New York on Dec. 22, 23, and 24. Columbia is assured of another strong team, and the prospects of retaining the championship are bright. New York University is expected to make application to the Triangular College League, of which Cornell, Pennsylvania, and C. C. N. Y. are members. Their meeting will also take place in this city during the Christmas holidays.

PENN HARRIERS WIN TRIANGULAR RACE

Lead Columbia and Dartmouth Cross-Country Teams Over Van Cortlandt Course.

The University of Pennsylvania's cross-country team showed its heels to the rest of the field in the triangular run yesterday morning over the championship course at Van Cortlandt Park. In the first minute of the race, the Red and Blue runners grouped themselves at the head of the pack and never lost the lead, although they were hard pressed at moments by Higgins and Turner of Columbia. The Blue and White finished a good second, with Dartmouth completely outclassed from beginning to end. The final figures were: Penn, 21; Columbia, 37; Dartmouth, 66.

The individual star of the run was Willie R. Cummings of Penn, who led the field in the fairly good time of 33:48 although not before he had received the closest shave of his young career at the hands of Walter Higgins of Columbia. The latter, after hanging onto the leaders for five miles, suddenly cut loose with a burst of speed that nearly proved the undoing of the Penn trio who were out in front. During most of the last mile, Higgins led. He maintained his advantage on the down grade near the finish and turned into the home stretch with several feet between him and Cummings.

It was not until the last fifty-yard mark had been passed that the Penn runner closed up even with the Columbia man, and from that point to the finish it was a neck-and-neck sprint between the two. In the last few strides, Cummings forged to the front, when Higgins wavered slightly, and Cummings broke the tape one second ahead of the New York runner. It was a narrow escape for the Penn harrier.

Two other Red and Blue men, Brown and Irwin, were on the heels of the two leaders and captured third and fourth places, respectively. Captain Al Turner of Columbia was fifth, followed at some distance by Penn's leader, Ralph McHale. The first Dartmouth man to cross the line was Crathern, who took tenth place.

The winners carried off first, third, fourth, sixth and seventh places for a total of 21 points. Columbia captured second, fifth, eighth, ninth and thirteenth places, and Dartmouth trailed with tenth, eleventh, fourteenth, fifteenth and sixteenth positions. Five of the first seven runners to finish were from the Penn team, which was made up of Cummings, Brown, Irwin, McHale, Kiviat, Mitchell and Shields.

One of the largest crowds that has ever lined the Van Cortlandt course watched the college runners. Besides rooters from Columbia and football fans in New York to see the Penn-Dartmouth tussle at the Polo Grounds in the afternoon, a large crowd was recruited from the schoolboy enthusiasts, who were on hand to witness the run of the P. S. A. L., which preceded the intercollegiate event. A nearby football game also contributed a large quota of fans when Higgins and Cummings came over the crest of the hill and cut loose for the final sprint.

Penn took the lead at the very start, when McHale, Brown, and Shields drew away from the field at a fast clip. The latter runner, evidently with the purpose of leading his opponents into a trap, quickly gained a commanding lead, while his team mates, especially Cummings, were taking things easy in the rear. In the case of several unwary Dartmouth men the ruse succeeded, but Columbia, with its thorough knowledge of the course, refused to follow his pace.

At the first mile post Penn's Captain, McHale, and Brown were in the van, closely pursued by Turner and Higgins of Columbia and Crathern of Dartmouth. Shields, having done his duty, fell slowly behind until at the finish he was next to last. In the second mile Cummings overtook his two team mates and the three Penn runners grouped themselves into a combination that refused to be dislodged.

The three-mile mark, which completed one lap of the course, found Brown and Cummings in front, with Higgins a close third. Irwin of Penn and Turner of Columbia were fourth and fifth. This grouping held also during the next mile, and it was not until the fifth mile that Higgins was able to shake off the Red and Blue men and go to the front.

In the last mile it was anybody's race. On Higgins's heels came Cummings, Brown, Irwin, and McHale of Penn, with Turner of Columbia sandwiched in between the fourth and sixth men. With the exception of Cummings's final dash into a narrow lead, the five-mile grouping remained unchanged until the finish line was reached.

Samuel Kiviat of Penn, a brother of the famous Abe, barely managed to live up to advance notices by capturing seventh place. His time was 35:12.

The summaries follow:

EXPECT LARGEST SHOW.

Prince of Wales and Sir Thomas Lipton May Visit the Garden.

The total entry for the National Horse Show is 1,606, 400 more than last year. In deciding to give the entire gross receipts to the Salvation Army, the directors had no idea they would find zealous horse lovers among the uniformed lads and lassies who gave such cheery aid to our soldiers along the firing lines in France. But it happens that the reverse is the case. From Commander Evangeline Booth to the newest recruit, there is a fondness for horses and an eagerness to help the show. Members will serve as volunteer ushers and program sellers in the Garden, from Nov. 17 to 21, both in the afternoon and evening.

In 1917 a committee of American Red Cross women undertook these tasks and last year women interested in the United War Work Campaign did the same, both setting a precedent for the Salvation Army members. The 1917 show realized $63,000 for the American Red Cross and last year's fixture earned $50,000 for the United War Work Campaign Fund. This year, especially should both the Prince of Wales and Sir Thomas Lipton attend, as is expected, the gross receipts will amount to $100,000.

Commander Booth is an enthusiastic horsewoman, and rides her favorite mount from her home in Hartsdale to the top of Reservoir Hill and back nearly every morning. She attributes her great love for the horse to the fact that when she was only 10 years old her father, the late General Booth, wished to place her in close touch with the very poor of London and for three years detailed her to sell matches on the streets of the lowest slums in Whitechapel. Here she saw so many cases of brutal treatment of the horse that she determined to do all in her power to alleviate its sufferings. Later, she became a member of the New York Humane Society and wears its badge. She has extended the well-known slogan of the Salvation Army to embrace the horse, and, where Commander Booth is concerned, "A horse may be down, but he is never out."

Griffin to Captain Penn Cubs.

The University of Pennsylvania freshman football team has elected Donald Griffin as its Captain. The new leader plays centre on the yearling team and has been one of its most consistent performers for the season. He prepared for Penn at Tome School, where he was active in baseball and other sports as well as football.

STUYVESANT GUNNERS WIN.

Capture P. S. A. L. Championship at Peekskill Range.

Stuyvesant High School's young riflemen carried off the bulk of the day's spoils yesterday at the ninth annual outdoor rifle shooting championship tournament, conducted on the State ranges at Peekskill, N. Y., under the auspices of the Public Schools Athletic League. The east side schoolboys won the team championship by returning a total of 211 hits out of a possible 250, leading Bryant High School, by six points. Jamaica High School's first team was third, with 202. These were the only schools whose teams registered 200 or more hits.

In addition to acquiring the championship of the city, the Stuyvesant shooters gained the Du Pont Cup, which is offered annually to the school winning the team struggle. Bryant High School's team received the Ullman Trophy for finishing with the second best score.

In the individual championship tests two of Stuyvesant's team, A. Shapiro and J. Chandree, placed among the select circle of riflemen who shot for seventy-five hits or more. Altogether about 300 local schoolboys competed in the shoot, and of this number thirty-six returned cards of seventy-five or better, qualifying as junior marksmen, authorized by the War Department. In addition to the distinction which went with this title the youngsters making the ten best scores received P. S. A. L. medals for their work. Because of several ties which existed between the young marksmen it is probable many more medals will have to be distributed.

Frank Gobes of Bushwick High School carried off the individual championship, finishing with a score of eighty-six hits out of a possible 100. Kimball Gray of Jamaica, and C. Meirowitz, a De Witt Clinton High School competitor, finished deadlocked for second laurels, each having eighty-two hits.

YANKEE SOCCERITES WIN.

Defeat Britons, 3 to 1, at Crescent A. C. Field—Other Games.

As evidence of the strides soccer football has made in this country in the last few years, victory came to the Yankees yesterday in the match between America and the United Kingdom arranged by the Crescent Athletic Club on its grounds at Bay Ridge. Although the Britishers started off in good shape and had a lead in the first five minutes of play, the Americans displayed superior staying powers and succeeded in winning by the score of 3 goals to 1.

All of the points were scored in the first half. From a cross by Phillip, Gibson, outside right for the United Kingdom, opened the scoring. Twenty minutes later Titus, former Manual Training star, laid down a corner perfectly and Tallant equalized for America. In another two minutes, Tallant again scored off a pass by Van der Wolf. America's third point and the last goal of the game came through a pass by Titus to Van der Wolf, who found the net with a hard drive.

SYRACUSE RUNNER CHAMPION HARRIER

ORANGE TEAM WINS ALSO

Collegians' Tally Is 49 Points Better Than That of Finnish-Americans, Who Are Second.

John Simmons, former New York A. C. distance runner, who won the metropolitan junior one-mile running title and was runner-up for the local senior and junior national titles, led Coach Tom Keane's Syracuse University cross-country team to a convincing victory yesterday in the national junior hill-and-dale championship struggle over the six-mile course at Van Cortlandt Park.

The Salt City collegian, running more like a veteran than a junior, showed his heels to a field of sixty-three rivals who managed to complete the trying chase. Simmons, with a short spurt about 200 yards from the finish, as the hill-and-dalers were entering upon Cemetery Hill prior to the final dash on the flat to the finish, forged to the front of the field and, maintaining his speed, held the winning position to the finish. The title went to Simmons by a margin of about ten yards over Watson, who weakened in the final strides in pursuit of his teammate.

Simmons covered the endurance-testing course in 33 minutes 3-5 second, a matter of three-fifths of a second slower than the time recorded last year by Max Bohland of the Paulist A. C. in winning the senior championship hill-and-dale race. Watson was second, 4 2-5 seconds back of the champion, while William Ritola of the Finnish-American A. C. was third. Ritola's time was 0:33:20, and he trailed Watson by about thirty-five yards.

The victory of Simmons paved the way for an overwhelming triumph for the Salt City University quintet in the battle for the team championship. Coach Keane's Orange and Blue jerseyed athletes finished as a team within the first dozen runners to cross the finish line. Simmons and Lewis, in first and second places respectively, were followed over the line by H. C. Johnson, who annexed eighth position, although he was placed tenth by Morris Feilman, who scored tenth position, and J. W. Fleck, who scored eleventh. This gave the up-State collegians a total of thirty-two points, and a margin of forty-nine tallies on the nearest rivals in the team championship, the Finnish-American A. C. quintet, which finished with eighty-one points. Then came in order the colored standard bearers of the St. Christopher Club, with eighty-four points; St. Anselm's A. C., with eighty-seven; Mohawk A. C., with 101; Paulist A. C., with 110, and Morningside A. C., with 125.

Second Victory in a Fortnight.

Simmons's success marked his second cross-country victory in the space of two weeks. He led home the pack of collegiate hill-and-dalers who competed in the recent chase conducted by Syracuse University at Syracuse. Coach Keane declared after the race that he was confident his team would win and was delighted with the victory of Simmons. The former New York A. C. star is in his third year at the up-State university and is a year ahead of his studies, the track coach said.

Peculiarly enough three of the Syracuse team are products of the local district. Simmons spent his school years at Englewood High School, Englewood, N. J., and participated in open competition conducted by the Metropolitan A. A. U. Morris Feilman formerly competed in local scholastic athletics, while Fleck at one time represented the Morris High School, and formerly held the interscholastic cross-country championship. Coach Keane declared he has another hill and daler who excels even Simmons and Watson, but who, because of university restrictions, is unable to compete on the team. The Syracuse mentor, however, is confident his cross-country talent will score a triumph in the renewal of the intercollegiate championship race which is scheduled for Nov. 22 over the same course.

Conditions for the race were ideal. Little wind was encountered over the whole course, while there was just enough sting in the air to make the overhead weather ideal for cross-country or distance running. The A. A. U. officials saw to it that every detail of the race was properly attended to before starting time. Unlike the conditions of previous years the runners yesterday were guided always with placards placed on trees which lined the course from the time the runners left the flat, climbing the golf links hill on the southern end of the park, until they approached the flat again by way of Cemetery Hill at the north end of the flat parade grounds, where the start and finish was made. All the backstretch of the course, which had to be traversed twice for the six miles, was plainly pointed out to the runners through the medium of cardboard signs posted conspicuously on the trees which skirted the course.

The test for the title was confined to Simmons, Watson and Ritola from the very start. When Johnny McHugh fired the gun which started seventy-eight hill and dalers off in quest of the junior championship, there was a mad scramble for favorable positions in the pack. The two up-State collegians and the Finnish-American runner were the successful place seekers and took their positions at the head of the field before the runners started the climb of the golf links, the first real test of the course.

Field in Hot Pursuit.

The remainder of the field, led by Jim O'Connor of the St. Anselm's A. C., was hot in pursuit of the three runners flying away in front. Alternation in the leadership over the first lap resulted in a fast pace which caused some of the starters to drop by the wayside before the first three-mile round of the course had been completed. Coming down Cemetery Hill for the close of the first lap Watson was in front by a slight margin, with Ritola second and Simmons third. The three passed the officials at the starting line in this formation, Watson's time being 16 minutes 21 seconds. Then followed O'Connor, Joseph Loskar of the St. Anselm's A. C., George Cornetta, making his first hill and dale appearance as a wearer of the New York A. C.'s Mercury Foot; B. Prim of the Finnish-American A. C.; Terry Halpine, unattached, and Vic Voteretsas, the sturdy Greek runner of the Millrose A. A., whom many officials selected as a likely winner of the title. They were bunched in close formation, so that seconds only separated them as they raced past the judges starting the second lap of the course.

There was no change in the order of the first three runners as they disappeared from view beyond the sloping golf links and entered the woods on the back stretch. The three pacemakers, however, managed to open a gap between themselves and the pursuers, which widened perceptibly as the race progressed. When the leaders were next sighted coming over the crest of Cemetery Hill, Watson was still in front, with Simmons right at his shoulder. Ritola, weakening from the pace, had begun to lose ground, leaving the two college mates to battle between themselves for the title.

Simmons picked up speed making the descent of Cemetery Hill, and brushed past his team mate. Watson increased his pace accordingly, but he could not overtake the former New York A. C. runner, who beat off Watson's challenge coming down the hill. On the flat Watson again attempted to overtake his team mate, but Simmons was equal to the emergency, and with quickening stride began to open a gap of open ground. The struggle continued right up to the finish line, Simmons gaining by inches at first and then by yards, so when within twenty-five yards of the finish Watson's strength began to desert him. The latter pluckily hung on, but did not have the stamina to turn the tide, and trailed Simmons by about ten yards. Ritola, exerting all his strength, finished third, about thirty-five yards in the rear. The remainder of the field came straggling home in single file thereafter, with the monotonous procession being enlivened here and there with a last-stride struggle between the also-rans for positions which would keep their teams in front.

REALTY MARKET HAS ACTIVE WEEK

BROADWAY TRANSFERSMADE

Hotel Properties and Numerous Buildings n Business and Financial Sections AlsoChange Owners.

The ability of the present real estate market to absorb everything and anything from a suburban lot to a Manhattan skyscraper was very evident last week when several million dollars' worth of realty was disposed of at private sale and public auction.

It was by far one of the most active weeks of the year, the transactions including Broadway corners, several hotel properties and numerous business properties in the business and financial sections.

The week's activities opened with the public auction of the Hunt's Point Terminal Company's property and the George F. Johnson estate, located in the East Bronx, by Joseph P. Day, in the Vesey Street auction room. This property, consisting of eighty-five acres of waterfront land and over a thousand vacant lots, brought about $2,615,000.

For the water frontage, $1,365,720 was paid for 70¾ acres, or an average of $19,305 an acre. This total does not include the Dollar S. S. Company purchase, by private treaty, of 14¼ acres for $358,250.

One of the largest private sales of the week was the purchase by Max Spiegal of the Strand Theatre and William F. Rafferty of Syracuse of the Fitzgerald Building, at the immediate southeast corner of Broadway and Forty-third Street and the Cohan Theatre in the rear on Forty-third Street. A price close to $2,000,000 was paid for the property, which is one of the most valuable in the Times Square section. Mr. Spiegel is Vice President of the Mitchel Mark Realty Company, which owns and operates the Strand Theatre at Broadway and Forty-seventh Street.

The Fitzgerald Building is twelve stories high. It has a frontage of 104 feet on Broadway, and is the home of many theatrical concerns. Mary Fitzgerald of Philadelphia held the property for many years. About six years ago the improvement of the site was undertaken in the name of the 1482 Broadway Corporation. The improvement included the erection of a theatre on the rear end of the site.

The Fitzgerald property is the third large property in Times Square to be purchased by moving picture interests recently.

During the week the sale of the New York Theatre property on the east side of Broadway, between Forty-fourth and Forty-fifth Streets, reported in THE NEW YORK TIMES on Oct. 29, was confirmed by H. Sachs of H. J. Sachs & Co., who negotiated the transaction. The property, which was held at about $3,250,000, was sold by the New York Theatre Company, representing interests affiliated with Klaw & Erlanger, to the Seneca Realty Company, representing a large film company.

The New York Theatre property was sold by the New York Theatre Company for approximately $1,500,000 more than it paid for the large playhouse in 1902, when it was acquired from Sire Brothers after the New York Life Insurance Company had foreclosed a mortgage on the property while under the ownership of the late Oscar Hammerstein, who built it as the Olympia.

Several weeks ago the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation bought the Putnam Building, diagonally across the square from the Fitzgerald corner, and the group of bachelor apartments in the rear on Forty-third and Forty-fourth Streets, known as Westover Court.

The Putnam Building is to be made the headquarters of the corporation, and the apartments in the rear are to be torn down and a large theatre erected on the site for motion picture shows.

The Famous Players-Lasky Corporation paid a big profit to Robert E. Simon for the property, which was bought from Vincent Astor for a little less than $4,000,000 cash in July last.

Another deal in the Times Square section involved the Hotel Gerard, at 123 to 129 West Forty-fourth Street, purchased by William Rankin, to Gilbert & Kramer and S. Morrill Bonner.

The structure, which is twelve stories high, stands on a plot 100 by 100 feet, between Broadway and Sixth Avenue. It was erected by the seller in 1894 and contains 368 rooms.

A Fifth Avenue deal of the million dollar variety closed during the week involved the old Holland House at the southwest corner of Fifth Avenue and Thirtieth Street, by the Holland House Company, of which Dr. Guy Whiting of Washington, D. C., is President.

According to Frederick Fox & Co., the buyer, whose name is not revealed, was influenced in his purchase of the property by the work of the Save New York Committee, which has made great strides in its campaign to protect Fifth Avenue against the incursions of manufacturing interests, and has induced many of the manufacturing concerns now occupying lofts on the avenue and on the side streets adjacent to move west toward the newly established needle-work centre in the Seventh Avenue zone.

At the time of its construction the cost of the building and land was estimated at about $1,000,000. Since then, however, land values on Fifth Avenue have soared considerably, but the value of the building itself probably has depreciated. It was said that the price paid in last week's transaction was in the neighborhood of $1,000,000.

THE GROWTH OF QUEENS.

Chamber of Commerce Publishes Statistical and Railroad Maps.

The Chamber of Commerce of the Borough of Queens has issued a new rapid transit map showing in three colors the elevated and subway lines of the dual subway system of New York City, and showing the benefits which Queens Borough receives from the operation of rapid transit trains over the two extensions from Manhattan to Astoria and Corona and the three extensions from Brooklyn to Ridgewood, Richmond Hill, Woodhaven, and the Jamaica sections of the borough. Residents of all parts of Queens Borough are now able to travel for a single fare to any part of New York City served by the dual subway system.

Queens Borough, with an area of 117 square miles, has an assessed valuation of $250,000,000 and a population of 425,000. In its 1,200 factories it produces $200,000,000 worth of goods and employs 75,000 workers. It takes 174 miles of track to handle the transportation of the borough.

MONROE HOUSE SALE.

To be Offered to the Highest Bidder on Wednesday Next.

Announcement that Bryan L. Kennelly will sell at public auction on Wednesday, Nov. 12, the one-time home of President Monroe, of Monroe Doctrine fame, located at 63 Prince Street, northwest corner of Lafayette Street, has created unusual interest among patriotic societies who desire to conserve this landmark of old New York, and several would save it from falling into the hands of those who would put it to commercial uses.

It is expected that the societies will be able to raise a fund sufficient to cover the cost of acquiring this property, which is part of the block front on the north side of Prince Street, between Lafayette and Crosby Streets, consisting of a group of 10ft buildings.

Of interest to investors and operators in this sale is the southeast corner of Amsterdam Avenue and Sixty-fifth Street, two five-story apartment houses with stores, 50 by 100; two five-story buildings, 59.5 by 96, irregular, on the southwest corner of Christopher and Bedford Streets; five five-story apartment houses on the northwest corner of Third Avenue and Ninety-fifth Street, and a five-story apartment house, 40 by 100, at 84 and 86 Grove Street, running through to Sheridan Square. All of the properties are being offered for the estate of Alfred Marshall.

Two Sales This Week.

One effect of the recent successful selling of real estate by public auction has been the selection of the Vesey Street salesroom by the executors of estates and by individual owners as an outlet for the properties they own and find it necessary to convert into cash.

The chief items of interest of this sort next week are the two sales to be held at 14 Vesey Street, at noon, on Thursday, Nov. 13, and Friday, Nov. 14, by Joseph P. Day, auctioneer.

Thursday, Nov. 13, is a special sales day. The offerings listed in the schedule for that day include a number of very interesting properties, one of which is the block front on the east side of Eighth Avenue from Forty-eighth to Forty-ninth Street, belonging to the Davies estate. This block front consists of nine four-story and cellar brick tenements with stores. The offering will be in two separate plots, and then as one plot. The highest bidder will get the property.

The sales scheduled to be held on Friday, Nov. 14, include three important offerings effected by a bankruptcy proceeding, a fine property in the Fifth Avenue section to be disposed of by absolute executors' sale, and the voluntary offering of 1,724, 1,726 and 1,728 Madison Avenue, three five-story tenements with stores, on a plot 50 6 by 100 by irregular, between 113th and 114th Streets. The properties to be offered at bankruptcy sale are 144-150 East Twenty-fourth Street, and 149 East Twenty-third Street, four modern stables, and 41 and 43 West Sixty-third Street, a three-story modern auto service station, on a plot 50 by 100.5.

THE MORTGAGE MARKET.

Trend Toward Bond Issues in Large Building Loans.

BY AUGUST HEUMENAUER.

The report to the Investment Bankers' Association of America of its Real Estate Securities Committee, at the convention in St. Louis recently, merits outside consideration, particularly because of the serious view taken of the real estate mortgage loan market.

The report states that there is a retarded building development extending over practically all of the United States, with the implication that the reason lies in the lack of sufficient available means to finance this desired development, due apparently, or mostly, to the primitive and archaic manner in which mortgages have, as compared with other forms of securities, been handled in this country.

Within the next twenty years, the report continues, many of our cities, notably New York, would practically have to be rebuilt, and that the existing mortgage system is entirely inadequate for the purpose.

The real estate mortgage is an ancient and well-seasoned means of raising money. For a long time it lived and labored in its pristine simplicity, with all the disadvantages usual to simple mortgage loans. But while many such loans are still made, and probably always will be made, for they are very acceptable in many instances, the development in this field of borrowing and investment, within the last thirty years or so, in the use of real estate mortgage bonds, has been widespread and prolific.

Companies in the realty business and in other ventures are issuing real estate mortgage bonds, and these with investment companies guaranteeing mortgages, and associations for building loans and farm loans enjoying Government encouragement, it would seem that there were sufficient sources of funds for building operations. Powers granted by corporation and banking laws appear ample to form new enterprises for the purposes of financing such operations.

The committee, however, pleads that with more uniform standards would come greater security, uniformity in practice, a ready market, increased confidence, and a more general acceptability of the mortgage security. Now, is such uniformity in standards, except the uniformity in high standards of safety, really necessary, or even desirable, when applied to such matters as forms of mortgage deeds and bonds and methods of appraisal and of marketing? The needs of borrowers are probably more easily and fully met by the variety of ways now open to them to approach and conclude with lenders.

The position of the investment banker dealing in real estate securities is between the borrower and the lender, the former of these usually of large needs; and uniformity in standards would no doubt simplify the process of borrowing and lending to the three parties concerned; that is, tend to greater security, cultivate a ready market, increase confidence, with the result that more money would be invested in real estate securities.

This, however, is a day of unusual situations, economically, and the retarding of building operations may not be for lack of sources of funds, nor may it lie in the diversity of standards. It lies more in the industrial uncertainty, and uncertainties of other kinds; for instance, that of appraisal for loan purposes upon the present inflated values and the inability to come to terms with lenders upon such inflated values.

The real estate loan market is developing more and more the use of the bond issue, especially where large loans, that is, from $50,000 and upwards, are desired. The committee, no doubt, had reference more particularly to this method of financing.

In formulating the standards in which they desire uniformity many things need to be considered, involving all the elements of safety, both as to principal and income, along with the elements of convenience to the investor, and providing satisfactory methods of redemption, as well as of foreclosure if the need arises.

Taking up some of the elements of safety only, the first in order would be the selection of the property to be mortgaged. Proper selection depends on an accurate knowledge of property available or offered for loans, and a consequent good judgment as to its value for loaning purposes. There should be two or three independent appraisals by individuals or committees, and in most cases limiting these appraisals to particular fields.

Along with this knowledge of property values must be a familiarity with the laws and restrictions of the community and with the customs of its people affecting every and any detail of the mortgage. Appraisals, especially where the loan is large, should be made by at least three experienced men, working independently, and their certificates of appraisal should accompany the mortgage. If the loan is for a long period, reappraisals should be made at from three to five years periodically, unless the loan is being reduced constantly.

The property must be income-producing, or must be capable of being made so; and this income must be reasonably stable and certain. Stability and certainty of income flow out of the rule to lend only upon property that may be put to a diversity of uses, and for that reason some lenders will not accept mortgages upon theatres, factories, mines, and other one-use properties or will reduce the proportion of the loan to appraised value in other cases.

The best property for loaning purposes is located in growing, or prosperous, neighborhoods and not far from the banker or lender or one of his agencies. Mortgages of properties that are being developed are apt to command a very narrow market because of the uncertainty of a satisfactory development and of sales or rentals sufficient to meet interest and other charges as well as the principal when due. The proportion of the loan to appraised value must never be over two-thirds—one American investment company averages in its loans only 39 per cent. Furthermore, safety is increased by a gradual redemption of outstanding bonds.

The question whether bonds issued upon a mortgage of one large building are safer than those issued upon a group of mortgages of a number of smaller properties is a fine point. In the group of mortgages there may be the advantage of many small loans, with the resultant small risk of loss in any one loan, but also the disadvantage of the small properties deteriorating more, proportionately, than the larger one.

The mortgages most preferable are first liens, with provisions that they must be kept first liens by the prompt payment of taxes and assessments. All questions of title must be settled by competent search, or by title insurance, or by registration and guarantee of title under, or similar to, the Torrens system. Insurance against fire, tornado, earthquake, flood, or any destructive force, should be required.

As usual, in bond issues of other kinds in America, a trust company is made Trustee to act as intermediary between the borrowers and the lenders, or investors. Such a trust company is Trustee more particularly for the lenders, investors in the bond, and, consequently, should concern itself in the care of the loan for them, safeguarding all their interests, but since the Trustee is most always selected by the borrowers, the tendency is to yield consideration to their wishes. A remedy for this situation should, for the sake of safety, be sought.

The form and content of the mortgage instrument, or deed of trust, needs careful consideration. A frank and generous attitude toward the investing public would win confidence and aid marketability greatly. Besides this, reasonably speedy methods of foreclosure and of sale in case of default, or for the appointment of receivers in the case of mismanagement of the mortgaged property, are needed.

Mortgage bond companies in Europe and the Land Bank of New York are limited by law to the number of times their capital and surplus they may issue bonds. Some American investment companies restrict themselves in their deeds of trust, or as a matter of principle, to similar limits. The multiples are from ten to, at the most, twenty, and safety is directly enhanced in their sphere by such limits against overborrowing and loaning.

For the individual investor, and for an investing institution, the expert selection and care of a mortgage loan by an institution or banking house making this kind of investment its chief business, backed it may be by a guarantee as to the payment of the principal and interest when due, has much to commend it. In fact, all provisions for the safety of a loan are of great assurance to the investor and increase loan marketability.

The other elements of marketing a real estate loan need as careful consideration as that of safety. It would also appear that while uniformity of standards is being sought, the requirements for such standards in building up a broad market are if anything more varied in real estate than they are in railroad, municipal, and public utility financing. It is also possible that if investment houses would accept real estate bonds as generally and widely as they do those of the other classes, and manage their sale as energetically, it would improve their market very materially.

A MESSAGE FROM A TELEPHONE OPERATOR TO GIRLS SEEKING EMPLOYMENT.
"When I was ready to enter business I decided that the occupation I chose would have to have a future in it for me. The pay should be good and be increased at reasonable intervals. The organization into which I went not only must provide an opportunity for me to advance myself but must show willingness to help me get ahead. The work must be clean and interesting and devoid of unpleasant influences. It had to be done in clean, well-ventilated rooms. The working hours had to be reasonable. If I became sick during employment I felt that I should be protected against loss of pay. I wanted to be assured that my employer would look after my comfort and convenience both when at work and when off duty. And if the business I entered required preliminary training I felt that my employer should pay me for that preparation.
"Telephone operating met every one of my requirements. So I have this message for young women 16 to 25 years of age who seek steady, worth-while employment: Find out about telephone operating and do it today."

ACCOUNTING
COST—C. P. A.—EXECUTIVE.
The United States Government has raised the Civil Service salary limit and is now holding continuous examinations for Expert Accounting positions paying $2,400 to $4,000 per year.
With many new plants and industries locating in this section, the demand will be greater than ever, and men and women who can qualify will have no difficulty in obtaining permanent positions at the very highest salaries.
A NATIONALLY KNOWN institution of Certified Public Accountants, the oldest institution of its kind in the country, with branches in the leading cities, has a department that is devoted exclusively to the training of men and women for executive accounting positions and the C. P. A. degree.
OUR HOME STUDY method is the most thorough and practical training that is possible to obtain, except through some of the largest resident universities. It is years ahead of any other HOME STUDY institution, both in scope and methods. Here are a few of its distinctive points.
NO TEXT BOOKS ARE USED. Every lesson is a separate, complete unit in loose-leaf form.
EVERY MEMBER of our faculty is (a) a Certified Public Accountant, (b) actively engaged in the practice of his profession, (c) with extensive and successful experience in the teaching of Accountancy.
Among our graduates and students we number more Certified Public Accountants than all similar institutions combined. We have trained hundreds now holding big-paying positions with the Government and the industries.
New and original teaching methods are employed, insuring a rapidity of progress almost beyond belief.
The method has been especially designed to appeal to the person who has lost the study habit as well as to the busy person whose time is limited.
If you do not train yourself for a better position you will seldom advance beyond a living wage. If you are earning less than $50 to $100 a week we can assist you. Write or phone for office appointment.

SALESMEN!
DIVISION MANAGERS WANTED.
IT IS INTERESTING TO NOTE that last Saturday we issued twenty-five weekly commission checks, the average amount of which was TWO HUNDRED AND EIGHTY-THREE DOLLARS AND NINETY-FIVE CENTS. What is destined to be one of the GREATEST MANAGERIAL ORGANIZATIONS in America offers YOU an OPPORTUNITY to enter its ranks.
The LIBERTY STARTERS CORPORATION, entering the airplane and automobile industries, is building an INTERNATIONAL SELLING ORGANIZATION. FIFTY DIVISION MANAGERS are needed to build a domestic force, and about FIVE FOREIGN REPRESENTATIVES TO HANDLE THE OVERSEAS MARKETS.
The plan is unique in every way. The problem of the day is a man problem; men who CAN do can be found any time; men who WILL do, seldom.
We want no man working FOR us, we want men working WITH us. So, with the central idea of developing a real managerial staff, a few weeks ago we started our training course, along with our financial campaign, and the results so far have been astounding.
Our managers are making big commissions in the sale of our securities and taking their training in the merchandising of our product at the same time; so, as you see, our staff is making this business possible, it is THEIR business.
Come around to 620 tomorrow and see for yourself the results we have obtained, and the opportunity we offer YOU. It will take but a few moments of your time, and it may mean a revolution of your future.
THE LIBERTY STARTERS CORPORATION
DUFF G. MAYNARD, President.

INDUSTRIAL OPPORTUNITIES.

Today is the age of efficiency.

Everywhere we hear the cry for increased production and reduced costs. The industrial wastes in the United States are estimated by efficiency experts to amount to over $50,000,000 per day, most of which is due to lack of training of executives and lack of co-ordination.

Manufacturers are clamoring for men who can produce results, and the call for men with a knowledge of factory management is growing greater every day. The requirements for the men who enter this field call for a sound knowledge of the underlying principles of organization, operation, production, and the relationship between employer and employee.

Men trained in the new science of factory management command salaries from $5,000 to $100,000 a year.

A knowledge of these principles opens up opportunities not only for independent practice, but for high-salaried industrial positions.

STUDY AT HOME.

The Industrial Extension Institute provides an organized course of home study and training in "Factory Management." This is the first and only course of its kind which has ever been offered, and is being used today by such organizations as the General Electric Co., General Motors Corporation, and hundreds of others as a means of training men for the new era of industrial activity.

If you are awake to the new opportunities which are open to you in this new profession of Industrial Engineering, a postcard addressed to the Institute will bring you detailed information as to the Factory Management Course and Service, and a free 100-page booklet entitled "Thinking Beyond Your Job."

HENRY L. DOHERTY & COMPANY
SIXTY WALL STREET
NEW YORK

TO THOSE NEEDING OFFICE SPACE IN LOWER NEW YORK:

We were notified several months ago that we could not rent additional space in the building we now occupy. After weeks of effort we found ourselves unable to lease suitable space anywhere in lower New York.

This meant that we would have to purchase some existing building or buy land and erect our own building. The pressing need for more space would not give sufficient time for the erection of a new building. We knew of other cases similar to our own, and, therefore, concluded there were many more such cases.

We decided both to buy and to build for our own needs, and, in making our plans, to provide space for others in a similar predicament. We have now acquired a large amount of existing office space, and also a large area of land for the erection of new buildings.

The purpose of this announcement is to invite the co-operation of others who must secure office space, and especially those who need a large amount of space on a single floor.

We can provide by alterations and enlargements approximately 50,000 square feet by May 1, 1920, and practically unlimited space as soon as building operations can be completed.

This space will not only be exceptionally attractive, but can also be had at a moderate cost compared with present existing prices.

Prompt action is essential. We cannot deal with agents unless they will first disclose the identity of their clients, and can show credentials giving them power to bind their clients without further consultation. If the principals, however, wish to negotiate the matter with us directly, and not through agents or subordinates, we will give all information, and allow as much time for decision as circumstances will permit.

Kindly communicate with Mr. F. W. Le Porin, of our office.

Respectfully,
HENRY L. DOHERTY & COMPANY,
60 Wall Street.

$400,000 Worth of Property Purchased by New Corporation—Active Buying in Suburbs.

Following the lead of many prominent business firms that have bought permanent homes in the financial district during the last few months, the Merchants and Shippers Insurance Company, now at 49 Wall Street, yesterday purchased from the Markham Realty Company, Clarence W. Eckhardt, President, the building at 14 and 16 South William Street, on a plot 41.10 by 48.3 feet. The property was held at $100,000.

Upon the expiration of the present leases, in May, 1920, the buyer intends to erect a new four-story building for its own occupancy.

The property is in the heart of the new marine insurance district. It immediately adjoins the plot upon which the Kerr Steamship Company is now constructing a twelve-story building, and is just south of the old Delmonico building, which for years has been one of the landmarks of downtown New York.

It was purchased about two months ago by the Markham Realty Company from Robert W. Goelet, having been in the possession of the Goelet family for about a hundred years, and is the first piece of property sold by it. William A. White & Sons were the brokers in both transactions.

ZIEGLER ESTATE SALE.

Big Crowd at First Session in Vesey Street Salesroom.

The sale of the Ziegler Estate realty holdings at public auction by Bryan L. Kennelly, which began yesterday and will be continued on Monday and Tuesday, drew a large crowd of small investors and house seekers to the Vesey Street Salesroom. It was not alone the houses offered to the highest bidder that attracted the crowd, but the announcement that the Ziegler Estate would finance homebuilders who purchased vacant property by making them reasonable building loans. As a result many of the successful bidders announced their intention of building at once. The property offered at yesterday morning's session consisted of forty-one lots and eight houses located in the vicinity of Fourteenth Avenue and Fortieth Street, Brooklyn. The bidding was spirited, and a 60 by 90 foot lot at the corner of Fortieth Street and Fourteenth Avenue was purchased by Charles A. Ward for $7,500, and four houses, each on a 25 by 100 foot lot, were bought for a total of $37,000 by B. Glaubes. Lots on Martense Lane, between Twelfth and Thirteenth Avenues, brought $500 each. By 5 o'clock 107 lots and six houses had been disposed of for about $131,200. During the afternoon seventy-one lots and four houses, located at Babylon, and 235 lots in Flushing found ready buyers at good prices. On Monday 262 lots and four houses will be sold at Linden, South Elizabeth, and Roselle, N. J., and on Tuesday 201 bungalow sites will be disposed of at Tottenville, Staten Island.

THIRTY-FOURTH STREET BOARD OF TRADE PLANS SUBWAY LOOP TO ENCIRCLE HEART OF CITY

Proposition to be Presented to Board of Estimate Calls for a New Connecting Link in Thirtieth or Thirty-first Street—Cost Estimated at About $2,000,000 Exclusive of Property Rights at Certain Corners

A subway loop to encircle the heart of New York, offering solution of serious shuttle, transfer and other traffic problems, is proposed in a plan perfected by the Thirty-fourth Street Board of Trade for presentation to the Public Service Commission and the Board of Estimate.

The proposal is for an underground loop service as a part of the Interborough lines, linking together the four trunk subway systems, traversing the central portion of the metropolis and bringing the entire city within easier access to the shopping, hotel, theatrical and business district of the city.

The plan calls for a loop to be operated through Forty-second Street, the existing Fourth Avenue Subway, a new connecting link in Thirty-first or Thirtieth Street, and the Seventh Avenue Subway.

Tracks now used for local service in the Fourth Avenue and Seventh Avenue Subways would be employed and, in the opinion of engineers who have studied the plan, could be used without interfering in the slightest with the existing service.

The unused tracks in Forty-second Street and the old rails in Fourth Avenue south of Forty-second Street would be employed. The only new construction required would be a half-mile connection in Thirty-first Street to join the two main subway lines.

Additional stations would be provided under the scheme at convenient points in Thirty-first Street near Fifth Avenue, Broadway, and in Forty-second Street, probably between Fifth Avenue and Sixth Avenue.

The cost is estimated at between $1,500,000 and $2,000,000, covering the new connecting link in Thirty-first Street and the connections at three corners of the square, exclusive of property rights at certain corners.

Trains would be operated continuously by running south on the Fourth Avenue local tracks, west through Thirty-first Street, north on the local tracks of the Seventh Avenue line, and east through Forty-second Street. This would not interfere with the shuttle service in Forty-second Street.

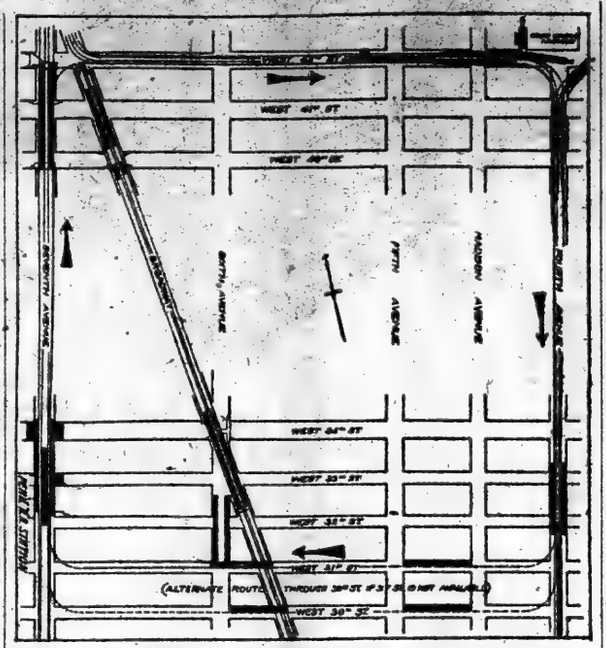
Lying between the square formed by the loop and immediately adjacent thereto are New York's department stores, railroad terminals, hotels, restaurants, and theatres. This is more than a local district, it belongs to the entire city, and the improvement proposed by the business men in that section is designed not as a local benefit as much as for the accommodation of the public and the facilitation of subway traffic in general. The merchants and property owners are firmly convinced that the loop they present for official consideration would be a great convenience and give comfort daily to hundreds of thousands of persons.

Property owners in the district are united in support of the proposal. Owners of the smaller stores and residences are as enthusiastic as the representatives of the large business organizations. In addition, they have already obtained the strong indorsement of civic associations in other sections of the city.

While members of the Thirty-fourth Street Board of Trade are hopeful of consideration for their project at an early date, they have made it clear they do not purpose pressing it at a time when Mayor Hylan and his associates in the City Government are struggling with the budget.

They will ask for official sanction at the earliest date possible, and hope for actual constructive work as soon as the city is in a position to proceed.

In the opinion of those who have studied the problem the need for relieving the Forty-second Street shuttle confusion is one of the most pressing in connection with the completion of the subway lines throughout the city, and for that reason business men are anxious to have the authorities indorse a comprehensive plan providing adequately for the future rather than proceeding with piecemeal construction which in the end will afford little advantage to the public generally.



Subway Loop Proposed by Thirty-fourth Street Board of Trade.

With the completion of the Seventh Avenue and Fourth Avenue lines, forming through subway routes for the east and west sides, the shuttle in Forty-second Street became a necessity, but now has developed a serious situation. The public suffers endless annoyance and inconvenience daily in the fight to cross between the two main lines. The arrangement at Times Square and Grand Central Station has proved inadequate because of the long distances required for walking between trains.

The situation has been the subject of endless discussion through the central portion of Manhattan, which is chiefly affected by the conditions, as well as on the part of the general public. It was in answer to the demand from the public that some improvement be evolved that the Thirty-fourth Street Board of Trade worked out the scheme now presented.

Discussing the advantages claimed for the new plan, Vivian Green, President of the Thirty-fourth Street Board of Trade, said: "We believe that it will entirely solve the shuttle situation. The points of transfer would be doubled and, in part, transferring would be shifted from the existing stations in Forty-second Street. The crowds would thus be decentralized and double transfers, now necessary, would be abolished.

"In addition to the advantages presented for the loop and transfer service, the authors of the plan believe it could be utilized to tremendous advantage in relieving the morning and evening rush hour problem for the entire subway system.

"It provides a direct connection by subway between the Grand Central Terminal and the Pennsylvania Terminal, two of the main sources of traffic in the city, and which are the centres of great hotel districts. The two terminals could be brought within five minutes of each other.

"The two main line subways would be linked at four points and the transferring either east or west greatly simplified.

"The Broadway Subway, operated by the B. R. T., and the Manhattan and Hudson River Tubes, which operate directly into the heart of the city, would be connected with the trunk line subways by means of the stations to be built in Thirty-first Street.

"It would give a new means of transfer, other than at Times Square, for persons desiring to go from points on the west side subway below Thirty-fourth Street to points on the east side north of Forty-second Street, and would give direct downtown connections for those coming downtown on the Seventh Avenue-Broadway line.

"Direct platform connections would be afforded at Times Square and other points of transfer, thereby doing away with the annoyance and confusion now existing at these stations because of the long walk between trains.

"It would give great relief in one of the most serious subway situations presented, that of connection on the east side subway system south of Thirty-fourth Street with the uptown Seventh Avenue-Broadway line without requiring the change at Forty-second Street.

"It would enable the great crowds of shoppers, hotel and theatre patrons and travelers who daily visit the proposed loop district to travel easily and quickly from one part of the district to another. The territory to be served is the one district of the city which has a continuous and heavy demand for transportation facilities day and night.

"Development of convenient and rapid transit for the loop district, covering one of the largest and most valuable real estate areas of the entire city with enormous assessed valuations, would tend to stabilize the character of occupancy and realty values. Maintenance of real estate values would prove of great benefit to the city and the returns that would be realized would be many times larger than the relatively small investment required."

Although one of the younger civic associations, the Thirty-fourth Street Board of Trade has become influential because of its strong membership and the activity of its officials and Directors in working for the improvement of the district which it represents. Important stores, hotels, banking institutions, and large realty interests in the Thirty-fourth Street section are represented on the board. The officers of the Thirty-fourth Street Board of Trade follow:

REALTY QUESTIONS ANSWERED

The Building Managers and Owners' Association of New York recently established a "Question Box" for the benefit of its members. Following are three interesting questions answered last week after due investigation:

Question—What is the fair average price per square foot for high-class office space in the financial district?

Answer—The fair average price per square foot for high-class office space in the financial district is $4 in buildings of the first grade. Where the space in such a building is of exceptional excellence—for instance a corner with unobstructed view, perpetual sunlight, efficient division and prominent entrance, the price may run as high as $5 per square foot; while dark space would run as low as $3 per square foot.

Question—How can you bind a non-leased tenant to the cost of decorating an apartment by twelve monthly payments?

Answer—It is assumed that the propounder of this question wished to get the money without in any way binding him to a lease of the apartment. The only way this can be done is to make an agreement with the tenant that, in consideration of doing certain painting work the tenant will pay the sum of $——, the said amount to be paid in twelve equal payments and each payment to be made on the first day of the month. Care should be taken not to mention anything about the apartment other than the fact of the painting being done.

Question—Is a graduated scale of wages for building employes based on length of service better than a straight wage year in and out?

Answer—It would be better to pay a graduated scale of wages dependent upon the length of service, but experience has taught that the plan is not feasible. Illustration: An elevator man newly employed considers that he should be paid for the service rendered and that the operation of an elevator by him is just as much work as by a man who has served longer; he therefore demands as much pay.

Gov. Smith to Attend Real Estate Board Dinner.

Governor Alfred E. Smith has sent to the Real Estate Board of New York his acceptance of an invitation to attend the twenty-third annual dinner of the board, to be held on Feb. 7, 1920. Last year Governor Smith announced that he would attend no public dinners for the first two months after his taking office, and for that reason was not present at the twenty-second annual dinner of the board, held in February at the Hotel Commodore.

$1,000,000 HOTEL IMPROVEMENT FOR UPPER BROADWAY

Held up by the high cost of building material and the scarcity of labor for over a year James Butler is now rushing work on the improvement of his property on the southeast corner of Broadway and Seventieth Street.

The present structure occupies a plot 145 by 112 feet, and was acquired about twenty years ago by Mr. Butler when Upper Broadway was known as the Boulevard. Mr. Butler improved the property with a ten-story apartment house, which at that time represented the last word in high-class apartment house structures. Since that time the building has been the home of many prominent New Yorkers, but recently the demand for hotel accommodations, in quiet, residential localities, has become so urgent that Mr. Butler decided to alter the ten-story apartment house to a twelve-story structure. It will cost about $1,000,000, and will be known as the Hotel Ormonde.

The improvements will include removing practically the entire interior partitions and equipment, leaving only the floors and exterior walls, rebuilding the same and adding two new stories on the structure.

The building when completed will contain 329 bedrooms and 285 bathrooms, and will include all the essential and principal rooms, grills, barber shops, manicure parlors, and other rooms and spaces for the convenience and comfort of the guests.

The hotel will have an entrance on Broadway and another on Seventieth Street, both of which will lead into a handsome and dignified hotel foyer, and, in order to enhance its beauty, a section of the second story will be removed so that the height of the ceiling will be increased directly over the hotel office desk.

In an interview, William H. Gompert, the architect, stated:

"A building outlives its original occupancy or function after fifteen or twenty years, unless wise and radical alterations are made.

"The average owner, however, being timid and reluctant to recognize this situation, endeavors to force old properties to produce a proper earning capacity and invariably fails, or is compelled to accept undesirable tenants. In this instance, however, the owner has set an example for many other owners of valuable real estate."

The hotel will be ready for occupancy about March 1, 1920.

$500,000 In Loans.

The New York Title and Mortgage Company has made four loans aggregating $345,000 on the block front on the west side of Creston Avenue, from Tremont Avenue to 179th Street, to the 173d Street Construction Company, for the purpose of erecting three five-story apartment houses and a one-story business building.

The New York Title and Mortgage Company has also made a loan of $75,000 to the F. William Schwiers Jr. Company on its property at the northwest corner of Forty-eighth Street and Eleventh Avenue, and also a loan of $100,000 to the Fifel Construction Company on its property on the east side of Grand Avenue, 95 feet south of 180th Street, for the purpose of erecting a five-story apartment house.

Buys Trenton Theatre.

Walter Rosenberg of Manhattan has purchased through the Dickerson Agency of Trenton, N. J., the Taylor Opera House and the Trent Theatre of Trenton This transaction involved $550,000. This is the beginning of a chain of theatres which will be known as Reade's Motion Picture Theatres, covering the entir United States. The Taylor Opera House is one of the oldest theatres in the State of New Jersey, and will be entirely remodeled and embellished at an expense of over $200,000.

$200,000 Heights Sale.

Albrecht Kalthoff sold to Isaak Klein, 62 and 68 West 162d Street, at the southwest corner of Anderson Avenue, known as the "Anderson Apartments," on plot 100 by 100. The property shows a rental of $26,000 and was held at $200,000. The sale was negotiated by Jacob Schlamp.

Home Buying in Westchester.

Prince & Ripley, Inc., have sold for Elwood Banfield his residence in the Prospect Park section of White Plains to Volmer H. Houlberg, consisting of two acres of land and a dwelling. The buyer will alter the house for his own occupancy.

Thomas S. Burke sold for William Bianchi the property at 40 Valentine Lane, Van Cortlandt Terrace, Yonkers, to Miss Clara Yale Morse.

George Howe reports the sale for the Larchmont Gardens Company at Larchmont Gardens of a number of building lots to various New York purchasers who plan to build homes for their own occupancy, among whom are Robert Appleton, Arthur H. Fuller, Lester L. Larson, Miss Margaret M. Smith, and Mary B. Vermilyea.

American Home Builders announce the purchase of sixty lots at Oakley Manor, Mount Vernof, where they have begun erection of twenty one-family house at prices ranging from $10,000 to $25,000.

Queens Realty Booming.

An average of 102 realty sales a day of homes alone were recorded in Queens Borough for the month of October. It was the heaviest month in the history of the Queens Hall of Records.

THE TAX RATE.

An Increase of Ten to Fifteen Points Predicted.

The following statement was issued by the City Budget Committee of the Real Estate Board of New York yesterday:

"The final city budget, which will be only slightly changed by the Board of Aldermen, will mean an average tax rate in the several boroughs of 2.50. This will be an increase of from ten to fifteen points, depending on the special sums to be levied in the different boroughs for county charges or for street openings or sewers. This rate may be lowered by anticipating the return from the State income tax, although it would be bad finance to figure on the first return from any new tax.

"The 1920 budget is the first city budget since consolidation adopted by a combination of borough Presidents with one city elected official. Heretofore the three officers elected by the entire city and having at heart the interests of the city have controlled.

"The Mayor, the Controller, and the President of the Board of Aldermen during previous administrations, realizing that the borough Presidents were interested only in their own boroughs, invariably insisted on determining the budget, and while there were extravagances, due to some extent to an exaggerated idea of what city government should undertake to do, yet in no year since consolidation were the combined increases more than 2 per cent. of the previous budget. During the two years of this administration the budget has increased 25 per cent. Next year's budget shows an increase of 10½ per cent. over the budget of 1919.

"If this increase meant additional service or greater efficiency in government there could be less reason for complaint, but it does not. The day the budget was adopted by the combination serious cuts were made in the appropriations for the essential branches of city government, the Police, Fire and Street Cleaning Departments, while those for nonessentials were kept intact. In fact, the real civil service suffered, while the new patronage and the increases of salaries for exempt positions remained intact.

"The Mayor was interested in retaining and increasing his patronage, the borough Presidents in getting as much money as they could for the administrative forces of their boroughs. Neither apparently considered the interests of the city or the taxpayers and the rentpayers.

"The Controller's motion to increase the police force was voted down, although the necessity for a great police force is apparent; while his motion to strike out several unnecessary exempt positions in the Fire Department was also voted down.

"The borough Presidents received over $18,000,000, not for the improvement of their boroughs, but for the expense of maintaining the administration of their boroughs, although schools, police, firemen, health officials, water, and most of the essentials of real government are paid for by the city itself.

"All this proves the contention of the Real Estate Board, made as long ago as in 1914, that there can be no real economy in city government until there is a reorganization of the city government.

"Promises of economy by candidates are forgotten by elected officials. Henry Bruère, thoroughly acquainted with city affairs, said six years ago that the then yearly budget of about $200,000,000 could be cut 25 per cent. without impairing the efficiency of government. When the budget was only $190,000,000 Mayor Mitchel and Controller Prendergast, then candidates, said the same thing. The present administration was elected on the same issue—a great reduction in the budget.

"Much of the needed reorganization can be done locally, but some legislation is needed. Each year since 1914 the Real Estate Board of New York has supported legislation to enforce economies, but has met with the opposition of elected officials. Some bills have passed, but they were relatively unimportant. A complete revision of the charter is needed, but obviously there is not time even before the meeting of the next legislative session. Bills can and will be prepared, however, to reduce the cost of city government along the lines previously laid down, and the Real Estate Board would be glad to have the co-operation of any civic organization sincerely desirous of accomplishing this result.

"There are several absolutely necessary amendments that should be made to the charter.

"The borough Presidents should not vote on the budget for city governments.

"Borough expenses should be determined by the borough governments, but should be a charge against the borough and not be paid out of the general tax levy.

"The Corporation Counsel should be an elected official.

"The Commissioner of Accounts should also be the City Auditor and should be elected.

"The Controller should be the head of the Department of Taxation and Finance.

"These officials, with the Mayor and the President of the Board of Aldermen, should comprise the Board of Estimate."

Housing Crisis in Brussels.

In Brussels, as in other large cities all over the world, there exists an acute shortage of dwelling houses and apartments. The population of greater Brussels, which at the end of 1913 was about 800,000, now is estimated at more than 830,000. Needless to say, there has been no new construction during the period of German occupation, nor has there been any considerable resumption since the armistice.

Before the war the municipality of Brussels organized a corporation for the construction of dwelling houses, which were to become the property of the city at the expiration of a 99-year lease. This corporation had undertaken but little work when the war broke out, and it is estimated that there is now immediate need for the construction of 7,000 houses and apartments in the city. It is now reported that the Belgian Government is prepared to enact a law creating a national society for constructing dwelling houses at a reasonable price, in view of the congestion prevailing in other large towns in Belgium.—Commerce Reports.

Reduced Insurance.

The Chicago Board of Underwriters has reduced the basis rate on fireproof office buildings 5 per cent. where the floors are subdivided. This includes clubs, hotels, and bank buildings. The change affecting the building rates only. As some modifications are to be made in the exposure rates and as the 10 per cent. surcharges have been taken off, this will constitute a very material reduction on Chicago fireproof buildings. It is justified by the experience on the class, the only recent losses of importance being in the Consumers Building and the Security Building, both due to moving picture film exchanges.

TRANSIT MUDDLE COMES TO QUEENS

ONE FARE, SAYS DELANEY

Stations Must Be Changed to Permit Safe Operation of All Trains—Both Companies Complain.

Transit Construction Commissioner John H. Delaney and officials of the Interborough and Brooklyn Rapid Transit Companies are trying to find a way to operate rapid transit trains of both companies over one set of tracks in Queens Borough that were installed by the Interborough for its own cars, which are ten and a half inches narrower than those of the B. R. T. Company. The stations were made to fit the I. R. T. cars, with the result that ten and a half inches will have to be taken off of them in order to let the B. R. T. cars pass. If this is done, the space between the Interborough cars and the station platforms will be so great as to make it dangerous for passengers.

Frank Hedley, President of the Interborough Company, calls the contract a "fool contract," and the B. R. T. officials agree with him, but Mr. Delaney says that, foolish or wise, it will have to be lived up to. It is expected that the Broadway subway, operated by the B. R. T. Company, will be ready to operate in Queens early in the coming Spring, and the company insists upon its share of the Queens traffic. The Interborough has been vigorously protesting against spending any more money to benefit its rival.

Mr. Delaney has suggested that the Interborough install moving platforms on its cars so as to cover the space between its trains and the station platforms.

After a number of conferences the two companies practically agreed on making the terminal of the B. R. T. Company the eastern end of the Queensboro Bridge, and those who desired to travel on either the Corona or the Astoria branch of the lines could do so by paying the Interborough a second fare. The shorter distance would benefit the B. R. T. Company. Dumping passengers out of these trains at a point where they would be compelled to journey further on the Interborough lines appeared to the companies as a wise solution of the problem.

There have been many conferences on the subject, and efforts have been made to induce Commissioner Delaney to consent to some plan which would cost the Interborough less money and the passengers more, but without success. Mr. Delaney insists upon the letter of the contract. Under the terms of the contract the Interborough Company was compelled to equip the road and to share the service with the B. R. T. Company. This was the price it was compelled to pay to enter the growing community of Queens.

Mr. Delaney said yesterday that the edges of the stations could be easily removed so as to permit the operation of the B. R. T. trains and that the only difficult problem now was to induce the Interborough to install some device which would cover the space between its cars and the platforms so as to make travel safe. He also said that he was anxious to issue the necessary order to the Interborough Company to get ready to share the traffic with the B. R. T. Company, but that he did not want to do so until the former company had agreed upon some device such as a sliding platform. The Interborough will have to make some changes also in the third rail so as to fit the larger type of cars used by the B. R. T. Company.

During the various discussions stress was laid upon the rapid growth in the population of Queens and the need of the people there for additional transit service. It was repeatedly said that the section will eventually yield rich profits to both companies and that whatever money the Interborough invests in getting an entrance to the borough will earn large returns.

It was also stated that any agreement that would involve the payment of a second fare by passengers journeying to or from Corona and Astoria would raise a storm of protest.

SUCCESSFUL AUCTION SALE.

A Total of $2,615,000 Obtained for East Bronx Property.

The Hunts Point Terminal Corporation property in the East Bronx and the holdings of the George F. Johnson estate were closed out at public auction last week by Joseph P. Day for a total of $2,615,000. Discussing the sale at its close Mr. Day said: "This sale closes my lot market for 1919 after a record set of selling approximately 11,000 lots for around ten million dollars, during the last six months, when I opened the market with the James Gordon Bennett estate sale.

"It has been the greatest lot selling test the real estate market has had in two generations.

"It shows conclusively that people's minds are beginning to come back and think of real estate seriously and that lot sales can be absorbed if properly presented.

"Outside of the money that has been made, it is quite a satisfaction to know that with all of the intensive selling that my organization and myself have been through, we have had the most satisfied number of buyers to deal with.

"The long and firmly held Hunts Point section of the East Bronx at last has been opened to development and occupation, and I would not be at all surprised to see a building movement of large proportions develop there in the very early future. All that is needed is a little patience, while the city completes its improvements.

"The Longwood Avenue, or 'Johnson,' section is already one of the best developed sections of the Bronx. It is at present underbuilt and overpopulated. More apartments and stores are badly needed and this section can be depended upon to take care of itself, especially in the sections where the Johnson estate lots are located."

Mortgage Loans Placed.

Wetmore & Magill have recently placed the following loans: $165,000 on the five-story business building 152-56 West Forty-fifth Street, running through to 155 West Forty-fourth Street; $90,000 on the five-story apartment house at the southeast corner of Grand Boulevard and 183d Street; $85,000 on the five-story business building 1,435 Broadway; $53,000 on the five-story apartment house on Creston Avenue, near Burnside Avenue; $45,000 on the five-story apartment house on Vyse Avenue, near 174th Street; $40,000 on two two-story garages on Grand Boulevard and 187th Street; $25,000 on the five-story building 614-18 West 181st Street.

LONDON, Nov. 9.—Attempts were made in several countries over the week end to put into operation an ambitious program of a "Red" international effort at a world rising in support of Bolshevism.

Complete details of the plot came to the notice of the British authorities many weeks ago. The date for the upheaval had been fixed for Nov. 7. Preparations had been made to deal with any emergency. In Germany and Italy it was found necessary for the Governments to take stern measures. In Switzerland the threats of the extremists came to nothing, and elsewhere it appears that nothing unusual took place.

Plans for the world rising were, The Chronicle understands, instituted by the Soviet Government early in September. Emissaries of Lenin traveled to Switzerland, and there got in touch with German and Swiss Communists with the view of drawing up a revolutionary program. This was discovered by the Federal authorities, who promptly deported two of the ringleaders.

Then the party shifted their headquarters to Stuttgart, and here, under direction of a notorious German agitator named Munzenberger, detailed plans were elaborated and afterward approved by the committee of the Third Internationale.

Demonstrations under the leadership of Bolshevist agitators were to assume a militant character. "Workers and Soldiers' Councils" would then seize the political power, disarm the "bourgeoisie" and establish a proletarian dictatorship.

In order to initiate the movement a manifesto calling upon the "proletariat of the world" to revolt in favor of Bolshevism on Nov. 7, was sent to sympathetic organizations for circulation in various countries by the German Spartacide group, who received the mandate for the purpose from Moscow.

This document was circulated in Great Britain without any effect. Meetings were held in various districts to commemorate the anniversary of the inauguration of Bolshevism, but they were attended by very few people and no disturbance of any kind was reported.

CALLS RED PERIL UNIVERSAL.

Ex-Danish Minister to Russia Sees Strikes Inspired from One Source.

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 9.—There is probably none better acquainted with Bolshevist aims and activities than the ex-Danish Minister to Russia, Harald Scavenius, who received me this afternoon. He is the last foreign representative to attempt to make the world realize the universal character of the Bolshevist peril.

I told him I had received in Paris details of the spread of Bolshevist propaganda from various European countries, and asked whether he could supply similar information regarding their work in America. He replied:

"Names matter very little. If I say that A or B is spreading Bolshevist propaganda in America, that simply proves the case as regards A and B, no more. The discovery of the propagists is a matter for your police and Secret Service. But what is far more important is proof of single direction working on carefully planned out lines toward a single goal. This proof I can supply.

Proof of Single Direction.

"It lies in the exact similarity of labor troubles all the world over in one important particular, namely, that all, or nearly all, present and recent strikes have been carried out against the wishes or over the heads of the men's own leaders and usual trades union organizations. There have been periods of labor unrest before and strikes aplenty, but never before have they been accompanied by this same phenomenon, which now is almost invariable.

"To put the matter plainly, the heart of the Bolshevist propaganda is not directed against the employers—not yet,

Ultimatum to Rumania Orders Her Out of Hungary

PARIS, Nov. 9.—The French Foreign Office announced tonight that on Friday the Supreme Council sent the Rumanian Government a peremptory demand that it withdraw immediately its troops from Hungary.

The conference has now asked Rumania four times to withdraw her troops from Hungary.

LODGE PREPARED TO RUSH TREATY

Democrats' Fight on Reservations May Carry Final Vote Over Until Next Week.

ARTICLE X. CALLED UP TODAY

Proposal Which the President Called "Knife Thrust" Likely to Be Forced Through.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—Although the majority leaders in the battle on the Treaty of Peace with Germany in the Senate hope for a final vote on their reservation program by the end of this week, there was no assurance today that their expectations would be realized. Senator Hitchcock, the minority leader, indicated that the Administration forces would put up a fight that is likely to throw the treaty over until next week or even later.

Mr. Hitchcock, while repeating that the Democratic leaders were eager for a speedy final vote on the treaty, said tonight they were not willing to consent to any program that would mean its ratification with the committee reservations as a part of it. If necessary, the Senator said, the minority would carry out its plan to vote down the majority's resolution of ratification, in which event the treaty might be "suspended in the Senate indefinitely."

The alignment of the majority, in adopting the first two reservations last week, Mr. Hitchcock interpreted as forecasting the ultimate disposition of the others.

"I expect that the majority will now jam through their remaining reservations, or most of them," said Mr. Hitchcock. "The Administration Senators will endeavor to block their program, but it looks as if the majority was determined to adopt reservations that will mean the killing of the treaty."

Senator Hitchcock declined to predict how many Democrats might vote to reject the ratifying resolution with the committee reservations as a part of it. He believed, he said, that at least thirty-three Senators would stand together.

The Senator was asked about a report heard yesterday that if it came to the point of defeating the ratifying resolution by their votes some Democrats would decline to do it. Mr. Hitchcock replied that he was unable to say that all the Administration Democrats would vote for rejection, but he was certain that enough would take that stand to defeat the majority program.

One report had it that at least fifteen Democrats were unwilling to assume the responsibility of voting to reject the treaty. Among these, it was said, were several who preferred that no reservations of any kind be made, but who would rather accept those proposed by the majority than to run the risk of the treaty being thrown aside. If fifteen opposed the rejection of the treaty the Democrats would not have enough strength alone to defeat ratification.

But the Administration forces would be helped out by the irreconcilable Republicans, headed by Knox, Borah, and Johnson, if they were really bent on defeating the resolution.

The whole situation as to the final vote on ratification is admittedly tangled, as the treaty comes nearer to ultimate disposition.

Senator Lodge insists that the majority reservations are going through. With Mr. Hitchcock just as confidently saying that the treaty will not be ratified with the reservations embraced in the ratifying resolution, the situation seems to mean long delay in reaching an ultimate agreement.

Senator Hitchcock said tonight that he would not be surprised to see the treaty go over into the next session of Congress after the defeat of the majority's ratifying resolution and the assured defeat of any substitute resolution, with interpretative reservations, ofered by the minority.

The treaty will be hung up in the Senate if no agreement is reached on reservations, Senator Hitchcock said. Senator Lodge admits this, but insists that the Administration forces will never be able to "bring it to life again."

Senator Hitchcock asserted that the

PLAN FOR RED TERROR HERE

Program of Organized 'Russian Workers' for Revolution Revealed.

GENERAL STRIKE FIRST STEP

Then Armed Revolt and Seizure of All Means of Production and Articles of Consumption.

CRIMINALS TO BE FREED

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—Francis P. Garvan, Assistant Attorney General, at the instance of Attorney General Palmer, made public tonight the program that was approved by the Federation of Unions of Russian Workers in the United States, for the overthrow of the United States Government, the confiscation of private property, the assassination of public officials, the bombing of army barracks and police stations, and other acts of violence.

The document was published this year by the federation, and so far as is known was printed only in Russian and secretly circulated among radicals who speak Russian. It was captured in the Baltimore raid of Friday night and its translation was completed last night.

The Department of Justice considers this document ample justification for the deportation of any alien who admits membership in the Federation of Russian Unions or approves its program.

The manifesto is in five parts, which are captioned "The Struggle of Classes," "The Empire of Capital," "Communism Inevitable," "The State," and "Our Tactics." It is in the last part that the campaign of murder, confiscation, and terror is urged.

"What should be our means of carrying on the fight?" is the question that prefaces the incendiary program which this union of 7,000 Russians in America had approved.

"The tactics of the working class," begins that part of the manifesto answering this question, "should not be a matter of invention or contrivance, nor imparted from without, any more than their ideal, the overthrow of capital and the State. No. It must be revealed in the bosom of present-day society. It is necessary carefully to learn where are those elements the development of which will destroy present society and create a new one. Having discovered these elements, we must, with our tactics, consciously hasten their development.

"We see that the proletariat, along with the development of capitalism, more and more broaden and deepen their struggle: partial strikes lose their significance and mass strikes pass into general ones.

"What must we do, the vanguard of the proletariat? We must consciously hasten the elementary movement of the struggle of the working class; we must convert small strikes into general ones, and convert the latter into an armed revolt of the laboring masses against capital and State.

"At the time of this revolt we must at the first favorable opportunity proceed to an immediate seizure of all means of production and all articles of consumption, and make the working class the masters in fact of all general wealth. At the same time we must mercilessly destroy all remains of governmental authority and class domination, liberating the prisoners, demolish prisons and police offices, destroy all legal papers pertaining to private ownership of property, all field fences and boundaries, and burn all certificates of indebtedness—in a word, we must take care that everything is wiped from the earth that is a reminder of the right to private ownership of property; to blow up barracks, gendarme and police administration, shoot the most prominent military and police officers, must be the important concern of the revolting working people.

"In the work of destruction we must be merciless, for the slightest weakness upon our part may afterward cost the working class a whole sea of needless blood. In completely destroying all vestiges of the dominion of capital and State, we must try as soon as possible to start production upon new foundations. That is, extend the existing labor organizations and their unions and give production over to them. Every city should begin the work separately and proclaim a commune; that is, the union of all free labor organizations will become masters of the city.

Calls for General Strike.

35 TAKEN IN RAID HELD FOR ANARCHY

Most of 1,000 Men Caught in Lusk Descent Are Set Free.

7,500 COMMUNISTS HERE

Membership in Party Held to be Crime—John Reed on Way to Russia.

Twenty-five tons of radical literature, among which were several hundredweight of appeals in English from Lenin to the American people and the rest disguised or open pleas for revolution in many languages, was seized in the raids on seventy-one radical headquarters on Saturday night, according to State Senator Clayton R. Lusk, head of the Legislative Committee investigating Bolshevist and seditious activites.

The money for printing revolutionary circulars, pamphlets and papers by millions, for maintaining the seventy-one radical headquarters which were raided and for keeping hundreds of Red agitators at work in disturbed industrial centres is furnished mainly by large contributors abroad and in this country, Senator Lusk said.

The Communist Party, which was organized in Chicago on Sept. 1 of this year as a coalition of all radicals who believe in overthrowing the Government by violence, apparently has unlimited funds at its disposal, and one of the purposes of the raids of Saturday night was to trace in detail the sources of its income. Senator Lusk pointed to the fact that the communists, officially born only a little more than two months ago, were able to set up seventy-three meeting places and business offices in this city and vast machinery for agitation throughout the country as proof of the great amount of money at their disposal.

Planned to Organize Red Guards.

Senator Lusk said that leaders of the communists, who had been questioned by the committee, had not only admitted that they planned to organize "Red Guards," after the Bolshevist pattern, to overthrow this Government, but that they were working in co-operation with Russia. When he was asked if the committee's investigations showed that the money supplied from abroad came from Russia, he said:

"We have established that they have received very substantial contributions here and substantial sums of money from abroad, but I am not ready to go further into that. This movement, however, did not start in Russia. It started in Germany.

"It has been completely established that the Red Government in Russia was established by 500 radicals, who were shipped by Germany from Switzerland into Russia and who organized the Red Guard and caused a large part of the securities held in Russia to fall into the hands of Germany. It is safe to say that Germany will not be distressed by any Bolshevist moves here. As to the local contributors to this movement, I am not ready to say anything at this time."

Senator Lusk said that Maximilian Cohen, editor of The Communist World and co-leader with John Reed of the communist movement, had admitted that the Communist leaders believed the time was now ripe for the overthrow of the Government of the United States and that they were prepared to take practical steps to organize the "American Red Guard" for the purpose of taking over all Government offices.

"He said that this would not necessarily be done by violence," Senator Lusk said. "He told us that trouble would be avoided, if the officeholders of the nations quietly handed over the keys of their offices and abdicated without disturbance. On the other hand, he said that there would necessarily be slaughter if resistance were offered to the Red Guard."

John Reed Going to Russia.

Dr. Maximilian Cohen was not taken in last night's raids, and is not under arrest. Senator Lusk would not discuss his case. The principal organizer of the Communist Party at the Chicago meeting was John Reed. After telling about the unlimited finances of the Communists, Senator Lusk said that Reed was at present en route to Russia again. No news of his arrest had yet reached the authorities here, and Senator Lusk refused to say whether or

PALMER TO CONSULT WILSON

MOVE A GREAT SURPRISE

But Palmer Says Government Won't Withdraw from the Action It Has Taken.

FINISH FIGHT LOOKED FOR

Prompt Action Against Miners' Chiefs Predicted if Court Mandate Is Ignored.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—It is expected here that Attorney General Palmer will take up with President Wilson tomorrow morning the statement made by President Gompers and the members of the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor denouncing the injunction against the miners as an autocratic use of authority, and it is probable that a formal reply will come from the White House.

It is felt that any move to proceed against Mr. Gompers and other labor leaders for what amounts to virtual defiance of the Government would first have to receive the indorsement of the President. Mr. Palmer and other officials who could be reached tonight refused to discuss this feature until there had been time tomorrow for consideration.

When a summary of the more radical statements contained in the announcement by the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor was given to Mr. Palmer tonight by THE NEW YORK TIMES, he said:

"The attitude of the Department of Justice is absolutely unchanged. There will be no move on the part of the Government to withdraw the injunction proceedings. So far as we are concerned, the action has been taken and will not be withdrawn."

Mr. Palmer said that no transcript of the decision of the Executive Council of the Federation had been transmitted to him, and his first knowledge of the stand taken by the Federation came from THE TIMES.

The Attorney General said that he would not comment at any length upon the announcement by the American Federation of Labor until he had had an opportunity tomorrow to study it. It was apparent that the extreme stand taken by President Gompers and the other leaders of the American Federation of Labor was a surprise to Mr. Palmer.

Mr. Palmer was asked if proceedings would be brought against Acting President Lewis and other labor officials in the event that the leaders of the mine workers refused to call off the strike by Tuesday night, in view of the indorsement given to them by the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor.

"That," said Mr. Palmer, "is asking me to comment upon the details of the statement before I have had a chance to study all of the questions involved. I must refuse to go to that extent tonight."

THE TIMES offered to place the text of the statement before the Attorney General, but he said that he would under no consideration go into a detailed reply or discuss the more grave features of the stand taken by the American Federation of Labor before tomorrow.

It is understood that Attorney General Palmer was not consulted at all by the officials of the American Federation of Labor in connection with their hastily called conference here today, and that the radical statement was issued without further attempt to bring about a change of heart on the part of the Government.

The hope that the Government would alter its position, it is stated, was finally given up by the officials of the American Federation of Labor after the series of conferences between Mr. Gompers and Attorney General Palmer, the last of which was concluded late Friday night. At that time Mr. Palmer was quoted as telling Gompers that the Government would not consider withdrawing its injunction proceedings or negotiate for a settlement of the strike until the strike order had been rescinded and that the strike would be broken.

From the attitude taken by Mr. Palmer tonight official circles in Washington were inclined to look upon the situation as one which promised a finish fight between the Government and the labor forces, especially in the event that the officials of the mine workers refused to obey the mandate of the court directing that the strike shall be called off by Tuesday night.

The general belief here is that the Federation "Convinced of Justice of Miners' Cause"; Declares That the Coal Strike Was Justified

From Last Night's Statement by the Federation of Labor Council.

"By all the facts in the case, the miners' strike is justified. We indorse it. We are convinced of the justice of the miners' cause.

"We pledge to the miners the full support of the American Federation of Labor, and appeal to the workers and the citizenship of our country to give like indorsement and aid to the men engaged in this momentous struggle."

11,000 CHEER SOVIET RULE AND MINERS

HEAVY GUARDS OF POLICE

Dudley Field Malone Declares Courts Can't Make Strikers Return to Work.

Cheering every reference to Sovietism, 11,000 persons jammed into Madison Square Garden last night, and under the direction of the Peoples' Freedom Union of New York held a mass meeting to protest against the "blockade" of Bolshevist Russia—a blockade which Assistant Secretary of State Phillips last week declared was non-existent on America's part.

Between cheers for the Soviet and its methods, the thousands found time to cheer for the coal miners and the steel strikers, and to register one grand whoop when Dudley Field Malone, the Chairman, sandwiched this in between introductions:

"There is no court in America that can compel any miner or group of miners to work," a reference to the court decision that the coal strike leaders must withdraw their strike order.

A double row of policemen were around the Garden outside, and a force were in the basement awaiting a call. Many Department of Justice men meandered through the crowds. They had nothing to do except, perhaps, to watch girls doing a brisk trade selling a publication called "Soviet Russia" at 10 cents a copy.

Louis Lochner of the Ford peace ship party opened the meeting. While waiting for Mr. Malone to appear he introduced Wilfred Humphries, "who has seen the workings of Soviet Russia while there as a Red Cross and Y. M. C. A. worker for eleven months."

Calls Tales of Bolsheviki Untrue.

Humphries, a tall, auburned haired man, said it deeply moved him to have an opportunity to tell about Russia. He said one of his jobs in the Russia of the Soviet (here a hurrah was raised and a yell for Trotzky) had been the distribution of 1,000,000 copies of President Wilson's fourteen-point speech. Laughter and a few groans came at that point. Humphries added:

"I don't wonder you laugh now, but the so-called ignorant Russian laughed eighteen months ago."

Humphries said that, in handling the distribution, he had come in contact with about 100 Soviets in Central Russia and he had learned that 75 per cent. of the tales about the Bolsheviki were false. He gave it as his opinion that a wrong done to a Russian workman was a wrong done to an American workman, and when he mentioned a reverse sustained by the allied forces under General Yudenitch he was applauded.

Then Mr. Malone, who had arrived while Humphries was speaking, took the chair.

"Conditions of this meeting," he said, after he had outlined its purpose, "are that it must be orderly, and if any representatives of the Department of Justice, the Lusk Committee"—here the crowd interrupted with "boos"—"and Archibald Stevenson are here, let them settle back in their chairs with sharpened pencils. We will proceed.

"I am glad there is a group of Americans who, in the face of the outrages perpetrated by us, dare to ask for the lifting of the Russian blockade. I am glad to see so many working men here in the uniform of the police in and around this building, for they are working men, if they are intelligent enough to see it. They will get more information here than they will get from their superiors or the press.

"I hope to see the time when all labor, organized or unorganized," he said at another point, "will demand that we take troops out of Siberia."

Resolutions Adopted.

Dr. Norman Thomas was introduced as a "man who loves his country better than the present Administration." He opened up with "My comrades," and proceeded to stamp anti-Bolshevist-Russian troops as "mercenaries," who

'VERY INTERESTING,' REMARKS LEWIS

Miners' Leader Told of American Federation's Pledge to Support Strike.

CONFERENCE MEETS TODAY

Union Officials Will Consider Court's Command to Recall Strike Order by Tuesday.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Nov. 9.—John L. Lewis, acting President of the United Mine Workers, refused to discuss the action of the American Federation of Labor in pledging its support for the continuance of the coal strike. When told of the statement issued by the Federation's Executive Council, he said:

"Very interesting."

Asked about the probable effect of the action on tomorrow's meeting of the miners' leaders, at which they are to consider whether or not they will obey the court order to recall the strike order by Tuesday, he replied:

"I have no other comment to make."

William Green, Secretary-Treasurer of the Mine Workers, said:

"I do not feel that under all the circumstances I should express an opinion on the Federation action at this time."

Frank J. Hayes, President of the United Mine Workers, who has been incapacitated through illness, was expected to arrive in Indianapolis today from Denver. Efforts to locate him tonight, however, were unavailing, and other officers of the Mine Workers said they did not know whether he had reached the city.

Earlier in the evening Mr. Lewis had denied that he had agreed to comply with the order of the Federal court.

"Statements to the effect that I shall or shall not comply with the mandatory proceeding of the injunction writ are unauthorized and premature," he declared.

Counsel for the miners yesterday was reported to have said that Mr. Lewis and Secretary-Treasurer William Green purposed to obey the court's order, but that they could not speak for other officials.

The meeting of union officials to decide what action shall be taken on the court order has been set for 10 o'clock tomorrow morning. Several of the district officials, including Frank Farrington, President of the Illinois district, arrived today or tonight, but none of them would make any statement.

The outcome of tomorrow's conference is problematical. Several district Presidents gave out statements on the situation last night before leaving their homes for Indianapolis. These statements showed a wide divergence of opinion as to what course should be adopted.

Many of the union men have contended that as the strike was ordered by the full convention of the miners in Cleveland, only another convention could authorize calling it off. Another phase of the situation discussed is what action the Government might take if the miners as individuals refused to obey an order of officials rescinding the strike order.

Government officials are taking no action, pending the expiration of the time given the union chiefs to withdraw the strike order. C. B. Ames, Assistant Attorney General, in charge of the Government's proceedings, has returned to Washington. John B. Creighton of the Bureau of Investigation is still in Indianapolis, and, with local Government officials, is charged with enforcement of the court's injunction.

The operators still maintain the attitude adopted immediately after the strike was called—that is, readiness to reopen negotiations as soon as the miners resume work.

West Virginia Leader Thinks Miners' Officials Will Prefer It.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Nov. 9.—C. F. Keeney, President of District 17, and James Gilmore, President of District 29, United Mine Workers, and other union officials, before starting today for Indianapolis, said they would "abide by the majority" decision as to obeying the court order for the recall of the strike order.

"If the majority decide to go to jail and not recall the strike order, I will

Call Strike Injunction So "Autocratic as to Stagger Human Mind."

EXPECT MINERS TO DISOBEY

REVISED BY GOMPERS

Use of Lever Act Called Injustice to Workers and to All Liberty Loving Americans.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—The American Federation of Labor tonight, following a meeting of the Executive Committee, issued a statement denouncing the Government's injunction against the coal strike as "so autocratic as to stagger the human mind," pledging the support of the Federation to the continuation of the strike and calling on all organized labor in the country to aid the strikers. The public is asked to give like indorsement and aid the "men engaged in this momentous struggle."

This action comes on the eve of the conference of the leaders of the striking miners at Indianapolis tomorrow, when they are to decide what action they will take on the court order commanding them to recall the strike order.

The issuing of the statement followed a seven-hour session of the Executive Council in the Federation of Labor Building. In the opinion of the leaders of organized labor, this indorsement means that the strike will go on.

Those who attended the meeting were Samuel Gompers, President of the Federation; Frank Morrison, Secretary; Daniel J. Tobin, Treasurer, and Frank Duffy, William D. Mahon, T. A. Rickert, Jacob Fischer, and Matthew Woll, the last five named being Vice Presidents.

Three of the Vice Presidents—Joseph F. Valentine, William Green, and James Duncan—were absent, but it was said that the action taken meets with their indorsement.

The Executive Council went into session at 3 o'clock this afternoon. The statement was issued at 10 o'clock tonight by Frank Morrison. It was revised at least three times before it was finally approved by Mr. Gompers and given to the newspaper correspondents. Mr. Gompers was the first to leave the meeting. He refused to comment one way or the other on the action taken. The statement, he explained, spoke for itself. There was not a dissenting voice when the statement was submitted in its final form for approval of the Executive Council.

Several times during the conference, John L. Lewis, Acting President, and William Green, Secretary-Treasurer of the United Mine Workers of America as well as a member of the Executive Council of the Federation, were consulted by long distance telephone at Indianapolis. Both are understood to have indorsed the action taken.

Text of the Statement.

The federation statement reads:

"The Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor, called into special session in the City of Washington for the express purpose of considering the coal strike, the conditions which brought on the strike, as well as the court proceedings brought by the Government, submit to our fellow-citizens and to our fellow-workers the following statement:

"The Executive Council is of the opinion that the officers of the United Mine Workers of America did everything in their power to avert this great industrial controversy. Of all the great industries in our country, there is none so dangerous to human life as the coal industry. The men who go down under the ground to dig coal, so that the domestic and industrial needs of the nation may be supplied, are engaged in work more hazardous than any other employment.

"Due consideration has never been given to the danger surrounding the coal miners. There is no other class of employment where each individual worker is so isolated and in whose districts there is such a lack of opportunity of social intercourse and enjoyment.

"The condition of the miner and his family is such that he is practically deprived not only of sunshine and fresh air, but to a certain extent he is deprived of the association and companionship of all other human beings outside of his own particular class who are themselves engaged in the dangerous and unhealthy occupation of coal mining.

"The miners suffer more than any other workers from periods of compulsory unemployment. Authentic statistics show that the miners have less than 200 days of employment during each year. The wages of the miners, consequently having to spread over the entire year, are greatly reduced as a result of the nonemployment existing in that industry.

"The high cost of living has presented itself in perhaps a more serious form to isolated mining camps than in large industrial centres. There is usually not the same opportunity for the miners in the mining camps to make their purchases to such advantage as is presented in other localities. Their isolation prevents this.

"The United Mine Workers, in their convention held during the month of September in the city of Cleveland adopted a positive declaration demanding improved conditions of employment for the miners. They further instructed the officers to proceed to obtain by negotiations with the operators the working conditions that the convention unanimously adopted.

"There were almost 2,200 delegates seated in the convention, representing 500,000 organized miners. They further positively and explicitly instructed their officers that unless an agreement was reached on or before the first day of November 1919, the resolution of the convention, calling for a strike on November 1, 1919, should be communicated to the membership. There was no alternative except for the officers, who are elected by the members, to carry out the direct instructions of the membership or resign from their positions as officers, in which event chaos and confusion would result.

"The officers of the Mine Workers, with their scale committee, entered into conferences and discussions with the operators in the city of Buffalo. They stated at the conference that they had full power to negotiate an agreement—in other words, that they had the power to give and take in the conference. The employers refused to make any offer whatever.

"Later on the miners answered the call of the Secretary of Labor and further endeavored to reach an agreement, but failed. The officers then proceeded to carry out the instructions of their membership and communicated the results of the failure of negotiations, and by order of the convention the strike automatically took effect Nov. 1 1919.

"The machinery which has existed for years and which has been successful in bringing about agreements between the miners and the operators still exists and they as representatives of the miners were and are ready and willing to enter into negotiations without reservations to reach an agreement.

As to Government Intervention.

"At this time our Government interjected itself and applied for an injunction.

"A temporary restraining order was granted by a Federal Judge, which restrains the officials of the miners from in any way advising their membership on the situation, or contributing any of the moneys of the mine workers to the assistance of [illegible] restraining them from discussing, writing, or entering into any kind of conversation with their membership on the strike situation.

"The Government then proceeded to further invade the rights of the miners, not only by restraining the miners, their officials and in fact [illegible] the purposes for which the men contended, but went to further lengths of demanding from the court an order commanding the officers of the miners' union to recall and withdraw the strike notification, and the court complacently complied and issued the order.

"Never in the history of our country has any such a mandatory order been obtained or even applied for by the Government, by any person, company, or corporation.

"Both the restraining order and the injunction [illegible] are predicated upon the Lever act, a law enacted by Congress for the purpose of preventing speculation [illegible] the food and fuel supplies of the country.

"There never was in the minds of the Congress [illegible] the mind of the President when he signed it, that the Lever act would be applied to workers in cases of strikes or lockouts. The Food Controller, Mr. Hoover, specifically so stated. Members of the committee having the bill in charge have in writing declared that it was not in the minds of the committee, and the then Attorney General Mr. Gregory, gave assurance that the Government would not apply that law to the workers' effort to obtain improved working conditions. Every assurance from the highest authority of our Government was given that the law would not be so applied.

"In the case of President Wilson's address to the Buffalo convention of the American Federation of Labor, November, 1917, among other things he said:

"'While we are fighting for freedom we must see among other things that labor is free, and that means a number of interesting things. It means not only that we must do what we have declared our purpose to do see that the conditions of labor are not rendered more onerous by the war, but also that we shall see to it that the instrumentalities by which the conditions of labor are improved are not blocked or checked. That we must do.'

Calls Action "Autocratic."

"The autocratic action of our Government in these proceedings is of such a nature that it staggers the human mind. In a free country to conceive of a Government applying for and obtaining a restraining order prohibiting the officials of a labor organization from contributing their own money for the purpose of procuring food for women and children that might be starving, is something that when known will shock the sensibilities of man and will cause resentment.

"Surely the thousands of men who are lying in France, under the soil, whose blood was offered for the freedom of the world, never dreamed that so shortly afterward in their own country 450,000 workers endeavoring to better their working condition would have the Government decide that they were not entitled to the assistance of their fellowmen and that their wives and children should starve, by order of the Government.

"It is a well-established principle that the inherent purpose of the injunction processes, where there is no other adequate remedy at law, was for the purpose of protecting property and property rights only, thereby exercising the equity power of the courts to prevent immediate and irreparable injury.

"It was never intended, and there is no warrant of the law in all our country, to use the injunction power of equity courts to curtail personal rights or regulate personal relations. It was never intended to take the place of government by law by substituting personal and discretionary government.

"The Lever act provides its own penalty for violators of its provisions. The injunction issued in this case has for its purpose, not a trial by court and a jury, but an order of the court predicated upon the assumption that the law might be violated and by which the defendants may be brought before the court for contempt and without any trial by jury.

"We declare that the proceedings in this case are unwarranted, and they are unparalleled in the history of our country, and we declare that it is an injustice which not only the workers but all liberty-loving Americans will repudiate and demand redress.

"The citizenship of our country cannot afford to permit the establishment or maintenance of a principle which strikes at the very foundation of justice and freedom. To restore confidence in the institutions of our country and the respect due our courts, this injunction should be withdrawn and the records cleansed from so outrageous a proceeding.

"By all the facts in the case the miners' strike is justified. We indorse it. We are convinced of the justice of the miners' cause. We pledge to the miners the full support of the American Federation of Labor, and appeal to the workers and the citizenship of our country to give like indorsement and aid to the men engaged in this momentous struggle."

Edgar Wallace, the official representative in Washington of the United Mine Workers, and James Lord, head of the Miners' Department of the American Federation of Labor, not being members of the Executive Council, did not take part in the conference. They were called in, however, several times during the session. Neither would comment on the statement beyond saying that it met with their unqualified approval.

That the strike will not be called off seemed to be the unanimous opinion among the labor men who were in the Federation Building tonight. It was reported yesterday that Lewis and Green would obey the mandate issued by Judge Anderson and would call off the strike. When one of the representatives of the United Mine Workers was asked if he could verify the statement he laughed and said, "Wait and see."

"Will the miners go back if ordered to do so?" a labor leader was asked.

They will, like hell," he replied.

It was pointed out at the Federation Building that the men who as members voted the full support of the federation to the miners represent some of the greatest union labor organizations in this country. Morrison is a member of the International Typographical Union; Woll is the President of the International Photo-Engravers' union; Mahon is President of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Workers; Duffy is the Secretary and Treasurer of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners; Rickert is the President of the International Union of Garment Workers, and Tobin is the President of the Teamsters' and Chauffeurs' Union; Duncan represents the Granite Cutters and Green the Mine Workers on the council while Fischer is the head of the barbers' organization.

"Is this statement a call for a general strike," one of the labor officials was asked?

"It says nothing about any general strike. It speaks for itself" he replied.

"Will Lewis and his colleagues go to jail rather than obey the injunction," Wallace of the miners' organization was asked.

"They are in Indianapolis and can answer for themselves," Mr. Wallace replied.

SINGING NATIONAL AIR SILENCES ROSE STOKES

"Star-Spangled Banner," by Yonkers Audience, Breaks Up a Communist Meeting.

The singing of "The Star-Spangled Banner" and the call for "three cheers for the United States," led by the Rev. Dr. Francis Theodore Brown of St. Andrew's Memorial Episcopal Church, broke up a meeting last night of the Communists' Council of America in Union Hall, 19 North Broadway, Yonkers, while Mrs. Rose Pastor Stokes was attempting to deliver an address on the advantages the workingmen of the United States would enjoy under a Soviet form of government.

Dr. Brown and former Alderman Clarence W. Clark, with fifty or more churchmen and business men, were standing in the rear of the hall while the speaker was illustrating the benefits to be derived from a substitution of government in this country.

Dr. Brown managed to make himself heard above the speaker as he remarked, "all talk of a Soviet form of government or a communists government in America is an impertinence." Several of the three hundred in the hall cheered this remark, and before Mrs. Stokes was able to continue with her speech the singing of the "Star-Spangled Banner," quietly at first, but the voices growing louder as it continued, was taken up all over the hall and Mrs. Stokes gracefully bowed herself from the platform.

Dr. Brown learned that Mrs. Stokes was to address the Communists here tonight, and he made his plans rapidly but thoroughly. He called together 200 or more of the prominent citizens, and they agreed to seat themselves in the hall early in the evening so as to crowd out as many of the usual audience as possible. He also conferred with Commissioner of Public Safety O'Keefe on the police arrangements. At the proper time he assumed the best method of ending the meeting.

NOSKE WOULD DEPLORE A REVOLUTION HERE

BERLIN, Nov. 9.—Gustav Noske, Minister of Defense, speaking at Chemnitz, declared his disbelief in a world revolution, and added, "A revolution in America would mean that millions of people in Germany would be threatened with death by starvation."

Referring to the Government plan for socialization, he said a bill would be introduced in the Reichstag in the Winter taxing big employers to the extent of 75 per cent., thus converting them virtually into highly paid employes of their own businesses.

Government, as soon as the time limit has expired Tuesday night, will proceed against the leaders of the mine workers for contempt of court, in the event that they refuse to obey Judge Anderson's mandate. This may mean the imprisonment of some of the officials of the United Mine Workers.

The attitude taken by the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor came as a great surprise. It was felt that the federation might, as an extreme course, declare against the newest angle to the court proceedings and make a plea to President Wilson to alter the Government's policy, but that President Gompers would call upon all organizations of labor unions to support the miners was not for a moment expected.

It is understood that in issuing his call for the meeting of the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor here today President Gompers first was in touch with representatives of the United Mine Workers of America, and that William Green, secretary of that organization, had been asked to come on from Indianapolis for the conference. The fact that the statement by the American Federation of Labor was issued after consultation with the leaders of the miners was accepted by some as indicating that the decision had been reached by the mine workers not to obey the mandate to call off the strike.

'VERY INTERESTING,' REMARKS LEWIS

follow in their steps," said Mr. Keeney. He said the miners would not return to work unless "ordered to do so by their leaders."

He expressed the opinion that the strike leaders would prefer jail to withdrawing the strike order.

Unless the operators attempt to terminate existing wage agreements, Mr. Keeney said, the men would return to work if it was decided to withdraw the strike order. He said, however, "the men would have to return under contract."

Federal troops, located at Charleston, will be moved to the Kanawha City Camp, near here tomorrow, where military headquarters will be located. Troop commanders reported today that all was "quiet" in the various mining districts. According to reports to union headquarters, a Signal Corps company, with signal apparatus and a wireless outfit, has taken up a position in the mountains dividing the unionized coal fields from the nonunion Logan County district.

BROPHY APPEALS TO SPROUL.

Complains of Johnstown's Action Against Organizers.

CLEARFIELD, Penn., Nov. 9.—John Brophy, President of District 2, United Mine Workers, left headquarters here today for Indianapolis, Ind., where district officers and the International Executive Board are said to have been called for a conference by Acting President John L. Lewis regarding the Federal Court order to revoke the strike. President Brophy sent to Governor W. C. Sproul at Philadelphia the following message:

"A mob headed by members of the Chamber of Commerce of Johnstown, apparently with the approval of the city authorities, yesterday prevented organizers of the American Federation of Labor from addressing labor meetings, and demanded that these organizers as well as organizers of the United Mine Workers of America leave town on threat of violence. I ask that you, as Chief Executive of the State, use your authority immediately to see that constitutional rights of free speech and assembly at Johnstown are maintained and mob rule suppressed."

HOWAT IS INDIGNANT.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, Kan., Nov. 9.—"Yesterday's court decision is an outrage that will be resented by every man who believes in liberty and freedom," Alexander Howat, President of the Kansas miners, said today of Judge Anderson's order that the strike order be withdrawn.

"My position at the meeting of the board and Presidents will be the same as a week ago," he added, "that the miners fight it out regardless of all positions."

Howat and Thomas Harvey, District Secretary-Treasurer, left today for Indianapolis.

WHISTLES BLOW AT MINES.

Georges Creek Operators Await Men —Return is Opposed.

Special to The New York Times.

CUMBERLAND, Md., Nov. 9.—The most significant thing to happen since the strike went into effect in the Georges Creek field was the blowing of the whistles of the various mining plants this evening for the miners to make an early start for work tomorrow. The Consolidation Coal Company, the largest producer in the region, drew the fires from the boilers early last week, but they have been rekindled.

Whether the men will obey the call to return is speculative. General Manager G. Marshall Gilette of the Consolidation Coal Company declared he could not say what would be done. It is reported that a number of Secret Service men have arrived here to offer protection in case men returned to work. Some of the more active of the strikers say that the feeling among the men is to refuse to obey an order to return.

The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad has placed guards at its tunnels and bridges on the Connellsville Division, between eighty and one hundred men having been assigned, and the number is to be increased to 125 or more, it is stated.

village communes. The extension of the union and the unification of all countries into one grand national and international federation is a matter of further development.

"But is such a general strike possible now? Is it not a utopian effort to call for a general and simultaneous stoppage of work, production and commerce? Skepticism upon this point is founded upon a simple misunderstanding of that close interdependence which exists between all branches of toil; hardly any one can work without the others, and a stoppage of work in some fields of industry must inevitably cause a strike in all the others.

"We are asked: Does a universal strike have any chance of success? How can the entire laboring class be fed, even it but for a few days? Would not such a strike inevitably end in a complete defeat of the workers? Undoubtedly a general strike system of folded arms would have to suffer a complete failure. But we will not summon the working class to a social revolution in order to strengthen in them a respect for private ownership of property created by their bloody toil. On that day, when all workers go forth upon the street, we will say to them: 'See how all productive and commercial life is ended, how dark and dismal stand the silent mills, manufactories, workshops and warehouses from that minute when we stopped work. Who created all this wealth, it not you workers? To whom should it belong, if not to you, the proletariat? What then—is it possible that you will suffer and starve in the midst of this sea of products created by your toil? Throw away your slavish respect for the law; take everything you need, feed all the hungry. And everybody put on clean holiday attire. Destroy your dirty cellars, and move into the luxurious palaces of the idle rich. Whosoever shall molest you, remove him from your path, as a foe of your freedom. As is evident we anarchists have beautiful means of feeding the working class who stop work.

"But they may tell us that the advantages of a general strike will not warrant the fearful sacrifices which it must cost. To that we will give a clear answer. We would like to save the proletariat from needless suffering. But how is that to be done? We are convinced that legislative reforms will accomplish almost nothing for workers, or will be removed futile by the bourgeoisie. It is therefore necessary for the workers themselves, through their activities, and their struggles, to gain for themselves a better existence. But for the workers there is only one weapon of war—the strike.

"But the partial strike loses in importance every day with the growth of the power of capital and with the augmentation of capitalistic unions. But one mighty, irresistible, and fearful weapon remains in the hands of the workers—a general strike. How can we workers—a general strike. How can we workers—a general strike. How can we get it? Where was it ever seen that any class obtained freedom without great effort and severe sufferings? Look around and ask yourselves how much blood the bourgeoisie have drunk every hour all over the world. We note these senseless sheddings of blood only [illegible] under the protection of shameless law. What are we afraid of, then? For the working class there is the choice only between eternal slavery and bloody struggle. Our choice is made, and we call all workers to a merciless war upon capital and Government.

"But they may still say to us: 'Is it possible [illegible] of dreaming such a formidable force as that of preconceived [illegible] the general strike is the best means of weakening and destroying that force. The army is strong only at that time when it is concentrated at a few points and fully maintains a strict discipline. But what will become of the army when it has to be scattered all over the country? When [illegible] pline when the soldier is convinced that [illegible] of 'internal enemies,' but with the whole of the working people? Will he not remember that he left kindred in his home land who are also on strike and who are also threatened with death at the muzzle of a gun? Does not the heart of the worker in uniform quake before the grand majesty of a people in revolt? Does there not awaken in him a fraternal feeling of the solidarity of all toilers, of all the oppressed? In that hour the army will at once stand powerless in the face of rebellious toil and government will crumble away to the exulting shouts of liberated humanity.

Aim to Kindle Civil War.

"So that for us, anarcho-communists, the economic struggle and the political struggle do not in themselves represent two entirely separate provinces set apart from each other. No! They flow together for us in one and the same struggle of the same working class against all forms of oppression—against capital and against government.

"We alone give life to the great principle, 'The liberation of workers must be the business of the working class themselves,' for we do not entrust the liberation of the toilers to a gang of politicians, unloading upon the shoulders of the proletariat only the grievous struggle for small reforms. We are convinced that only the direct struggle of the working class can and must lead to a complete destruction of the existing order of things.

"We may therefore formulate our tactics thus: By participating in the struggle of the working class, guiding it and uninterruptedly widening and deepening that struggle, kindle and maintain the conflagration of civil war until we have torn up by the roots capitalism and government.

"This is our teaching and this is our means of struggle! Let the absurd tale about the 'new barbarians' disappear! We do not wish to destroy culture (civilization) but the yoke of slavery. We are 'barbarians' only for the Messrs. Present Day Slaveholders.

"Harsh are the means of our struggle. But is this our fault? Cruel life pushes us into the fight and puts into our hands an iron hammer to smash enemies without mercy and attain the goal, our glorious goal. * * *

"We go tranquilly, cheerfully, not because it is not painful to us eternally be calling to bloody combat. No! No! But because there far beyond the corpses of heroes, beyond the blood-covered barricades, beyond all the terrors of civil war, there already shines for us the magnificent, beautiful form of man without a god, without a master, and without authority.

"We hate religion because it kills the spirit with lying tales, takes away courage and faith in the power of man, faith in the triumph of justice here on the real earth and not in a chimerical heaven. Religion covers everything with fog; real evil becomes very visionary, and visionary good a reality. It has always sanctified slavery, cried and tears. And we declare war upon all gods and religious fables. We are atheists.

"We hate slavery in all its forms. And is a 'free workman' not a slave? Does the knout of the master not hang over the head of the proletariat? The workman has ceased being the slave of one lord, of one master. But is he not the slave of the whole class of masters? Let the present-day slave rise and cast off his lord—it is all the same; hunger will drive him to another master, and the collar of perpetual toil, hunger and slavery will be tightened upon him anew. It is necessary to tear up by the roots the division of people into lords and [illegible] we are communists.

"We hate authority, that eternal preserver of slavery and foe of freedom. The lords having been destroyed, why leave the whip of the lords; the power of capital having been destroyed, why allow its safeguard, the State, to remain? Does giving man bread mean depriving him of freedom? Even pigs in their sty have food. Not to the happiness of citizenship do we call the workers—we call them to liberty—to absolute liberty. We are anarchists.

"We wish to disperse darkness and ignorance and abolish prejudices, so that the proletarian may understand the whole world, and understand himself and all the majesty of man.

Say State Must Be Destroyed.

"We wish to divert the workman from eternal anxiety about his stomach; give him a chance to unbend his back and to open to him a whole new world—a world of beautiful forms and marvelous sounds.

"To you we address our speech, our brother workman! Wake up, look around you! See how poor and degraded you are! Remember that you are a man, and that you—you created all that world of wealth! Understand that the workers of all countries are your brothers and that you all have one task—to destroy the world of gain and create a world of freedom; for all there is one means—a armed insurrection and forcible seizure of all instruments and all products of toil. Woe to the enemies of the laboring class."

"But the partial strike loses in importance every day with the growth of the power of capital and with the augmentation of capitalistic unions. But one mighty, irresistible, and fearful weapon remains in the hands of the workers—a general strike. How can we get it? Where was it ever seen that any class obtained freedom without great effort and severe sufferings? HOLD 11 AT DETROIT.

Police Declare That Number Out of 250 Must Go.

DETROIT, Mich., Nov. 9.—Police declared tonight that at least eleven of the 250 alleged radicals rounded up in a raid last night by Department of Justice operatives and local authorities would be deported. It was stated that many of those taken carried Canadian passports and that they will be summarily deported. Federal officials declined to make any statement.

Police and Department of Justice operatives attended [illegible] last night with a large meeting of Russians this afternoon, held in celebration of the second anniversary of the Russian Soviet Government. Mention of Trotsky [illegible] and addresses stressed opposition to the Allies' blockade of Russia.

FIND POWDER AT CLEVELAND.

Seven Alleged Radicals and Literature Are Captured.

CLEVELAND, Nov. 9.—Seven men who, police say, are members of a radical group were arrested in a raid here today. A quantity of literature and a large bag of black powder were seized. The men will be turned over to the Federal authorities.

EIGHT HELD AT ST. LOUIS

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Nov. 9.—Eight men were arrested tonight by police and agents of the Department of Justice at a meeting held under the auspices of the Communist Party of St. Louis. All are held under the technical charge of failing to register for the draft. Seven of the prisoners came from Russia, and the other insisted to Government agents he was American born.

This makes a total of thirteen arrests in St. Louis in the Government round-up of alleged radicals, three Saturday night and two Friday night.

QUIZ 46 AT HARTFORD.

Immigration Officials Are Silent on Alleged Red Hearing.

Special to The New York Times.

HARTFORD, Conn., Nov. 9.—All day and much of last night Government investigators labored over evidence and questioned the thirty-six alleged Reds held in the Hartford Police Station. Immigration inspectors could not comment on the evidence which would be sent to Commissioner Sheffington at Boston.

All the radical suspects who were arrested in Ansonia, New Britain, Waterbury, Seymour, New London and South Manchester, will have their hearing in this city.

Harry Redlin, a lawyer from New Haven, created a commotion this afternoon and indulged in some talk about injustice to his clients, whom, at the time, he could not name. Later, after he had arranged to represent certain individuals, he was admitted to the hearing conducted by Inspector Clark and his assistants.

About thirty prisoners will be given formal hearings tomorrow.

BALTIMORE SPEAKERS ASSAIL RECENT RAIDS

Fiery Attacks on Government and Praise of Soviet Are Applauded at Two Meetings.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 9.—At two public meetings held here this afternoon and tonight, fiery speeches were delivered denouncing the raids made by Government agencies upon the alleged radicals, and the audiences became worked up to a high pitch.

All the attacks upon the Government and sympathetic references to the Russian Soviet were loudly applauded. Mrs. Elizabeth Flynn of the Workers' Defense League of New York was the principal speaker at the night meeting.

At both meetings collections were taken up for the defense of the men arrested in the Saturday raids.

There were no arrests today, but agents of the Department of Justice were busy keeping check on what speakers said at various meetings held by alleged radicals.

The speakers urged their hearers to organize a Communist Shop Party Committee, the purpose of which will be to collect funds for propaganda. In addition to about $156 raised to aid the men caught in the Federal raid, $107 was collected for the purpose of pushing propaganda.

BOSTON CURBS RADICALS.

Several Meetings Not Allowed—Harvard Men Heckle Communists.

BOSTON, Nov. 9.—Several attempts to celebrate the second anniversary of the Bolshevist regime in Russia were frustrated by the police and State Guard tonight.

Radicals who gathered before the Grand Opera House, Lancaster Theatre, and other halls where permits for meetings had been refused, found the doors blocked by police. Crowds who gathered on nearby streets were dispersed by patrolmen and State Guardsmen.

At the Communist Forum in the Roxbury district the speakers, who included Mrs. Marion Sproul, State Secretary of the Communist Party, who is under indictment for alleged violation of the anti-anarchy law, and Dr. Antoinette Konikow, a birth control advocate, were answered from the floor by Harvard students.

RAID WATERBURY I. W. W.'S.

Special to The New York Times.

WATERBURY, Conn., Nov. 9.—Local police visited a hall in the foreign section of this city tonight with agents of the Department of Justice and seized a red flag and a quantity of I. W. W. literature. No arrests were made. Large crowds of foreigners in sympathy with the six alleged Reds under arrest loitered about the I. W. W. headquarters yesterday. They were driven off by the police.

Alexander Chernoff, arrested in the New York raid, lives here and is alleged to be high in the circles of the I. W. W. affairs. He was arrested here last March in a sensational raid on the I. W. W. hall.

ARREST TWO IN PHILADELPHIA

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., Nov. 9.—Two more arrests of suspected alien Reds alleged to be implicated in the correspondence of the Union of Russian Workmen of the United States and Canada, were made here yesterday by Toud Daniel, District Superintendent of the Bureau of Investigation, Department of Justice. Later the men were released.

At the same time, Daniel announced that these arrests were preliminary to another raid on members of the union, its organizers and sympathizers who escaped when two of their local headquarters were raided last Friday night.

Evidence on which the Department of Justice asks for the deportation of the nine men detained out of the forty arrested Friday night, will be presented to the United States immigration authorities here today. It is expected that a hearing will be arranged within the week on the question of their deportation.

The police assert that at the lodgings of Romon Moaichaks, who was arrested in Trenton, were found a quantity of saltpeter and black powder, several small electric batteries, a number of revolver cartridges, small steel and lead slugs, and a supply of copper wire.

HOLD 25 AT AKRON.

Alleged Members of Russian Workers' Council Caught in Raid.

AKRON, Ohio, Nov. 9.—Twenty-five alleged members of the Russian Workers' Council are being held tonight as the result of a raid by Federal officers and Deputy Sheriffs on a meeting today. More than 100 men were taken.

CHARGES UNION WITH GRAFT

Michels Declares Letter Reveals Fraud by Clothing Workers.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Nov. 9.—Charges that the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America has been permeated with graft even in the national headquarters in New York, were made public today by Assistant States Attorney Nicholas Michels, who is conducting an investigation into the local activities of the organization.

An admission that union officials have accepted bribes and otherwise participated in crooked deals was obtained, Michels asserts, in a letter written by Jacob Potofsky, Assistant Secretary of the National Tailors' Union, and received by Sam Levin, manager of the Chicago office. The raid by the States Attorney's Office was so unexpected that this letter was included in the evidence seized, according to Michels.

Potofsky writes under date of Nov. 4: "A few lines to let you know what is going on here in the children's clothing situation. Krupitsky, against whom charges of graft were made, confessed. It appears now that he was not the only one. The taking of graft was part of the system in this branch. Most of the officials are involved.

PUBLISHERS READY FOR OPENING TEST

Big Establishments, Foreseeing End of Strike, Plan to Resume Work Today.

UNIONS PREDICT FAILURE

"Big Six" Almost Unanimously Rejects Arbitration of the 44-Hour Week.

When the presses of all the large printing establishments begin to turn this morning, as was predicted would be the case by the Printers' League on Saturday, it will be necessary to operate them without the assistance of 90 per cent. of the normal number of feeders and with practically no paper handlers or sheet straighteners. Moreover, it will be necessary for the most part to dispense with the services of the compositors, as at a meeting of Typographical Union No. 6, held yesterday afternoon at the Lexington Theatre, Fifty-first Street and Lexington Avenue, the 2,700 members present voted practically unanimously not to arbitrate the forty-four-hour week with the employers, while the question of the cessation of the "vacations" which they have been taking was not even broached.

The feeling of the members was that even if all the men who have joined the new International local union of pressmen were to return to work, the absence of the feeders and helpers would make it impossible for the presses to be operated, but beyond that was the belief on the part of many that the principal reason that the pressmen reaffiliated with the International was that they might fight their International officers from the inside and enforce their demands for the 44-hour and $50 week, without suffering from the disadvantages of secession. One method of accomplishing this, it was suggested, would be for the pressmen, once they were in good standing, to imitate the compositors by taking "vacations." The success of the employers in running their plants during the next few days will in a large measure be the test as to whether the backbone of the strike was broken when the pressmen apparently deserted their President, Bernard Nolan, who is termed a radical by the international officers, and reaffiliated with the organization headed by George L. Berry.

The principal action taken by Big Six yesterday was to readopt the scale of hours and wages which they had included in their original demands to the employers, but which were withdrawn a week ago yesterday. The union instructed its officials to reopen negotiations with the employers. A motion to give the officials power to arbitrate the forty-four-hour week was voted down almost unanimously. The Chairman, Vice Chairman, and Secretary of the Executive Committee were added to the Scale Committee.

In sharp contrast to the attitude of the pressmen at their meeting Friday night, where it was apparent from the beginning that there was an overwhelming sentiment for a return to the international union the compositors yesterday showed no sign of any disposition on their part to make concessions to the employers. One of the officials of the "vacationist" group said that the morale of the union was better now than ever, and in support of that contention held that the number of men receiving out-of-work benefits had been steadily increasing. During the second week, he said, 2,400 men received them; during the third, 3,000, during the fourth, 3,800. These numbers he insisted, made it evident that more and more men were staying away from work.

The attitude of the Printers' League toward the action of Big Six yesterday was made clear by an official of the league last night.

"The officers of the union," he said, "have already condemned the action of the men who quit work, yet the men have not gone back. During the coming week we shall call them back to their jobs, and if they do not come, it will prove either that Big Six is unable to control their men or that the resolution when passed was insincere. We shall go ahead with our plans to open all the big establishments. The work that cannot be set up by compositors will have to be done by photographing the original typewritten copy, as has been done by The Literary Digest, or else the typesetting will have to be done by the planograph."

The planograph process consists essentially in making a perforated record such as that used on a player piano, and then running this record through a machine which prints and justifies the matter from this record. The resulting copy is then photographed and printed on the offset press.

William McHugh, Vice President of the International Printing Pressmen's and Assistants' Union, speaking yesterday afternoon at the offices of the new local, No. 51, in the Sun Building, said that approximately 400 more printers and feeders had visited the offices in the course of the day, and had reaffiliated themselves with the International. Up through Saturday, said Mr. McHugh, the Butterick Publishing Company's plant could not secure enough men to operate as before the strike, but yesterday he showed the names of 108 employes who had come back into the International. He added that the Butterick plant would be operating this morning as if a strike had never occurred.

James J. Ragley, President of Franklin Union No. 23, said yesterday that he did not believe that the claims of the International as to the returning secessionists were true. However, the headquarters of the new unions in the Sun Building were crowded all day, and it was apparent that there were many men anxious to re-enroll.

At a meeting held yesterday President Berry and a committee from old Pressmen's Union No. 51 entered into a contract, the result of which, according to Mr. Berry, "removes the pressmen's difficulty in its entirety." This committee will co-operate with the representatives of the international union and of the two new local unions in getting the pressrooms started as quickly as possible. These unions are the new Pressmen's Union No. 51, which takes the place of the old pressmen's union of the same number, and the new Press Feeders' Union No. 23, which takes the place of old Franklin Union No. 23.

The committee," says a statement issued by Mr Berry last night, "consisting of Messrs. Philip Umstadter, Alfred Kepler, and Edward Neway, met with the representatives of the international union in New York City today and entered into a contract which constitutes the statement to be issued to all pressmen, embracing the following propositions:

"First, that all pressmen should immediately reaffiliate with the international union and abide by its laws and policies representing contracts and arbitration.

"Second—That all members yet unaffiliated shall be taken over into the new union as a body, the details of the affiliation to be determined upon by the officers of the new local union and the Board of Directors of the international organization.

"Third—That upon the reaffiliation and return to employment that the Scale Committee of the new local and the Committee of Three as advisors shall proceed immediately to negotiate with the employers for the adjustment of all differences that may exist regarding wages and hours and that if they are unable to adjust by means of conciliation they then shall proceed to arbitrate.

"Fourth—The agreement provides for the immediate unification of the offices, finances, and properties of the old local union so all pressmen may be properly represented in one union affiliated with the international body, the officers of the new local to continue as the officers of the organization of pressmen of New York City.

"Fifth—The agreement further provides that the plan for individual application for membership or group membership shall continue uninterrupted as the individuals or groups so disposes to act; in other words, the two local unions shall proceed to accept members individually or collectively as the members themselves may determine."

The committee was appointed by unanimous action of the union, said the statement, with full power to act, and their decision would be representative of all of the pressmen unaffiliated.

fight for the capitalists. He pictured the Allies as deliberately invoking starvation to their aid. Leading up to the "blockade," he picked up a clipping and said:

"This is the explanation offered by the American Government—shall I say our Government?" He then read the denial of the blockade issued by the Assistant Secretary of State. He characterized [illegible] as the usual expression of a Government official, which is incapable of belief."

The speaker branched off for a bit to talk about [illegible] "There may be some people here who are of Irish descent." This was received by brief applause from one or two persons.

"It is not safe for men with foreign names," he said, "to advocate a strike."

The speaker produced as an exhibit [illegible] up a pamphlet which had a brown stain [illegible] declaring it was a Russian arithmetic seized in recent raids on radicals here. The sight of the stained book provoked a demonstration.

After Thomas came the resolutions, read by Rose Schneiderman, President of the New York Women's Trade Union League. One called for food for Russian babies and children, instead of munitions for Russia's enemies; the second called for the immediate withdrawal of the American force in Siberia. Both were carried unanimously, although Mr. Malone announced he distinctly overheard a "no" from "the press reporters."

Mr. Malone's remark about the inability of the courts to prevent strikes came about this time; in fact, just after he had rebuked an overenthusiast in the gallery who bellowed for "a general strike." Mr. Malone, after referring to the fact that "radical news, when printed in THE NEW YORK TIMES is to be believed," added that he had read about Judge Anderson's decision.

"While as a lawyer," he went on, "I recognize Judge Anderson had a perfect right to issue the injunction he issued, yet I want to say to you that there is no court in the land that can compel any miner or group of miners anywhere to work if they don't desire to work.

"Yet, this Federal Judge refused to grant citizenship to men who went asking for it, because they insisted upon their right to belong to an organization.

"I want to say to you that if these so-called statesmen of America are looking for anarchy, they will find it in the advertisements of our newspapers and in the decisions of some of the courts."

The last speaker was James H. Maurer, President of the Pennsylvania State Federation of Labor. Maurer, who, notwithstanding his years of American residence, speaks with an accent, was wildly applauded their turn will come later—but against the recognized labor leaders. Its object is to undermine their authority and gradually reduce labor to a chaotic, shapeless mass which can be swayed at will by the underground forces of Bolshevism.

"In every country this is the prime characteristic of industrial disturbances. The men are getting out of hand, as it were, and forcing strikes against the desire of their own officials.

"I saw this first in Russia, for it was thus that the Bolsheviki won to power. Since then it has happened everywhere. Here in Denmark, for instance, we had the well-tried mechanism of arbitration and conciliation boards for preventing strikes. Yet in the last year or so there have been dozens of illegal strikes declared at a moment's notice over the leaders' heads.

"In a recent dock strike an agreement was reached and the strike called off, yet the next day when the men went back to work a mysterious agitation became evident among the groups working at every different dock. First one lot, then another quit work, until by evening, instead of one big strike, there were a score of little ones, unauthorized and sporadic, but none the less complete for all that.

"The question is how to find a remedy. I think it lies in the co-operation of employers and labor leaders. The former should recognize the latter's authority and support and strengthen it in every way. Above all, let there be no blind talk of employers fighting men into submission or refusing to receive or recognise their leaders or have anything to do with their trades union organizations. Don't you realize that that is playing the enemy's game and precipitating the very class war he is trying to bring about?

"Formerly things were different, but since the Bolsheviki have taken a hand in the game that sort of attitude cannot but lead to disaster. It is impossible to emphasize too strongly the necessity of making all classes, employers and workers alike, understand that we are faced by a definite plot against the existing social system. If the plotters are to be defeated, it can only be by general co-operation and preparedness.

"Already much precious time has been wasted and much harm done by injudicious speech and theughtless action. Not a day should be lost in beginning a campaign of education—on the one hand devoted to showing the men that without their leaders they would be delivered like sheep into the hands of far worse tyrants than the so-called capitalists, and on the other to convincing employers that the men have rights which cannot be ignored, and that frank acknowledgment of these rights by recognition and co-operation with the men's own appointed representatives is the best and surest, and may say the only, way of defeating the insidious enemy."

Must Not Recognize Soviet.

I asked whether the Minister thought that recognition of the Soviet Government and abandonment of the blockade could not be made the basis for a bargain, they to agree to cease propaganda abroad. He replied:

"Emphatically no. To begin with, it is perfectly obvious that the economic development of Russia is so backward that for communism there to be a success it must exist also in higher developed countries. The Bolshevist leaders recognized this fully from the beginning of their [illegible] unshakable determination to spread communism abroad. No matter what they promised they would not and could not perform it.

"Unless they are crushed by the White Russian forces—for which the Allies seem unable or unwilling to supply the means necessary—the only defense against them is co-operation and unity of capital and labor.

"Perhaps in America, where economic conditions are more favorable, you can accomplish that. I fear there are other countries which are not fortunate. In my opinion there can be no internal peace in Europe or no real recovery from the disastrous war conditions until the flood of Bolshevist poison be cut off at its source."

GERMAN REDS FAIL TO RISE ON DAY SET

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Nov. 8.—"I do not believe in any revolution that will comprise the whole world, not at present at least, and if it came it would not help us Germans. On the contrary a revolution in America for instance would cause the death of millions of German laborers and their dependents."

It was Federal War Minister Noske who pronounced this prediction at a great mass meeting of the laborers of Chemnitz, many whom had come as his enemies. For Chemnitz is a Red town, full of restlessness caused by idleness enforced by lack of raw products. But when he had finished the meeting unanimously passed a vote of confidence to Noske, who is Chemnitz's Parliamentary representative.

Chemnitz was one of the German cities where outbreaks of the radicals' counter-revolution seemed most probable. That is why Noske went there himself and Chemnitz remained quiet, as did Munich, Hamburg, Leipsig, Halle, Dresden, Mannheim, and nearly all other places that six months ago were hotbeds of revolution.

Unless something entirely unexpected happens the dreaded Nov. 9 will pass without any serious disturbance, which is bound to fortify the position of the present Government enormously against all attacks by the extreme Right and Left.

In Berlin the Communists received a stunning blow by the Government measures that defeated the general strike, and the revolution that was to follow. Reading Die Freiheit today one would never believe this independent organ only two days ago preached a bloody revolution which was to throw all Germany into a complete state of anarchy before Nov. 11. Freiheit today realizes it is lost, and it talks of nothing but the funeral of Hugo Haase, the Independent Socialist assassinated a few days ago by a crazy man who died yesterday.

Haase's funeral will be made a party function and in other circumstances it might be made the occasion for a wildly anarchistic demonstration, but there is little chance of that now. The cry, "Noske is coming," would soon disperse even the most reckless gathering of anarchists today.

Despite the Government's strictest prohibition some outdoor meetings were arranged to celebrate Nov. 7, not the 9th, because that day was nothing to the proletarians. As one speaker said, Nov. 7 only saw the downfall of Kaiserism, but the 7th was the birth of the sovereign proletariat in Russia.

"Can not we Germans do what the Russians accomplished?" he cried. "Down with the Government! Let's rise, comrades and kill those who are against us. Let's erect the throne of the proletariat, so its reign may begin in Germany before this 7th of November was passed."

Thus spoke an anarchist leader wearing a flaming red shirt to masses in Hasenheide who shouted furious assent. Just then there was a cry "Noske is coming!" The scene changed as by magic. The red shirted orator disappeared with the masses in many streets radiating from Hasenheide and when the automobiles carrying Noske's soldiers halted a few minutes later in the centre of the wide square it was almost empty.

As in this case so was the effect of the cry "Noske is coming" in many suburbs. There was hardly any fighting anywhere. The mere appearance of Noske's soldiers sufficed to disperse all meetings. Yesterday afternoon the Municipal Council of Neu Kölln, a suburb of Berlin, was about to vote against the continuing of the so-called Municipal Labor Council, which costs 3,000 marks weekly, when all of a sudden the door was burst open and a mob led by a ruffian with a pipe in his mouth and a red scarf around his neck entered the hall and immediately seized the municipal representatives with words and fists. For a quarter of an hour there was a general fight in which even the spectators in the galleries participated. Then somebody shouted "Noske is coming!" There was a rush to the doors in which many persons, falling, were trampled and seriously injured. But the above described ruffian and his companions held their ground until driven out at the point of the bayonet by Noske's men. Perhaps a dozen similar instances might be related, but actual bloodshed was avoided.

This evening THE TIMES correspondent telephoned to General Noske, who had returned from Chemnitz, asking if he expected any trouble tomorrow, Nov. 9.

"Some Communist fools may give us work," was the laconic answer, "but that work will be short work. Monday will be like all other Mondays only that I hope many thousands more will be at work again."

It must not be believed that Noske alone deserves the praise for this lucky turn of affairs that seemed so dark only a few days ago. Before everybody else Germany ought to think of the masses of her workingmen whose sober sense more than even Noske's soldiers saved the day.

Director General Neuhaus of the Borsig Works was right when he said to THE TIMES correspondent that the German working masses had sobered and desired nothing better than to be left at work because they realized that only work could save them and the whole world from starvation and destruction. The last few days have proved this change. The German workingman's mind is beyond doubt. THE TIMES correspondent could fill columns with the names of towns and cities where the workmen have decided to reintroduce piecework and overtime. The days of violent idlers are past, and if Germany had raw products enough all factories would be working at high speed.

Nothing is feared so much among the German workmen of today as American strikes, because they mean no work and no bread for Germany.

Dreary Anniversary in Berlin.

BERLIN, Nov. 7.—Bolshevism in Russia is two years old! Exactly a year later, Scheidemann, on behalf of his party, was presenting Prince Max of Baden with the ultimatum, which, inter alia, demanded the immediate abdication of the Kaiser and the Crown Prince. Already in Bavaria a republic had been proclaimed. Saxony and Würtemberg were on the eve of a similar step. Kings and Princes throughout the Fatherland were already seriously pondering the question of vacating their thrones. Kiel and Hamburg were in an uproar. Today, therefore, is the day of memories.

Here it is a day of snow and sleet. Berlin is damp, dirty, and dreary. Hugo Haase, that moderating influence among the Socialists of the left, lies dead after a month's struggle with death. All day the Government quarters in the capital have been shut off by means of barbed wire and troops, but the day for which the extremists promised trouble passed off without alarms.

Indeed, it goes hard with the extremists on both sides these days. In the Reichstag building a parliamentary committee of inquiry into the war drags its weary length along hour after hour. The incapacity and culpability of the old Pan German régime comes more glaringly into the light of day. The gamble, intrigue, and trickery of it all imprints itself even more deeply on the brand of Cain on the system of government which collapsed a year ago in chaos. Hour after hour you listen to Bethmann Hollweg, Zimmermann, Helferich, Capelle, and Koch, and become more and more convinced them on such madness as their return or that of the tragic power they represent.

The extremists to the left are faring equally badly. Freiheit, which yesterday accused the Majority Socialists of treason in not supporting the general strike, has today to eat its words and admit that trade unions in which Independent Socialists predominate are to the fore. From all over the country come reports of the utter failure of all attempts to celebrate the day by strikes. These are signs which certainly justify the recent expression of optimism by Prime Minister Bauer.

All the questions troubling Germany load one way or another back eventually to coal, and Fischbeck, the Prussian Minister of Commerce, today made some interesting statements in the Prussian Assembly about the coal crisis. Germany, he said, has now as many miners as before the war, 44,000. The output in the Ruhr region has risen from 224,000 tons in May to 253,000 tons in September. Similar increases are reported from other mining regions, yet during the next five months there will be a deficit of 23,500,000 tons of ordinary coal and of over 15,000,000 tons of brown coal. This vast deficit he declared, was due to the shortened working day and the forced use of unskilled labor.

To make up for this deficit, the Minister said, great reduction in the use of coal would be necessary. Some industries will be stopped altogether. Gas and electricity supplies will be further reduced. Goods and passenger trains will be very sparingly run.

Fischbeck declared that in the first quarter of the year the State collieries were run at a loss of nearly 14,000,000 marks. For the year that loss will amount to over a hundred millions. That is largely due to the increased wages which on the average have gone up by about 600 per cent.

This evening papers publish pessimistic reports regarding the potato crop. Largely owing to the lack of labor vast quantities will be lost. In one district prisoners have been taken out of prison and set to work in the potato fields. In Upper Silesia the State Commissioner has issued an order that all unemployed must immediately help to gather the potato crop, otherwise they will lose their unemployment benefit.

ONE SHIP FOUNDERS, 4 OTHERS IN PERIL

Steamer Polar Land Disappears After Crew Leaves Her Off Cape Breton.

GREEK CRAFT GOES ASHORE

Three Other Steamships in Trouble in Nova Scotian Waters, Call for Help.

HALIFAX, N. S., Nov. 9.—One steamship is believed to have foundered and four others are in distress tonight in Nova Scotian waters.

The American steamship Polar Land, bound from this port for Genoa, and which was abandoned off the Cape Breton coast at 1 P. M. today, had not been found late tonight by the steamship Kanawha, which went to her assistance, nor had any of the boats containing the vessel's crew of fifty men been picked up.

The Kanawha should have reached the spot given by the sinking Polar Land before dark, but the rescue ship wireless tonight for specific instructions as to her location when last heard from. The request for instructions is taken here to mean that the Polar Land has gone down.

The Greek steamship Plates is ashore at Sable Island; the steamship Greistone is in trouble off Sable Island; the Telemachus, a coal boat, called for help off Cape Breton, and one unidentified craft wirelessed that she could not go to the Polar Land's assistance, as she was in distress also.

The crew of the Plates was landed at the Life Saving Station at Sable Island. Her captain reported that his ship was undamaged, although held fast in the sands.

Late tonight, the Aranmore, which had been dispatched from North Sydney to the Greistone's assistance, reported that other rescue vessels were close to her but that no aid could be given to the distressed vessel owing to the weather conditions.

The Telemachus is a vessel of 4,802 tons and was built in Belfast in 1902.

The steamship Polar Land is operated as a refrigerator ship by the West India Steamship Company of New York, of which B. Rush Stoddard is President. The vessel, of 4,130 tons, is commanded by Captain Wheeler. She left New York Sept. 20 with a cargo of grain for Mediterranean ports and called at Halifax on Oct. 14, resuming her voyage the following day, but was forced to return to Halifax the same day when she was reported to be badly leaking. She was towed into port by the Shipping Board steamship Bannock. She left Halifax again last Tuesday.

Subsequently the vessel put into North Sydney, N. S., for coal and put out to sea last Friday, according to R. F. Goddard, Vice President of the West India Steamship Company, who said last night the Polar Land carried a crew of about fifty men.

PLEA FOR BAPTIST PASTORS.

Churches Asked to Raise Salaries to Meet Living Costs.

A country-wide appeal to Baptist churches to raise their pastors' salaries was issued last night by a special committee of prominent men named to consider what should be done to aid clergymen whose compensation has not increased with living costs.

The appeal is signed by D. C. Shull, President of the Northern Baptist Convention; F. W. Ayer, Chairman of the National Committee of Northern Baptist Laymen; Dr. E. T. Tomlinson, Executive Secretary of the Ministers and Missionaries Benefit Board; Henry Bond, Chairman, and Dr. John Young Aitchison, Director of the General Board of Promotion.

"We are confident that our churches are not fully aware of the conditions confronting their pastors today," reads the appeal. "In the Northern Baptist Convention only one pastor in twenty-one within the last two years has had an increase in salary. Consequently conditions are well-nigh appalling.

"It is pointed out that more than one-third of the pastors are receiving less than $1,000 a year, and that probably one-half of this class are receiving less than $650.

GERMANS DUE TO GET NEW PROTOCOL TODAY

PROTEST MARITIME CLAUSE

Object to Paying for Warships Sunk and to the Surrender of Equipment.

By EDWIN L. JAMES.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 8.—The interest of Peace Conference circles centres on the conference with the German delegation slated to begin tomorrow with the presentation to the Germans of the protocol to be signed before the Peace Treaty goes into effect and promising to pay for the sinking of the warships at Scapa Flow in addition to pledging the Berlin Government to complete fulfillment of certain armistice terms.

It appears that the Germans will centre their objections on the proposal that Berlin pay for the surrendered German warships sunk by their crews last Summer. The German newspapers have been for the past week full of reasons why Germany should not make this settlement and especially pointing out that to surrender the 400,000 tons of docks and other maritime equipment demanded by the Allies would be to cripple seriously Germany's ability to build a new merchant fleet.

Up to a late hour today the members of the Supreme Council had received no notice whether the Germans would be on hand tomorrow. It is known one day's delay is expected in opening the negotiations. How much argument the Germans will be allowed to make or how long the Allies will take to reply has not been decided. Germany has ten days to hand over the shipping equipment after signing the protocol. The Peace Treaty will not be put into effect until these terms have been complied with.

The Allies are beginning to despair of their program of waiting for American ratification. Their calculations were all based on the presumption that the Senate would ratify the treaty by Nov. 20. Washington correspondents of Paris newspapers in dispatches published today predict that it will not be done.

I asked a diplomat this morning about the Allies' waiting for America to act before formal ratification of the treaty. His reply was a real diplomat's reply: "I will not say that we are waiting for America," he answered, "but make it plain that I do not say that we will wait for America." In other words it all depends on how and when the Senate acts.

BERLIN, Nov. 8.—While the German Government has postponed over the weekend final decision regarding the reply to the Entente's latest note, the press continues to rage about the matter. Tonight the Vossische Zeitung has a wild article with reference to the handing over by Germany of 140,000 milch cows under the terms of the Versailles treaty. It regards this "inhumanity" as chiefly due to England. Since this matter is attracting considerable attention, it may be well to state the facts.

Before the war Germany had rather more than 9,250,000 cows. That number has decreased to 785,000. In 1913 the average yield of milk was twelve liters per cow daily, making a total supply in 1913 of about 111,000,000 liters. In consequence of a long period of feeding on scanty and bad fodder, the average daily yield per cow at the present time is only four liters, and the quality of milk is naturally greatly depreciated. The total daily supply for the whole country is now about 31,500,000 liters.

In the great town there is practically no milk to be had. Through the country districts the supply is fairly good. The blame that the cities and towns are so badly supplied lies largely with the farmers who withhold supplies from them and divert their produce into those channels from which the highest prices can be obtained. Then the bad state of the railway transport almost completes the milk blockade of the large centres of population. If the Government would only deal sternly with profiteering of the farmers and organize proper transport service to the cities and large towns the loss of the number of cows to be handed to the Entente would scarcely be felt.

Urges That Sweden Join League.

STOCKHOLM, Nov. 9. (Associated Press.)—In an address today, in which he sketched the Government's policy, Premier Eden advocated that Sweden enter the League of Nations. He said the organization was not perfect, but that joining it would entail serious duties, and perhaps risks, for Sweden, but that the risk of being left outside the League would be still greater.

Administration forces would resist any effort of the majority to adopt a resolution declaring a state of peace if the ratifying resolution was voted down. While Mr. Hitchcock had not talked over such a contingency with the President at the White House on Friday, he said he believed that Mr. Wilson would oppose any such move.

The Senate takes up tomorrow the committee's reservation on Article X., under which the United States would decline to assume any obligation to preserve the territorial integrity or political independence of nations in the League of Nations without approval by Congress of each particular case that might come up. Although some of the irreconcilables, notably Borah, are still opposed to the wording of the reservation, which President Wilson calls a "knife thrust at the treaty," it is said that the reservation will be adopted by a safe majority.

Several amendments to the reservation will be offered by Administration Senators, but these, it is thought, will be voted down as were those of the two reservations adopted last week.

Thirteen committee reservations remain to be considered, and after they are voted on there will be twelve or more by individual Senators, including those on the Shantung award, the inequality of vote as between the United States and Great Britain in the League Assembly, and one to eliminate the United States from participation in the labor provisions of the treaty.

Marshall's Ruling Awaited.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9. (Associated Press.)—The struggle over treaty reservations will be renewed in the Senate tomorrow, with the sharpest contest on the reservation relating to Article X. of the League of Nations covenant. The usual week-end and Sunday conferences by both factions apparently developed little change in programs of procedure, except an almost universal desire to hasten the final vote. In this connection Republican leaders were reported prepared to propose closure to curtail protracted discussion, with assurances of Democratic co-operation.

An unprecedented parliamentary battle over the effect of votes on resolutions of ratifications is expected to follow disposition of reservations. Vice President Marshall is understood to be ready to rule that a two-thirds majority must be had either to adopt or reject the treaty, and that a bare majority can send it back to the Foreign Relations Committee or the President. On this ruling and its approval or rejection, in the opinion of many, depends the final result.

OFFERS NEW RESERVATION.

China Society of America Proposes a Clause About Shantung.

The China Society of America announced yesterday that, recognizing the acute conditions involved in the Shantung matter, it has, with the aid of eminent counsel, prepared and is submitting to the United States Senate the following reservation as a part and condition of the ratification in the Paris Peace Treaty:

That Articles 156, 157, 158 of this treaty having been inserted in fulfillment of treaties or agreements between Great Britain, France and Italy on the one hand, and Japan on the other, to which the United States was not a party, and of which it was not advised, the Government of the United States is not to be regarded as a party to Articles 156, 157, 158 of the present treaty transferring to Japan ex-German treaty rights within China; and this Government, moreover, reserves to itself the right to continue to maintain the policy which it has heretofore observed and supported of preserving the territorial integrity of China and equality of opportunity for the commerce of all nations therein.

The proposed reservation, it was said, covers the following points:

(1) Records the fact accounting for the presence of Articles 156, 157, 158 in the treaty and makes clear that the United States was not a party to their underwriting.

(2) Records the fact that the ex-German treaty rights were within China and beyond the jurisdiction of the peace Conference.

(3) Declares that the United States withholds its assent.

(4) Upholds the established policy of the United States to preserve the territorial integrity of China and maintains the John Hay "open door" for equality of trade opportunities for all nations.

(5) Leaves the Shantung question open to review with an equal chance for all parties, at the same time reserving all the rights of the United States to reopen the matter as it may deem advisable.

not there was a warrant out for his arrest.

The local contributors to the Communist movement, according to Deputy Attorney General Samuel A. Berger, are mainly New York "parlor radicals" of inherited wealth anxious to gain fame and importance as guarantors of the American Red revolution. While he stated some time ago that a list of these contributors had been turned over to the Federal Government, the representative of the Lusk committee refused to say yesterday what further steps were to be taken regarding the American financial backers of the movement.

The twenty-five tons of literature seized in the raids on Saturday night is at Police Headquarters and in the offices of Chief City Magistrate McAdoo. Weeks of work will be required before the value of this as evidence has been ascertained. The most interesting printed matter so far noted are the appeals of Lenin to American workmen to follow the Bolshevist example.

Although more than 1,000 men were carted to Police Headquarters and questioned on Saturday night and early Sunday morning, only thirty-five of them were held. These are charged with criminal anarchy because of the fact that they belonged to the Communist Party. In the cases of two men charged with this crime, Chief Magistrate McAdoo has ruled that membership in the Communist Party in itself is proof of guilt, because the members sign a statement that they have read the by-laws of the organization, which pledge members to an attempt to overthrow the institutions of this country. Many of the 1,000 or so who have been turned loose, Senator Lusk said, would probably be re-arrested.

After Evidence, Not Prisoners.

"The raids were made to get evidence, not prisoners," he said, "We chose last night for the raids, when there were no meetings being held at any of these headquarters and when there were important radical meetings in progress at Madison Square Garden, at the Rand School and elsewhere.

"Those who were arrested were gathered in incidentally, because they happened to be on the premises. There was no stretch of authority in taking these [illegible] and [illegible] 1,000 upon [illegible] if they were not held. The Criminal Anarchy statute of this State is very broad, and makes those aiding and abetting such movements guilty with the others. Those found at the meeting places were necessarily proper subjects for arrest, and there was not the slightest abuse of power in the proceeding."

According to those who took part in the raids on Saturday night, those who were taken were not beaten or maltreated in any way, which was in contrast to the raid on the Russian People's House on Friday night.

"I didn't hear of any case where there was any resistance," Senator Lusk said, "and there was no reason for hurting anybody."

The records of the Communist Party in this city show a membership of 7,500, according to investigators for the committee, while hundreds are being added every day by the expensive campaign which is being waged for new members from all radical groups. Members of the I. W. W., anarchists, Left Wing Socialists, syndicalists, and other groups are invited to join the Communist Party without breaking with the other radical groups.

Lusk's Statement on Raids.

Senator Lusk gave out the following statement on the raids:

"Over twenty-five tons of literature intended to be used in the campaign now being waged for the overthrow of our Government was seized.

"Over 1,000 persons were examined for the purpose of obtaining records of these individuals found in the rooms of organizations engaged in promoting criminal anarchy.

"Thirty-five were held on the charge of criminal anarchy and other charges on their admission and evidence found on them. The records will be given further investigation.

"Not over 5 per cent. of those brought in were citizens. Many of them stated that they had been in this country ten years but were unable to speak our language. The efforts on the part of some of those present to destroy their cards in the communist organizations indicate that they appreciate the criminal nature of the order.

"At their headquarters at 6 Maspeth Avenue, Brooklyn, a foreigner was taken who had previously told an agent of the committee that he was in charge of the organization there. A search of the premises revealed two loaded revolvers and a quantity of ammunition, also a quantity of chemicals. He was held on a charge of violating the Sullivan law.

"While the obtaining and execution of these search warrants was all planned and the papers prepared before the Federal raid on Friday night, the Federal agents and the immigration authorities were notified and assisted the representatives of the committee in the examinations. There is full harmony and co-operation between all branches of the Federal, State and city authorities. It is also our purpose to give the city and Federal authorities the benefit of the data that we have collected in efforts made by them to enforce the law.

More Legislation Promised.

"We believe that the time has come for a thorough, vigorous campaign for the protection of our institutions. We are anxious to have our present laws tested in order that we may know what additional legislation is needed. All that our city and State officials need to destroy this menace to our Government is proper backing by the Legislature. That they will have."

Senator Lusk said that it was originally intended to hold the raids earlier in the week, but that it was feared that riots might occur on Saturday, the second anniversary of the birth of the Bolshevist régime, and that the Lusk Committee raids might be regarded as the cause.

One of those held on a charge of criminal anarchy was Benjamin Gitlow, a former Assemblyman from the Bronx. Another was "Big Jim" Larkin, the Irish agitator, who became famous as the leader of the Dublin strike in 1914. He was found carrying a seaman's passport which bore his photograph, but was made out in the name of I. Wexler. The man arrested at 5 Maspeth Avenue on the charge of violating the Sullivan law was Henry Pearl.

The New York Board of Trade and Transportation announced yesterday that it would start a campaign this week to mobilise the business men of New York in a determined effort to crush Bolshevism and radicalism and to free American industry from the disturbing influences which have held it back since the signing of the armistice a year ago."

CLUB AT TRENTON RAIDED.

Federal Agents Seize Mass of Bolshevist Literature.

TRENTON, Nov. 9.—Following the arrest yesterday of Romen Mosichok, a Russian blacksmith, suspected of Bolshevist activities, at his boarding house here, and the finding of gunpowder, lead slugs, and all the ingredients for manufacturing bombs in his rooms, Special Agent Arthur Ramsdell of the Department of Justice with two detectives raided the quarters of the Russian Club at 501 North Clinton Avenue, this city, today. There was to have been a meeting of the club today, the detectives learned, but the members, evidently hearing of Mosichok's arrest, did not appear.

The detectives seized a mass of Bolshevist literature, including Bread and Freedom, a newspaper in Russian, printed, so the officials declare, at 133 East Fifteenth Street, New York City.

Special Agent Ramsdell said that he expected to make additional arrests in the anti-Bolshevist crusade tomorrow. Mosichok will be delivered over to the immigration authorities tomorrow and taken to Ellis Island for deportation.

SAY NEW DISASTERS THREATEN GERMANY

French Representatives Now in the Country Hope It Will be the Latter.

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 8.—"Germany is on the verge of a catastrophe and the danger to Europe—Northern Europe especially, but all Europe more or less—is great and obvious. Unless something is done soon it will be too late, for already the Winter—Europe's Red Winter—is upon us." The speaker was the head of a big American business house in Hamburg, whose judgment has been formed by living in Germany during the last ten months. He is further backed by many years' of experience with ante-bellum conditions. He continued:

"From what I can hear of opinion at home, I am likely to be considered either an alarmist or pro-German, but I defy you to find any American or Englishman acquainted with the situation in Germany outside of the occupied areas who will not agree with me, let alone what you see for yourself, for the evidence is unmistakable. Besides, the facts and figures cannot be gainsaid. I repeat with certainty, a catastrophe is very near."

In the strange nightmare journey of the last four days from Cologne to Copenhagen through a land where train schedules mean nothing, and the best one can do is to take a chance on reaching his destination "if there is no rioting at such and such a point on the way," as the station master murmurs anxiously, I had ample confirmation of this forecast. Here are some of the facts and figures whereon the speaker based it. I may add that every foreigner, American, Briton, or Scandinavian, with whom I have talked takes it for granted that Winter cannot pass without disaster.

Food in Cents and Marks.

In Hamburg today you can get in the famous restaurant of the great Atlantic Hotel a very good meal with beer and coffee for 75 cents American money. Other high-class restaurant prices are similar, and the food in quality and quantity compares more than favorably with the best in Paris.

I emphasize the food because food is the principal factor in Germany today. But as regards other commodities it is the same story. Clothes, footwear, leather goods, to take the expensive items, are fully 50 per cent. cheaper—and cutlery, glassware, books, cameras, and optical instruments considerably more so—than in France, Belgium, England or Scandinavia. That is, cheaper to the foreigner, and here is the cardinal point of German's approaching ruin.

At the present moment the dollar is worth from 30 to 35 marks, the franc nearly 4 marks, the Scandinavian crown that used to be on par with the mark from 8 to 9 marks. Germany is being strangled by progressive depreciation of her money—depreciation which the panic measure of stopping passenger traffic, which every one ascribes to fear of revolution, has enormously accentuated. Skilled labor receives on the average $1 a day, unskilled 60 cents, clerical help as low as $12 (380 marks) monthly.

And what about the millions of pensioners, male or female, and people with fixed income averaging from 3,000 to 6,000 marks yearly—say $100 to $250 at the outside. Can they pay 25 marks a meal that the 75-cent total of the Atlantic Hotel represents to them? They must get their food according to the card-ration system. The weekly allowance per person is four pounds of black bread, four ounces of butter, (which really is margarine compounded with Norwegian whale oil, four pounds of potatoes, and for children only two pints of skimmed milk. This much they can get at prices within their means even in marks. And yet there is real ice cream in high-class restaurants, and butter ad lib. if you have the price, and a thick porterhouse steak fully half a pound in weight a portion. There must be food in Germany if the rich can thus be fed enough or nearly enough for everyone. But in addition to the results of a debased coinage, Germany is now paying the price of her own corruption.

Food Laws Ignored; Poor Starve.

The contraband food system has spread until in the hotels and big restaurants there is neither concealment nor pretense—if you've got the price you can eat all you want. Meanwhile the poor are literally starving and the children's death rate is rising ever higher. In the populous quarters of Hamburg, down near the deserted docks, one sees men, women, and children, thinly clad, hollow cheeked, and gaunt. I saw the same figures when the Allies' armies were sweeping forward last Summer across invaded France. Amid the ruins of Ham, still ablaze with wanton barbarism of German incendiarism, there were half-starved women and children, too. Germany is paying for that, and will pay with interest.

The situation is growing rapidly worse. Owing to the impossibility of buying raw materials with their well-nigh worthless paper, German manufacturers are shutting down and unemployment is increasing by leaps and bounds. Scandinavian merchants, who were attracted by the, to them, cheap prices, are stripping the stores which cannot place wholesale orders. Stocks are getting exhausted and are not being replaced.

Meanwhile the communistic propaganda grows ever bolder and more thorough. It offers immediate inducements for new recruits and therewith the bright dream of a happy future whose allure is greater than money.

"Communism or Bolshevism is not a political concept but a religion," say those people here and in Germany who are best acquainted with Spartacide and Russian Bolshevist movements. It is a fanatical creed of faith in a new millennium instilled in the heart of men whose despair has brought them near to the breaking point."

What then will be the outcome? As things look now a communist revolution is a matter of weeks. If it is repressed it can only be by the use of reactionary troops like von der Goltz's army or by the further advance of the allies. In either case worse starvation, confusion, and bankruptcy.

It seems a choice between a Soviet Government or breaking up into separate States. The French appear to expect the latter. One of their official representatives here declared he hoped and expected it would happen, and did not believe Germany ever would become genuinely communist. Obviously disintegration is to France's advantage. It renders practical and effective the chain of allied States—Poland, Rumania, Bohemia, Serbia—forged to bind the Teuton colossus.

But if the French are wrong and the Americans, British, and Scandinavians, who expect Germany to go Red, are right, what then? When Germany is united with Russia, can the Baltic resist the communist contagion? or Holland, or Italy?

Perhaps the answer to this question may be found in a quotation from a dispatch from a Danish newspaper correspondent received here yesterday from the Russian front:

"Reinforcements of Reds received are well trained and fully equipped. They fight stoutly and with skill. They have courage and enthusiasm. They are real communists.

When the rugged volunteers of the French Revolution drove the Prussian regulars in headlong rout at Valmy, Goethe cried: "Today has dawned a new era in the world's history." If it is true that the Russians also have evolved an effective military force from revolutionary chaos the danger to the present system of government in Europe can hardly be exaggerated.

Plans to Reform a Beggar.

The Charity Organization Society is anxious to get in touch with a foreign-looking woman, about 37, who for some time past, accompanied by a young baby, has been begging along fashionable residence streets. She has given a variety of names and addresses and each of these has proved fictitious. The society asks that the next person of whom she begs detain her until it can send a representative to endeavor to arrange reconstructive measures for her, which would involve giving up door-to-door begging.

REPORTS JAPANESE RECRUITING SWISS

Zurich Journal Says Big Pay Is Promised to Officers of Federal Army.

GENEVA, Nov. 8 (Associated Press.)—"Japanese agents, with the consent and authorization of the Japanese Minister of War, are attempting to recruit Swiss officers and sub-officers for the Japanese Emperor's Army," says the Neue Züricher Zeitung.

"High salaries are offered, passages are paid, and also bonuses. Enlistment must be for five years, and the conditions provide that if Japan within this period enters into war the Swiss officers must serve in the army under superior Japanese officers, except against their native country."

The newspaper declares that this attempt at recruiting is in violation of the Swiss Constitution. It adds that never have so many Japanese diplomatic officers and agents been seen in Switzerland as at present.

NO ONE CAN TRAVEL ON GERMAN ROADS

Reports Reach Switzerland That Government's Position Is Difficult.

BERLIN, Nov. 8.—Germany's suspension of railroad passenger traffic for two weeks is proving to have been a step taken in grim earnest, as doubtless thousands are finding who are unable to induce railroad officials to permit them to travel even on freight trains.

A rumor was circulated that a limited number of trains would be run for short distances into the city, but those attempting to profit by them found that these trains were solely for milk, food and mail. Nothing short of death in a man's family could get him a place in a freight car and then he was required to pay a second class fare.

Dresden has established a motor bus line to Berlin, on which the charge is 150 marks for passage one way. Aerial posts have been arranged between Berlin and Leipzig and Berlin and Breslau.

BERNE, Nov. 7.—Passenger communication between Switzerland and any part of Germany is suspended until Nov. 15, as no passenger trains are running. The German censorship is as stringent as during the war, consequently it is quite by no means certain that even Germany desires that conditions there are hopeless and that the political and commercial state of the country has reached such a point that a collapse must be expected.

The uncertainties of Germany's situation both at home and abroad, and potential delays in the proclamation of the state of peace and in the resumption of regular diplomatic relations added to the impending shortage of coal, the special shortage more acutely, are inevitably causing a rapid increase of anarchy in Germany. The fall in value of German money abroad clearly indicates what the continental financial world thinks of the state of Germany. In Switzerland the German mark has now fallen to one-eighth of its value.

In Germany here the Monarchists and Bolshevists are endeavoring to overthrow the present Government, although they have nothing else in common. According to my special correspondent, the present Government will certainly be overthrown, but which of the two parties, Monarchists or Bolshevists, will get to the top is uncertain. Thoughtful Germans declare that the only hope of saving Germany is if America speedily justifies her vessels and the League of Nations can then begin its labors. Not until then will Germany be able to negotiate foreign loans nor obtain foreign credits, and thus meet her treaty obligations.

DUTCH INCREASE GUARDS.

Fear Spread of Revolutionary Disturbances from German Border.

THE HAGUE, Nov. 8.—In spite of the fact that passenger traffic with Germany is practically suspended, the Dutch are obviously getting extremely nervous for fear of the spread of possible revolutionary trouble over the Germany border, and have strengthened the guards on the eastern frontier.

While the suspension of the passenger train service of the whole of Germany, whilst it may be an act must a political as an economical measure against revolutionary outbreaks, is a relief to Holland, it has greatly increased economic distress and blocked all possible trade and business communications.

WOMAN BURNED TO DEATH.

Mrs. Catherine S. Cleveland Found Dying in Staten Island Home.

Mrs. Catherine S. Cleveland, 68 years old, the widow of Frederick B. Cleveland, was fatally burned at the home of her daughter, Miss A. H. Corning, 221 St. Johns Avenue, West New Brighton, Staten Island, yesterday. Mrs. Cleveland was alone in the house Saturday night. Her daughter and husband returned home early in the morning and found Mrs. Cleveland on the floor of the [illegible] with her clothes burned.

Dr. Edward Wisely of Port Richmond was called, Mrs. Cleveland was taken to the Staten Island Hospital at New Brighton. She died half an hour after reaching the hospital. It is supposed she struck a match to light a lamp, when her clothes caught fire.

Mrs. Cleveland was born in upper New York State, and was a graduate of Wells College. She had lived in Staten Island with her daughter ten years. She was prominent in church and charitable work, and was widely known. She took a keen interest in Red Cross work.

PARIS COAL CRISIS ACUTE.

War Lighting Restrictions Again Established to Save Fuel.

PARIS, Nov. 8 (Associated Press.)—The coal crisis has become such that the Prefect of Police has today ordered great restrictions in the use of gas and electricity, virtually putting into force again the laws which obtained during the air raids on Paris.

A referendum will be submitted to the miners, asking them to work an additional hour daily, for which hour they will receive a 25 per cent. increase in wages. It is claimed that the additional hour will be sufficient to overcome the coal shortage.

Spend and Save

Economy in expenditure will prove an important factor in the reduction of the cost of living.

It is not suggested that this economy should take the form of parsimony, niggardliness, and miserliness, but rather that it should be marked by wise and judicious expenditure only. Spend in proportion not to your capital, but to your income, and income not merely of the moment, but of the future when, production overtaking consumption, the process of deflation shall begin.

Of course, at that time the dollar will be worth more than it is to-day, although we do not expect to see it return to its pre-war value, that is to say, we do not anticipate the return of prices of those days. But with the increased value of the dollar, there will come also a less number of dollars as profits, and it is this adjustment that the individual, as well as the merchant and manufacturer, must prepare for.

There is, of course, another side to the question of spending, and we should not hold it bad economics to buy liberally of substantial goods at this time while prosperity is with us, or, in other words, while speaking generally, wages remain high. In brief, this is the time to strike a balance between your needs and your means.

The Harriman National Bank is regarding these things from the viewpoint of the welfare of its depositors and customers, any of whom is welcome here at any time to discuss such matters or other matters concerning their financial interests with the officers of the bank.

"EN TÊTE" EVENING SLIPPERS

MAY WITH JUSTICE BE CALLED THE "BASIC BEAUTY" OF THE EVENING GOWN

WHETHER the vogue of the shorter skirt tempted the slipper to untried loveliness, or whether the new charm of the slipper coaxed the skirt to rise and reveal its daintiness, one cannot tell, but the fact remains that skirts are shorter and slippers more varied and lovely than ever before.

THERE are slippers as frivolous as the dance frock, and slippers as stately as the sumptuous evening gown, for each gown has its complement and each foot its compliment in the new scope of Franklin Simon & Co En Tête evening footwear.

SATIN EVENING SLIPPERS

METAL CLOTH SLIPPERS

keep step with the splendor of the evening affair and sparkle with the glint of silver or gold. OIL FIRE WIPES OUT PART OF TEXAS TOWN

TANK FIRED BY LIGHTNING

One Man Killed, Several Men Injured, and Loss Put at More Than $1,000,000.

WICHITA FALLS, Texas., Nov. 9.—One man was killed, several men incurred minor burns, and a loss which will exceed $1,000,000 resulted from an oil fire which swept eighty acres of proven oil territory on the outskirts of Waggoner City and destroyed a large part of that town today.

Acreage in this field is owned by many Eastern concerns.

The fire started when lightning struck an oil tank. When the tank exploded a wave of burning oil rode down the surface of the rain-covered streets, setting fire to everything with which it came into contact.

The bulk of the business secton of the town was destroyed, according to reports received here. Waggoner City has no telephone or railroad communication, and details of the fire and the losses are meagre.

Waggoner City is said to be the largest unincorporated town in the country, and the large number of oil wells in the vicinity make it one of the most congested districts of the kind.

Blood transfusion proved futile yesterday in an attempt to save the life of William J. Connery, a broker's clerk, of 183 Rogers Avenue, Brooklyn [illegible] his wife, was overcome by illuminating gas on Saturday afternoon, which killed 1-year-old son, John, was found dead in bed.

Timothy Connery of 671 Presidents Street, a brother, who is employed on The New York Times, offered his blood to save the life of William, and the transfusion was accomplished, but it was of no avail. William Connery died yesterday afternoon in the Kings County Hospital. His wife, Alice, 29 years of age died during the night.

A leaky rubber gaspipe in the kitchen of the house permitted the gas to escape during Friday night, filling the rooms, killing the child and rendering the father and mother unconscious.

TWO FIREMEN HURT IN $500,000 BLAZE

EXPLOSION WRECKS SHOP

Men Injured Under Debris—Entire Borough Department Called On to Fight Flames.

Damage estimated at more than $500,000 was caused by a fire yesterday which destroyed three-fourths of the Long Island City plant of the Atlantic Macaroni Company and spread to the plant of the American Balsa Company before firemen from Queens, Brooklyn and Manhattan could check the flames.

Two firemen were injured, when an explosion blew off the roof of one of the macaroni company's buildings. Several laborers at the plant were reported missing after the blaze, and company officers were unable to say with any degree of positiveness that they had escaped.

The Atlantic Company, which normally employs 1,000 men and women, has been handicapped by a strike that cut down its working force. Several days ago it asked for police protection, which was given. Detectives working in an Italian settlement in the Ravenswood section, adjoining the plant, have reported that there were mutterings against the company.

Fire Marshal Brophy began an investigation of the fire, conducting hearings in the Old Homestead Hotel, on Vernon Avenue. Late last night he said he had found no evidence indicating that the flames had been caused by an incendiary. He said a strikebreaker had slept Saturday night in the building where the blaze was discovered. This man, the Fire Marshal said, admitted he had been drinking and did not know what had happened.

The company occupies an entire city block, its buildings extending from Vernon Avenue to the East River, a distance of more than 500 feet. Its plant consists of four buildings, one of them six stories high, and two huge grain elevators. The American Balsa plant, a long frame building, also on Vernon Avenue, is separated from the Atlantic Company plant by a thirty-foot driveway. When the fire started the plant was filled with scores of boats under construction and with lumber.

Paul Cuneo of 316 Seventh Avenue, Long Island City, night superintendent of the Atlantic Company, was in charge of the plant. John McKenna was in charge of the engine room, and Anthony Sacco was the watchman in charge. Cuneo discovered the fire at 8 o'clock in the morning in the storage plant on the Vernon Avenue side of the factory, a building in which no one had been working for several weeks.

Cuneo at once warned McKenna, who blew the factory whistles, while Patrolman Thomas Stapleton, one of the men on strike duty, ran to the factory and turned in an alarm. Battalion Chief Weed of Long Island City soon arrived and immediately sent in a second alarm. This brought Deputy Chief O'Hara, who, after a survey of the situation, sent in a borough alarm, bringing Fire Commissioner Drennan and other department officials. Fireboats 30, 97, 232, and 84 and two Lackawanna Railroad tugs also assisted in the fight.

The firemen from Manhattan and Brooklyn were held at the fire until noon, after which the Long Island apparatus continued to fight the flames alone. The smoke rose in billowing clouds visible for miles, and thousands of persons thought a blaze like that which recently swept the Standard Oil plant at Greenpoint, Brooklyn, was in progress.

The firemen had hardly begun their battle, when there was a violent explosion in the warehouse on Vernon Avenue. The roofs went skyward, and the walls fell outward, sending bricks and debris in all directions. Two firemen were caught under the debris. They were E. Gallagher and C. Fitzsimmons, both of Engine No. 258, from the Norman Avenue Station, Brooklyn. They were attended by Dr. Walter G. Frey, the Long Island City Fire Department physician. Gallagher continued work, but Fitzsimmons was so cut and bruised that he had to be sent home.

As soon as he arrived, Fire Marshal Brophy began his investigation into the origin of the fire. After hearing several witnesses, Captain Herbert Graham, of the Hunter's Point Station, was called in, and later detectives who understood Italian were sent to the Ravenswood district, in charge of Detective Di Gilo.

For a long time the heat of the flames was too great to permit a search for workmen who were missing, but toward evening firemen began a hunt through the wreckage. It was said at the plant that the missing men probably got away safely. Until a complete check is made, it will be impossible to tell just who was at the plant when the fire started.

FEDERAL BUDGET FAVORED.

Governors Indorse National Committee's Proposals.

The results of a canvass of Governors throughout the country to discover their attitude toward national budgetary reform show that forty out of forty-eight indorse the National Budget Committee's plan, and that an effective budget system is now in operation in practically every State.

The Governors lay stress upon the need for efficiency in the post-war reconstruction period in stating their reasons for advocating a change in the administration of national finances, the committee says. Among the suggestions offered by the Governors, the committee says, are the establishment of a bureau to draw estimates of Government expenses, provision for Congressional consideration of money bills by single committees of the House and Senate, or by joint committee of the two, and limitation of money bills to actual needs.

VETERANS WARNED OF NATION'S FOES

Chaplains Tell Ex-Fighters in Armistice Sunday Sermons to Put Down Enemies at Home.

COUNTRY RELIES ON THEM

Men of New York Divisions Hold Anniversary Services in Two Armories.

Services in commemoration of the signing of the armistice, one year ago tomorrow, and in memory of soldiers from this State who perished in the war were held yesterday in churches and armories in this city. The day was called Armistice Sunday.

The 77th Division held its services in the Seventh Regiment Armory, at Park Avenue and Sixty-sixth Street, with the veterans of the 107th Infantry of the 27th Division. Other units of the 27th Division held exercises in the Seventy-first Regiment Armory, with the veterans of the 165th Infantry of the Rainbow Division. Services of the New York Guard were in the Twenty-third Regiment Armory in Brooklyn.

The ceremonies at the Seventh Regiment Armory began with the singing of "The Star-Spangled Banner," after which Rabbi Silverman made a prayer for the country. A telegram from Major Gen. Alexander, the division commander, was read, in which the General expressed his regret that he could not be present. Nicholas Murray Butler, President of Columbia University, made the principal address.

"It is over a year since the first soldiers, loaded with our blessings and confidence, left our shores," he said. "These soldiers have now become veterans. As the survivors of the civil war have grown older and attained an immortal memory, you who served in this war will grow older and will put on the robes of immortality for your service to the country and to mankind.

"You may live to be old in years and eminent in public and professional life, but in all the years no call will come so honorable and so compelling as that of the people of the United States to defend their lives, their honor, and their Government. You have the greatest honor that a people can bestow.

"Having these feelings as we face the living, how shall we express our feeling about the dead? Their death was, as the Romans had it, 'sweet and becoming.' These men did not die for the country's wealth or its material prosperity, but for our nation's ideals. They have left us a trust, the principles and ideals for which their lives were given. Shall we be false to that trust? How could we be and look again upon those graves?

Warns of Enemies at Home.

"There are other enemies of America than those who attack her in open arms. There are those who would attack her with the weapons of hate, anarchy, and disorder; those who do not love liberty, and would destroy it. The legacy of this splendid day is that we, on the battlefield of peace, should be ready to put forth every energy, as they did on the field of battle, to crush these enemies of our nation."

The services closed with a benediction by Archbishop Patrick J. Hayes, and the singing of "A Perfect Day."

The Rev. Francis P. Duffy, chaplain of the 165th Infantry, and the Rev. S. Parkes Cadman were the speakers at the 71st Regiment Armory. Major Gen. John F. O'Ryan, who commanded the 27th Division overseas, attended, with members of his staff.

"There was no taint of Bolshevism in the men who fought on the other side," said Father Duffy. "The hope of the nation lies in the fundamental soundness of the ideas of the American people. The millions of American soldiers who returned were confronted by new conditions, and the country depends on them to stem any tide of dissatisfaction that might menace the progress of the nation.

"The war has worked one great thing. It has caused us, in great part, to cast behind us small-minded religious bigotry, the pest of our political system. All the sects did magnificent work, one as much as the other. There was no religious line, no social line, no color line. The colored boys of the 15th Regiment showed there was no color line in patriotism or in bravery."

Other speakers included the Rev. William M. Cord, former senior chaplain of the 27th Division; the Rev. Paul D. Moody, former chaplain at General Headquarters of the First Army; the Rev. Herbert Shipman, the Rev. William T. Carter, and the Rev. Charles H. Schofield, all chaplains.

A plea for the League of Nations was made at the Church of the Heavenly Rest, Fifth Avenue and Forty-fifth Street, by the Rev. Herbert Shipman, who was senior chaplain of the First Army. He told of the skepticism of the soldiers when they heard the report that an armistice had been signed, and continued:

Pleads for the League.

"One thing shown by the war was that the nations in a league must conserve the rights of nations so that such brutal resort to war may not blast and ruin the world again. There is no sane man who does not hope for something that will take the place of war, but none should be so foolish as to accept as a finished product the first thing offered.

"The League of Nations is going to grow into a fabric that will choke off wars for all time. The trouble with it today is that while it may be right in form and substance, no way has been found yet to make it go. No plan that leaves the power and control with one nation, or a small group of nations, will do. To put absolute power in one hand would be world autocracy. That will never be."

In the first sermon of his pastorate in the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, the Rev. Dr. John Kelman, said it would be his aim to foster better relations between this country and Great Britain. Dr. Kelman resigned the pastorate of the St. George's United Free Church of Edinburgh to accept the pulpit relinquished by the Rev. Dr. John E. Jowett of London.

"It is in the spirit of service that I have accepted this call," said Dr. Kelman. "Great Britain and America, after long estrangement, were united on the field of battle, but today their relations for the days to come are hanging in the balance. I come as a Britisher who loves America and Britain also."

The Joint Conference of Seamen's Societies, composed of fourteen separate sailors' organizations in Manhattan, Brooklyn, and Staten Island, attended a united service at the First Presbyterian Church, University Place and Tenth Street, last evening. The services were conducted by the Rev. George Alexander, assisted by Dr. George William Carter, Vice President of the conference. Several hundred sailors, including many from foreign countries, were present. The Rev. Harry Emerson Fosdick, in the sermon, praised the part played by sailors in the war.

HAYES URGES ALL TO JOIN RED CROSS

Archbishop Calls It an American and a Christian Duty to Back Organization.

CHURCHES AID ROLL CALL

Hearty Response Reported by Members and Clergy of All Denominations.

Archbishop Hayes, in a letter to Brig. Gen. George R. Dyer, Chairman of the New York City Committee of the Red Cross Roll Call, urges every one in the country to join the Red Cross as "an American and a Christian duty."

"America has been, and must continue to be," Archbishop Hayes writes, "the almoner of the world for a long time, in dispensing to humankind, almost everywhere, not only food and clothing, but mercy and compassion. The American Red Cross has been organized and authorized by our Government to carry on this mission, in a large, generous and noble spirit, working for all, irrespective of race, color or creed. It is, therefore, both an American and a Christian duty to support the Red Cross."

Although Red Cross Sunday, by official proclamation of the President, was a week ago, the Roll Call was mentioned yesterday in many of the churches and many new members were reported through the interest in the campaign shown by the clergy and church members of all denominations.

Reports from all over the country show a great interest in the campaign. It is hoped to keep in line at least all of this year's membership, totaling 20,000,000, for the peace program which the Red Cross is about to launch. The campaign will close tomorrow—Armistice Day.

A performance on the steps of the Public Library today by the members of the Actors' Fidelity League will aid the Red Cross membership. Louis Mann and Zelda Sears are in charge of the meeting, at which there will be speeches and an entertainment by well-known actors and actresses.

The Booths Committee has so far led in the subscriptions. The Industrial and Mercantile Committees, however, have many reports still to come in from business firms. Firms in nearly every branch of business have pledged 100 per cent. membership.

How to Relieve the Sugar Shortage

A respectful suggestion in an open letter to the Citizens of New York

SOME New York newspaper writers seem to take exception to any publicity being given to Saccharin at this time when the whole country is feeling the shortage of sugar. These writers refer to Saccharin as a "poison" and a "drug," and the fact that it has no food value. If they would be disposed to develop the real facts they would find that a great body of most eminent scientists, known as the Referee Board of Consulting Scientific Experts—and which body of scientists were appointed by the United States Government—had reported after a full and thorough investigation that "the use of Saccharin in foods in quantities that might constitute a menace to health is improbable."

Saccharin is no more a drug than sugar; both are used in medicine. Saccharin is a chemical compound, the same as salt is a chemical compound (chloride of sodium), and both are used for the same purpose—flavoring of food.

No one claims Saccharin to be a food, nor does it displace any food; because of its intense sweetness (500 times sweeter than sugar), only a very minute quantity is needed to give the desired sweet taste.

It is a known fact that Sugar is poison to many people.

Saccharin has been used in constantly increasing quantities during the past thirty-five years and there is no single case on record of its having done harm; and the Referee Board confirms this in its report "that small quantities of Saccharin . . . . are without deleterious or poisonous action and are not injurious to health."

In one of your own courts—the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court of New York—in the recent case of People vs. Excelsior Bottling Works, 171 N. Y. Supp., page 733, it was held that soda water sweetened with 1-100th per cent of Saccharin could not be injurious. The Court said:

> "The uncontroverted evidence shows that the use of soda water as a beverage containing this quantity of Saccharin could not possibly be injurious to health, and that there is greater danger of injury to health from consuming too much sugar than from the consumption of Saccharin in such a percentage. It also appears that the use of sugar in any form is injurious to people suffering from diabetes and some other diseases, while the use of Saccharin by them to flavor food and render it palatable is prescribed by medical authorities."

Do New York's well-informed writers know that sugar was discovered about the year 714 and for about 800 years was considered more or less as an article of medicine?

Do they realize that because of the harmlessness of Saccharin it can be a great boon in the present crisis of short sugar supply?

Do they know that our Government permits the use of Saccharin in foods intended for invalids, and, therefore, Saccharin is not considered harmful for them?

Do they know that Saccharin is used as a sweetening agent in all civilized countries except the United States in place of, or as an auxiliary to, sugar?

Do they know that enough Saccharin is available in this country for use in foods and beverages, in which the added food value of sugar is not desired, to release not less than one hundred million pounds of sugar for uses where sugar's food value is necessary?

Do they know that the use of such quantity of Saccharin would reduce the high cost of living not less than eleven million dollars annually in the one item of sugar?

Press dispatches announce that the U. S. Department of Agriculture holds, "Saccharin is a harmful drug, the use of which is deleterious to health." We have answered this in the foregoing. If the Government will seize a food product sweetened with Saccharin which has been shipped in Interstate Commerce, the quality of which comes within the provisions of the Pure Food Law, and makes the seizure because it is sweetened with Saccharin, and will immediately prosecute the shipper, we will donate $1,000.00 to any charitable institution the National Chamber of Commerce may direct.

We have been urging the officials of the Government for over seven years to bring a case in court to test the question, but the issue has been sidestepped. Why?

Saccharin can be used in the household and can be had in the form of tablets, each tablet having equal strength of one lump or teaspoonful of sugar. Two boxes —200 tablets—costing 15 cents, have the sweetening power of more than three pounds of sugar.

The use of Saccharin should be encouraged, and not frowned upon—particularly at this time.

Respectfully,

JOHN F. QUEENY, Chairman of the Board

DECLARES POLES RAVAGED GALICIA

LOST ALL HIS OWN CASH

American Army Lieutenant Lent Him 400 Francs to Pay Passage Home.

After spending five years in Galicia where he witnessed much of the recent fighting, Simon Margulies, a cigar dealer, of this city, yesterday walked into the offices of the Ukrainian National Committee, 30 East Seventh Street, with a large bundle of letters from Galician Ukrainians to their relatives in this country concerning conditions in their native land.

Mr. Margulies said Galicia was ruined financially and economically, that the national life was destroyed, thousands of men having been killed and many more maimed and others imprisoned.

He described the havoc wrought by the Germans in East Galicia when the Russians were driven out and of the suffering of the people when the Russians rallied.

"When the Austrian Empire fell apart, the first act of the liberated Poles was to swoop down upon Lemberg, where they massacred 800 Jews in that city alone," he said. "Four hundred of these were driven into a synagogue by the Poles and then the synagogue was set on fire.

"Although everybody knows that the population of Eastern Galicia is almost entirely Ukrainian, the Poles claimed all of the country and characterized Ukrainian soldiers as bands of robbers and murderers. No robbers and murderers could have been worse than the Poles.

"When the Poles entered Tarnopol this year they seized all the horses, cattle and grain which they could find. They even robbed the people whom they met of their shoes and clothing. Many a man was stopped on the roadway and forced to divest himself of every bit of his clothing and give it to the Polish soldiers. Even I, an American citizen, was held up and robbed of my clothing.

"In the few days I have been in America, I have heard more talk of Bolsheviki than I did in five years in Galicia."

Mr. Margulies's return to America was accomplished only through the generosity of an American officer in Berlin. He said that while traveling to Posen his train stopped at a small station where a squad of Polish soldiery rushed into the train and robbed all the passengers.

Although he protested that he was an American citizen Mr. Margulies said he was robbed of 12,000 marks, all the money he had. He borrowed sufficient money in Posen to get to Berlin where he was penniless. He saw an American lieutenant at the ticket window attempting to make the agent understand that he wanted a sleeper to Paris. He offered to act as interpreter for the officer, who questioned him and learned his story.

"Let's see. About 400 francs ought to be enough for you to get to America from here," the officer said. "I'll stake you."

Mr. Margulies protested that he was a stranger and could not give any security for the money, but the officer said he would "take a chance."

"His name is J. G. Howard," added Mr. Margulies. "In civil life he is an architect and his address is The First National Bank, San Francisco. We men like him in the army, no wonder that Americans are recognized as the greatest people in the world."

CARY R. MILLER ENDS HIS LIFE AT WALDORF

U. S. Vice Consul to Stockholm Kills Himself on Eve of Sailing.

WORRIED OVER FINANCES

Fired Fatal Shot Just After Telephoning Wife He Was Finishing Packing.

Cary R. Miller, United States Vice Consul to Stockholm, Sweden, killed himself in his apartments at the Waldorf yesterday afternoon by shooting himself through the right temple. His wife discovered his body at about 6 o'clock on her return from church.

Mr. and Mrs. Miller had lived at the Waldorf since January, when Mr. Miller came here from Sweden. It was said at the hotel that he had come here on official business. He had obtained passports for himself and his wife, and was intending to sail for Sweden tomorrow.

Early yesterday afternoon Mrs. Miller left the apartments. Mr. Miller was packing at the time, and was apparently in good spirits. Mrs. Miller was with friends, and before it was time for the church services which she attended, she called Mr. Miller by telephone at the Waldorf. She asked him to join her for church, but he replied that he must finish his packing.

At 3:30 Mrs. Miller called her husband a second time, but she received no answer from the apartment. She did not return to the hotel until about 6 o'clock, and then went to her room. She saw Mr. Miller's body stretched out on the floor with a revolver in his hand and a bullet wound in his right temple. She notified Assistant Manager Frank Martin of the hotel.

Coroner Gonsales was called and he said that Mr. Miller had been dead about three hours. The body was taken to an undertaker's and Mrs. Miller, who was prostrated, went to the home of friends in the city.

Mr. Miller left two notes indicating that financial difficulties was the motive for his act. One of the notes stated that he had "nothing to regret," and was "perfectly satisfied to go." The other note requested that a Masonic funeral be held and that the Masonic charm on his watch chain be given to the Mason who took care of his body. Both notes were signed "Cary."

Mr. Miller was connected with an exporting firm in Stockholm.

About six months ago he had a bad attack of ptomaine poisoning and lost about twenty-five pounds. He had worried much about his health recently.

Mr. Miller was well known among the employes of the Waldorf, where he had stayed at different times in the last twenty years. They said that he was always cheerful and the last man they believed would take his own life.

Mr. Miller was appointed Vice Consul to Sweden on June 13, 1918. He was 59 years old, and had come to this city originally from Millersburg, Ind., which was named after his family. He was married about a year ago.

HEAR WAGNER IN PARIS.

Two in Audience Protest but Are Removed from Theatre.

PARIS, Nov. 9.—Wagner was selected to represent German music, the presentation of which was resumed yesterday at the Pas de Loup Concert, the Meistersinger overture being rendered and marking the definite return of the Teutonic classics.

Two persons among the audience audibly protested. A gray-haired man, in the dead silence preceding the opening of the overture, the last number on the program, rose and drew attention to the war. A woman also made a somewhat unintelligent protest. Both were hurled out by guards, who had been prepared for such an occurrence. A score of persons had previously left the building.

The conductor of the concert, Rene Baton, declared that interruptions against German music would not be tolerated. He regarded it as a question of art and said he proposed to make up the programs four-fifths of French music and one-fifth of all foreign music, including German.

A vote of three Pas de Loup concert audiences on the subject was announced as 4,983 favoring the return of German music, and 218 opposing it.

QUESTION OF BONUS CONFRONTS LEGION

Differences of View Show the Matter Will Be Hard Fought at Minneapolis Convention.

Special to The New York Times.

MINNEAPOLIS, Nov. 9.—The question of a cash bonus to service men looms up as one of the big issues before the American Legion Convention, which opens its sessions tomorrow.

Not only did the State delegations now on the ground hold caucuses, but States west of the Mississippi River held a Western caucus and those from the South held a Southern caucus.

The far Western delegates will stand firmly for a cash bonus to be paid to all who served in the war. The Southern delegates are opposed to the bonus, partly because of the negro. They argue that a cash bonus to some negroes will only cause idleness and consequent trouble. The Middle West appears to be mildly in favor of a bonus. The Eastern delegations seem to be divided.

Royal C. Johnson, Representative from South Dakota, is expected to lead the fight for a bonus.

It is believed that the South and West will combine in supporting some former private for Commander in Chief. The voting strength lies in the East, however. Massachusetts has 65 votes; Pennsylvania, 80; New York, 47; Ohio, 46, and Minnesota, 36. The voting strength is based upon a membership of about 700,000, with one vote for each 1,000 paid up members.

Caucuses of the delegation from California, Oregon and Washington indicated that a fight would be made in the convention to pass a resolution recommending anti-Japanese immigration legislation.

On the lips of practically every delegate arriving here is expressed determination that the legion outline a program for dealing with anti-American propaganda. That is one subject upon which there is little likelihood of dissension.

ENDS "ROUND-RIM" FLIGHT.

Lieut. Colonel Hartz Completes Aerial Circle of American Border.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—Having crossed every border State, Lieut. Col. R. L. Harts returned today to Bolling Field here, of which he is commandant, after completing the first "around-the-rim" flight in the history of American aviation.

Accompanied by Lieutenant E. E. Harmon, pilot, and Jerry Dobias and Jake Herring, mechanicians, he left Washington July 24, flying up the Atlantic Coast to Augusta, Me., thence westward along the Great Lakes and Canadian border to Seattle, then down the Pacific Coast to San Diego, thence to El Paso, New Orleans, and Pensacola, and up the Atlantic Coast to Washington.

It was estimated that approximately 122 flying hours were consumed. The only mishap occurred near Ausable Forks, N. Y., requiring practically the rebuilding of the plane.

Women Give Enthusiastic Welcome to Beauty of New Patterns in Simmons Beds

Now in the Stores—the First Metal Beds Ever Designed in Harmony with Interior Decoration Today. Old-established House of Simmons, Kenosha, Strengthens its Commanding Position as Leading Producers of Metal Beds

NO woman who sees these beautiful beds will wonder at the way they are being received.

Every day goes further to confirm the initiative of the Simmons Company in producing metal bed designs based on the sound principles of line, form and composition — such as the "Colonial", illustrated above.

This Simmons idea of putting real design into metal beds is just the latest example of initiative that has expanded the Simmons Company from one small plant twenty-five years ago to one of the great American industries today.

It was the Simmons Company that first thought of sleep in relation to metal beds.

That led to the Simmons Patented Pressed Steel Corner Lock — the lock that holds the bed together firm, like one piece of metal — the lock that prevents squeak and rattle and makes the bed noiseless, inviting relaxation and deep repose.

They have consistently advocated the Twin Bed principle.

They have invented Springs, too, that yield evenly to the contours of the body — always resilient and elastic.

The Slumber King—a spring composed of flexible steel strips with spirals of high-test spring wire; so combined that the spring action is equal in all directions.

A complete line of coil, fabric and woven wire springs—each the best of its own class.

Now this latest achievement — good design in metal beds — involves also the invention of a truly seamless tubing.

You know how it is with the old-fashioned metal beds. The tubing always has a seam running the full length of the tube. It is likely to be rough — does not take the enamel nicely.

When you see these new Simmons Beds, notice especially the tubing — its exquisite finish, free from seam and roughness — and how beautifully it takes the enamel.

YOU will find them in the leading stores — and with them some very charming Brass Beds and Children's Cribs — built for sleep, by the Simmons Company.

Prices of Simmons Beds are little, if any, higher than those of ordinary beds. If you have any trouble finding them we shall be glad to send you the names of Simmons merchants near your home.

SABOTAGE OPENLY ARRIVED AT.

If anybody still wonders why the meetings of the Paris Peace Conference were not open to the public, he can find out by studying the course of the Treaty debate in the Senate. Open diplomacy in the sense of publicity for the processes of diplomatic agreement while they are still going on is out of the question until the human race is considerably improved, and that despite the fact that diplomats, on the average, seem to be more dependable than Senators.

The Peace Treaty was made up by men who met sometimes in a body in a hall, sometimes by twos and threes and fours in private offices and hotel rooms. It was formed in an atmosphere of qualified secrecy; there were a few public sessions of the Conference; disappointed bargainers often revealed the substance of a day's discussions; but nothing of great consequence was done in full view of the world. The process was secret and a Treaty was finally made.

Judging from the Senate's performance, it may be supposed that if most of the sessions of the Conference and its committees had been open to everybody, if there had been a record in which every word spoken in the meetings, and a great many that were not spoken, had been set down for posterity, the Conference would still be in session with no treaty in sight. Secret diplomacy at the Peace Conference took a great deal of time, but produced a Treaty; a Treaty which, as a whole, was satisfactory to almost everybody but the enemy. Open diplomacy in the Senate has already taken almost as much time, and seems likely to result in nothing but deforming or killing of the Treaty. And in that process Senators have repeatedly gone out of their way to insult other Powers, our allies and lately our friends, in a manner which would make trouble, and much trouble, if it were practiced by diplomats. For Senatorial manners the nation and the world will make allowances; but of the Senate certain accomplishments are expected.

The Senate is accomplishing nothing but the destruction of all that the Conference accomplished. The preamble adopted on Friday postpones American ratification, continues the state of war, until three of our four principal associates have accepted our reservations in writing. The majority reservations will kill the Treaty, will put the United States on record as demanding all the benefits of international co-operation without assuming any of the duties, as determined to do nothing for those whom we would have do everything for us. Some of those who voted for the preamble may have hoped that the reservations adopted would not be so very drastic, but in any case the preamble imposes further delay at a time when the world needs speedy settlement of the Treaty issue and a prompt restoration of peace.

But public attention should be called to the defeated Borah amendment to the preamble, which would have made the consent of all four of our allies—Great Britain, France, Italy, and Japan—to our reservations a condition precedent of ratification. The preamble as adopted will probably kill the Treaty; the Borah amendment would have done so with certainty. The men who voted for this should be noted: Senators BORAH, BRANDEGEE, CALDER, CUMMINS, DILLINGHAM, ELKINS, FALL, FERNALD, FRANCE, FRELINGHUYSEN, GRONNA, HARDING, JOHNSON of California, KNOX, LA FOLLETTE, LODGE, MCCORMICK, MOSES, NEW, NORRIS, POINDEXTER, SHERMAN, WADSWORTH, WATSON, and REED. How can the conclusion be escaped that these twenty-five men were consciously, deliberately, voting to kill the Treaty drawn in Paris, to send American delegates to Berlin to make a new treaty which would certainly be to the advantage of Germany and the disadvantage of the rest of the world? They failed in that frontal assault, but they succeeded in drawing twenty-three other Senators to their side in an attack from the flank, which may accomplish the same result. It is a phenomenon which we have seen elsewhere of late; a good many honest union Senators are pulling chestnuts out of the fire for the I-Won't-Works of the group that wants to kill the Treaty.

Meanwhile, what does the country think about it? The Simmons Hardware Company of St. Louis has writ ten to 40,000 of its merchant customers a letter which says, among other things:

> This is business, not politics. The one important question before the people of the United States is, When will final action on the Treaty be taken? There can be no doubt that this delay is affecting unfavorably the labor situation and the industrial situation, both here and in Europe. • • • What else can we do? It is not now a question of getting what suits us, but of taking the best that it is practically possible to obtain from Germany under conditions existing today.

The John V. Farwell Company of Chicago has sent to 20,000 merchant customers a letter which says:

> American business, large and small, is being handicapped by the delay. The time has come for ninety-six Senators to get together, act, get the Treaty out of the way at this session, and then concentrate on the solution of vital domestic problems.

The publishers of the four daily papers of Des Moines—three Republicans and one independent—have declared:

> The Senate has had ample time for debate. • • • Further delay accomplishes nothing for good, but is a constant invitation to disorder and lawlessness in many countries.

The world is waiting while the Senate talks. One-fourth of the Senators are talking for no purpose of reservation or amendment, but simply to kill the Treaty. Will their moderate colleagues help them to keep the world in turmoil till recovery is impossible?

THE MANDATORY INJUNCTION.

If the officials of the United Mine Workers of America had been well advised by their lawyers, the coal strike would never have been ordered unless Acting President LEWIS and his subordinates were ready to defy the law and provoke a test of strength between their organization and the Government of the United States. They should have been told that the Lever or Federal food and fuel control law would be operative until the proclamation of peace was issued by the President, and that "the Lever act," as Judge ANDERSON said at the hearing in Indianapolis on Saturday, "makes it an unlawful conspiracy for "two or more persons to arrange to "limit the production of coal." If Mr. LEWIS and his fellow union leaders were not properly advised, they know what the law is now, they understand the mandatory injunction for the withdrawal of the coal strike order.

Such sophistries as the contention that the officials of the union "believed that peace had come and that "the United States was no longer at "war" were brushed aside by Judge ANDERSON, who stated that "Con- "gress had the right to say, and did "say, that the Lever act should remain in force until a definite thing "was done," the definite thing being a proclamation of peace by the President. The question of when the war would end was not justiciable, he pointed out, but political. The peace proclamation cannot be issued until the Peace Treaty is ratified.

Did the officials of the United Mine Workers believe that the Government, which was operating the railroads of the country, and, aside from that duty and responsibility, was bound to protect the American people from the direful consequences of a great coal strike—cold, hunger, and sickness—would not dare to invoke the Lever act against a contract-breaking labor union? Well, they are undeceived now. Or, badly advised, did they think that they had the law on their side, that their attorneys would be able to show that the Lever act had lapsed and with it the contract under which the miners were producing coal? Well, they know better now. The strike cannot be dissociated from the duty not to limit the production of the nation's fuel.

The only question that remains is whether the leaders of the miners' unions are going to obey the order of the United States Court or defy it. The law is against them, which is fortunate for the welfare of the people, who are already confronted by a coal shortage. If the law shall be flouted, no doubt will exist that the defendants and their associates were engaged from the first in a conspiracy to gain their ends by "holding up" the Government and intimidating the people. Some labor leaders, like President HOWAT of District 14 of the United Mine Workers, are in a refractory temper. "Regardless of "the injunctions, prisons, and Judges "in the United States, I will not alter "my stand," says Mr. HOWAT, "for I believe we are right." He is entitled to his view, but he will have to take the consequences of scorning the process of the Federal court. Public opinion will very generally support the order of Judge ANDERSON. It is based upon the plain intent and actual expression of the Lever act, and, like all good law, is common sense.

The American people are very weary of strikes incited by the radical element or by arbitrary leaderships strikes that breed strikes until industry ruins down and production almost ceases; strikes that hurt everybody, including the labor union members themselves; strikes that painfully add to the high cost of living. And the American people are fast losing patience with those professing friends of labor whose speech and behavior encourage the lawless and seditious.

A SOLUTION BETTER THAN NONE.

From the Italian Embassy in Washington comes the statement that, if Signor TITTONI's recent proposals on the Adriatic question are accepted, D'ANNUNZIO will withdraw from Fiume and allow the Government of his country to represent him in a final settlement. This has seemed quite probable for some time; however Signor NITTI may have felt about it, there can be no doubt that important elements of Italian officialdom, as well as the bulk of the people, felt that D'ANNUNZIO had been of considerable service in doing something that the Government could not conveniently do for itself.

But the morality of past transactions is for the moment of less consequence than the future. The Tittoni proposals would give Italy practically all of Istria, as well as a certain suzerainty over the City of Zara in Dalmatia, with a considerable number of the Dalmatian islands. Fiume itself and the surrounding territory would be a buffer State under the control of the League. The mainland of Dalmatia, except Zara, would go to the Jugoslavs.

This is an unjust proposal. It would give Italy a great deal of territory inhabited by enormous Slav majorities. But it is probably the least that Italian public sentiment, deliberately incited for a year past, would accept. If the allied authorities do not agree to it, we shall probably see Italian public opinion demanding the annexation of Dalmatia, which would certainly mean war between Italy and Jugoslavia, and possibly revolutionary uprisings in both countries. Neither war nor revolution would be of any advantage to Italy or Jugoslavia, or to the rest of the world. It is not quite true that any settlement of the Adriatic question is better than no settlement; but just now, when the world needs to quit thinking about wars and annexations and to get back to work—a need not least urgent in Italy and Jugoslavia—concessions must be made.

To a dispassionate eye it will seem that Jugoslavia makes most of the concessions under the Tittoni plan, but the Italians will make some concessions which undoubtedly look large to them. Jugoslavia cannot afford a war with Italy except in defense of her very life, and the Tittoni plan gives her enough to make life possible. Signor TITTONI has undoubtedly had to encounter much opposition from the extreme annexationists in his own country in formulating his proposal; what he thinks about its abstract justice we cannot know, but he has undoubtedly done the best thing possible for solution of a practical difficulty. For purely practical reasons the Jugoslavs and their friends should consider it favorably.

THE IMPUNITY OF BOLSHEVISM.

In this city and a number of others on Friday and Saturday nights agents of the Federal Government, assisted by the police, invaded certain centres of revolutionary propaganda. Some hundreds of persons were arrested. The second anniversary of the Bolshevist revolution in Russia was thus remembered. Long accounts of the vigilance and vigor of the officials were printed in the newspapers. Rightly or wrongly, the public is becoming cynical, suspicious of all these sporadic incursions of the Federal authorities into Bolshevikia. Is the public to be contented with "the inference that it is "the Government's purpose to deport "as many of those taken as can be "proved to be criminal anarchists"?

Always there is talk about future deportations. It hasn't been noticed that any great amount of ship room has yet been required for the actually deported. "The inference" about the Government's intentions in last week's "raids" is drawn from the fact that the warrants upon which 149 persons were held were signed by the United States Commissioner of Immigration. Of those 149 deportables, how many will be deported? And what proportion are the caught to the uncaught? On Oct. 16 a Federal official at Washington told THE TIMES correspondent that "he estimated that "there were at least 50,000 aliens in "the United States who were openly "or secretly working for a Bolshevist "form of government for this coun- "try."

Even when one of these undesirables is convicted in the courts, he or she seems able to roam at liberty, on bail, or stay, making incendiary speeches. The evidence of far-reaching Bolshevist-anarchist activity has been spread before the country for months. Something is always going to be done about it. Not much has been done about it. Sensational "raids," great thunder in the index, impress nobody; and the country cannot forget that in the contest of intelligence between the police and the bomb-planters the latter seem to have won. The "net" is always spread with consummate ability. The enemies of the Government are always "in the toils." How do they manage to break through?

And even if our dangerous aliens were driven out, a company of natives more dangerous would remain. It is with American money, not the much-talked-of and probably mythical funds of "LENIN and TROTSKY," that the deadly Bolshevist poison is spread through the country. In October Mr. SAMUEL A. ENSOM, a Deputy Attorney General of this State, who investigated the radical publications of this city in connection with the inquiry of the Lusk committee into Bolshevist propaganda, said that of between forty and fifty extreme radical foreign-language papers here, all but two are supported by subsidies from rich amateurs of revolution, boudoir Bolshevik. "With two exceptions, the "editors or publishers have admitted "to me that the income from their "papers," which have a circulation of 3,000,000, mainly in the great industrial centres, "would not pay ex- "penses, and that they would be "bankrupt except for gifts from "wealthy people of this city." The Federal Government has the list of these underwriters of political, social, and economic ruin. That paid press continues unmolested to foment upheaval and violence among millions of foreigners in the United States. In Russian, Finnish, Hungarian, Lithuanian, and other tongues the gospel of destruction is preached. Does the Government do anything to check these workers for its subversion? Does it do anything to bring to punishment the backers of revolution? The publication of their names would be at least a moral and social punishment. Instead, the list is guarded as a secret. Yet in the scale of guilt how innocent does the poor ignorant dupe of criminal propaganda look by the side of the Americans who, with every advantage of opportunity, education, fortune, are false to their country and to civilization!

The Administration has many things to do, but what more vital labor than to bring to justice the native and the imported missionaries of Bolshevism? It will not do to go to sleep complacently after the Massachusetts election. The American people are aroused from time to time. The fanatics of Bolshevism work all the time.

WHAT OHIO VOTED ON.

It may be some time before we know the verdict of the Ohio voters upon the referendums submitted last Tuesday. Meanwhile it may be useful to the public to know what the Buckeye voters accepted or rejected.

A proposed amendment to the State Constitution provides that "intoxicating liquor," doesn't mean any "bev- "erage containing 2% or less per "cent. of alcohol by weight."

A proposed amendment to the State Constitution repeals State prohibition and puts local option into force again.

The third, or third and fourth, referendum relates to the so-called "Crabbe act" and the joint resolution of the Ohio Legislature ratifying the Prohibition Amendment. The amendment is sufficiently known. The Crabbe act is a comprehensive, severe measure of prohibition. It might be called "Puritanical" were it not for the fact that the Puritans slaked thirst with ancient remedies, and were surprised, and possibly not too severely honest, in finding, in Massachusetts, with worthy, "painful" Mr. HIGGINSON, that water could be used innocuously as a beverage. The English Puritans who remained in England never got so far as that, at least in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries.

We may not know till the middle of the week or later exactly how Ohio has voted on these various proposals. Dry or wet, let us await with composure the sublime results.

FOREIGN FINANCE.

The Edge bill for promoting exports of our goods by the import of foreign credits of various sorts passed into conference between the houses on the same day that a British Treasury official estimated the demands of Europe within a year at eight billions of dollars, allowing nothing for Germany. That London notion of the proportions of the problem contrasts strangely with the capital contemplated for the companies to be created under the Edge bill. Two millions is fixed as a minimum, without a maximum. Mr. DAVISON, and Mr. REDFIELD when Secretary, had suggested a billion-dollar corporation. Mr. WARBURG had earlier and larger ideas about the proportions of the investment concern which should finance our exports by issuing its own securities to Americans against the securities which it accepted from foreign sources, of which it would be a better judge than individual investors could be.

The Edge bill is the sole survivor of these and other plans, and it will require a hard-working regiment of these corporations to meet the emergency. For example, how many of them would be required to float the $250,000,000 loan to England which was put out last week without the aid of the bill passed about the same time? The probably final form of the bill indicates an interesting change of sentiment during its consideration. At first it was thought that the business could not be done without the participation of our Treasury, and a guarantee of 25 per cent. by our Government was considered. Finally it was thought that financial relations between Governments were undesirable, and regulation by the Federal Reserve Board was substituted as the only official connection with business which is now to be done on strictly business principles. Two classes of corporations are authorized. The first class are practically banks, except that they do not receive deposits. Otherwise they may do all sorts of financial work. The other class of corporations are traders, with explicit authority to act as holding companies. Neither class can do domestic business which is not strictly connected with its foreign business, and no corporation organised under the act can invest more than 10 per cent. of its capital in any other corporation.

These corporations will be a welcome help with a great work, which they will not monopolise, as some of the debaters feared. One anxious Representative said that the bill was as bad as the Webb bill, delivering the country's business over to trusts, pauperising American labor, deluging our markets with European "blue sky" securities, necessitating the sending of troops abroad to protect investments in Siberia, &c. It was an eloquent speech, but lost its force when it was stated that the orator had himself voted for the Webb bill, which no reasonable business man objects to. The passage of the bill will not prevent addition to the eight foreign banking corporations already existing under State laws, with even broader powers, but without the prestige associated with the word Federal; obviously there still will be need of such business as may be done without the aid of the Edge bill. For example, last week the State Department authorised the Chicago bank which had lent $5,000,000 to China to increase it by $25,000,000. It is an emergency short-time loan, and relieves a situation threatening political disintegration due to the delay with the consortium loan.

Another interesting foreign finance item last week was the arrangement that Poles resident here should deposit Liberty bonds to a total of $250,000,000 in exchange for Polish 6 per cent. bonds, the Liberties to be held in this country by Poland as a basis of credit for cotton and materials for Poland's industries. That is a novel way to overcome the disinclination of this market to take foreign securities, with the result of checking our own domestic trade. Switzerland last week rejected a loan of $300,000,000 because she wished to spend elsewhere the cost of electrifying her railways, which illustrates the part foreign loans will play in stimulating our production when they are well placed. It is expected that Switzerland will take a smaller advance, with an engagement to buy raw materials here. In a different class is the French three cities' loan for $45,000,000. No doubt it is "good," as our national currency used to be good, but the cities will not be our customers, so far as is known.

These are a few instances to show that our market is not depending for its salvation on legislation. It will be helpful, but the work will go on after it as before it, and perhaps other innovations will be brought forward. For example, Senator SMOOT has a bill to authorize the issue of domestic currency against deposits of the bonds of certain countries, which might be hard to sell here. Oddly enough, Senator SMOOT also thinks that deflation is an urgent need of the times. Probably most will agree that there is more need of inflating our exports than our home currency.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Technical Decision Dissatisfies.

Several questions, both interesting and important, were raised in the pleas for reinstatement of the Boston policemen who were removed for striking, and as many contentions of like quality were presented in behalf of the Police Commissioner and in defence of his action. No consideration was given, however, to the reasons offered for and against the restgration of the men to the positions the loss of which they now so much regret. Instead, the Supreme Court Judge who heard the opposing arguments at once denied the application on the ground that the counsel for the dismissed men had not brought action, as he should have done, under the State's Anti-Coercion act.

It can, and indeed must, be assumed that this decision was correct and exactly the one the Judge should have made, but just the same it was based on a technical point of the sort that to minds untrained in law seem to justify disrespect of courts and irritation with legal methods. Among its consequences will be that of arousing what has hitherto been entirely lacking—a trace of sympathy for the policemen who betrayed a sacred trust.

Grave as was their offending, it will appear to the greater part of the public both unreasonable and unfair that a possible mitigation of their punishment should depend on whether their lawyer sought it by one or another procedure. Still more unreasonable and unfair would it seem if the penalty of this mistake were to be deprivation of the privilege of resorting to the proper and provided remedy. That sometimes happens in litigation, but in this case the counsel of the policemen is presumably still free to seek the form of relief he overlooked when he brought his action.

Suspicions Were Not Confirmed.

While the British authorities were within their legal rights, last week, in searching two American steamers that arrived at an Irish port and in questioning their crews, the exercise of the right was one of the tactless things which the Britons seem doomed always to be doing in the handling of Irish matters. The course taken would have been entirely justified, of course, if the suspicion or fear of the Government officials that the ships were carrying secret consignments of arms and ammunition for distribution among the Sinn Feiners had proved to be well founded. No evidence of such smuggling was discovered, however, on either vessel, and the inevitable result of the searching will be to provide plausible excuses for saying that Great Britain is interfering with lawful trade between the United States and Ireland. The familiar motive for it will be ascribed—that of perpetuating, to Ireland's injury, the British monopoly of business with the distressful isle.

That is what the Sinn Feiners at home already are saying, and their sympathisers here will repeat the tale with all the emphasis and emotion of which they are capable—which is a good deal.

The searches, too, were more or less of an affront to our own port officials, for the implication is that they are not doing all their duty, but are guilty of negligence, or worse. Thus is a good case, not spoiled, indeed, but certainly weakened, to the embarrassment of England's friends and the delighting of her enemies.

A Double Day for Elections.

A peculiarity of the bill now before the Spanish Cortes, extending the franchise to women, is its provision that men shall vote on one day and women on the next. This is a separation of the sexes that had been deemed necessary nowhere else, and though there has been a good deal of talk among the opponents of woman suffrage everywhere, to the effect that polling places were not invariably temples of refinement and good manners, and therefore at least unpleasant for good women, it has been left for the Spaniards to take this objection seriously—or sincerely—enough to divide the voting in this way.

In other countries where equal suffrage has been granted its friends confidently have assumed that the presence of the women would make the men behave at least decently, while the enemies of the change have taken the position that, if the experiences of the feminine voters proved disagreeable, it would be what they deserve for forcing their way out of their proper sphere. So, where women vote at all they vote with the men, and, as a matter of fact, instances when women have been either shocked or annoyed in polling places have been too few to make counting them worth while.

If the Spaniards are still apprehensive, it must be because more than a trace of the Oriental attitude toward women persists among them. They can have their double election day if they choose, of course, but only Spanish patience would tolerate the resulting delay of "returns." Other voting peoples are too eager to know who has won—and lost—to guard the conventionalities, or even the proprieties, in that particular way.

Her Offense Was Not Unpardonable.

One of the London papers affects indignant surprise because Lady NANCY ASTOR has complained, in one of her speeches, of having encountered "indifference" when, in the days of Mr. ASQUITH, she went to Downing Street for information about war happenings and doings. She is reminded that, with one son dead and another terribly wounded, Mr. ASQUITH could hardly have been indifferent to anything relating to the war, and she is told that women who bothered Downing Street with questions were lucky if they had to bear nothing worse than a cool dismissal.

It does seem that the vivacious candidate for Parliamentary honors did lay herself open to criticism by this attack on the predecessor of her friend LLOYD GEORGE, but since when have electioneering speeches, in England or anywhere else, been thus closely scrutinised, or the speakers held to a responsibility so strict? Nowhere is political oratory noted for meticulous accuracy or a scrupulous regard for the sensibilities of opponents.

This is lamentable, doubtless, but custom has made it tolerable, and it is not very noble to scold Lady ASTOR for a most familiar form of carelessness.

Appeal for a Needy Family.

A family in the Greenpoint section of Brooklyn is in a pathetic state of destitution. The father met his death suddenly in a fire, leaving his wife in a rundown state of health with the problem of not only mothering but supporting five delicate children. She has found this an impossible task and the Brooklyn Bureau of Charities has come to her assistance. In order to continue assisting this family until the mother is able to assume more responsibilities, the bureau appeals for a fund of $150. Large or small contributions will be acknowledged promptly if mailed to the Bureau at 30 Schermerhorn Street, Brooklyn, marked "for 444-T."

The Outlook for Thanksgiving.

To the Editor of The New York Times.

No wine in the jelly, no stick in the mince pie, no brandy in the plum pudding sauce! Saved from a drunkard's grave, but what a Thanksgiving! CECIL W. BROWN.
Providence, R. I., Nov. 8, 1919.

HAIL, MASSACHUSETTS!

Mr. President, I shall enter on no encomium upon Massachusetts. She needs none. There she is; behold her, and judge for yourselves. There is her history; the world knows it by heart. The past at least is secure. There is Boston, and Concord, and Lexington, and Bunker Hill; and there they will remain forever. And, Sir, where American Liberty raised its first voice, and where its youth was nurtured and sustained, there it still lives in the strength of its manhood, and full of its original spirit.—Daniel Webster.

So spoke in days of old with clarion voice
New England's glory and her greatest son,
Words that have made Americans rejoice,
And will as long as Freedom's course is run.

Yes, "there she is!" behold her now and see
How well she keeps her faith and purpose true,
Still worthy of her glorious history,
A Commonwealth that all now proudly view.

For unto her a challenge lately came
From factions alien to the common good;
Ignoble were their purpose and their aim,
Who strove for self, and not for brotherhood.

Then Massachusetts in her might arose—
Scorned party lines and stormed the barbican
Erected in her midst by Freedom's foes,
And proved herself once more American.

And he, her worthy son and Governor,
Who faltered not, but fearless flung his gage
Down to his foes, we hail as conqueror
Who kept inviolate our heritage!

DRAFTS FUEL OIL RULES.

Board of Standards Regulations Permitting Use, Effective Dec. 1.

As the result of an intensive study of the methods of using fuel oils in city buildings, in compliance with fire laws, it was announced yesterday by Colonel John P. Leo, Chairman of the Board of Standards and Appeals, that such oils can now be used in place of coal. A tentative draft of proposed rules governing storage and use of fuel oils and construction and installation of oil-burning equipment was drawn up during the Summer, and after a number of public hearings amendments to the draft were submitted to fuel oil engineers and fire prevention experts for their opinions. These rules were finally adopted by the Standards and Appeals Board.

"These fuel oil rules," said Chairman Leo, "make oil available as a fuel under conditions and provisions as to storage and equipment and quantity of the oil that make the use of this fuel safe. We feel we have achieved the formulation of rules under which the people of this city can choose their fuel and be set free from the exactions of any fuel monopoly. These rules will be promulgated Tuesday and will become effective twenty days thereafter, on Dec. 1, 1919."

William Wirt Mills, Secretary of the board, said that persons desiring to make installations under these rules could obtain copies of them upon request at the office of the Board of Standards and Appeals in the Municipal Building.

"While the new rules, under the law," said Mr. Mills, "do not become effective until Dec. 1, plans for installations under these rules can be filed immediately with the Bureau of Fire Prevention and permits can be obtained so that the work can be continued."

WOMEN TO AID HOSPITAL.

Contributions of $1 Sought for New Institution in the Bronx.

The campaign for 3,000 women who will assume responsibility for the $10,000 Bronx Hospital drive is nearing its close, according to an announcement made yesterday. It is expected that the 3,000 women will be ready to begin their one week canvass on Nov. 17.

The plan outlined by the Campaign Committee contemplates a visit to every home in the Bronx with a view to obtaining a subscription of $1 from each woman householder. In his appeal for women workers, Samuel Steinfeld, President of the Executive Committee, said that the opening of the hospital could not be delayed beyond the Spring of 1920 if the inadequate hospital facilities of the Bronx are to be relieved.

"At the present time there is no hospital to take care of dangerous medical cases or emergency surgical cases between Westchester Avenue and Fordham Road, as a result of which much suffering is inflicted upon patients who must be removed to hospitals located in the extreme ends of the Bronx or, worse yet, to Manhattan," he said. "The section of the Bronx, Fulton Avenue and 169th Street, where the hospital is located is almost midway between the two extreme ends of the borough. The district is thickly populated with tenement dwellers, and even under normal health conditions a hospital can be kept filled to capacity with patients residing in the district west of Third Avenue, from 169th Street to Claremont Parkway."

CHURCHES TO ADVERTISE.

Inter-Church Movement Plans National Educational Campaign.

A national publicity campaign, involving newspaper and outdoor advertising, will be commenced next Spring by the Inter-Church World Movement of North America, Tyler Dennett, Director of the publicity department, announced last night.

It will be part of an intensive national educational campaign to explain to the country the purposes and program of the inter-church world movement, in which more than a dozen of the leading Protestant churches are associated for co-operation in religious, social, and economic work, to enlist church workers and to aid in the raising of a united budget.

"The advertising campaign will be the greatest paid campaign ever undertaken by a religious organization or group of religious organizations and will compare in size with the largest of the Government's advertising campaigns during the war," Mr. Dennett said.

The educational campaign will begin next Monday, Nov. 17, when the first of the Christian University extension courses, which the Inter-Church World Movement will conduct in every State, will open in Burlington, Vt.

SEEK THE PERFECT BUSMAN.

Prizes for Suggestions of Ways to Improve Conductors and Drivers.

In an effort to obtain a service record of 100 per cent. for courtesy and efficiency, the Fifth Avenue Coach Company has offered its patrons cash prizes aggregating $250 for the twelve best suggestions or criticisms which will enable the company to make any improvement in its service. John A. Ritchie, President of the company, said he believed that the public was entitled to as nearly 100 per cent. service as it is humanly possible to give.

"Based on letters of commendation and complaint received by the company," said Mr. Ritchie, "we have figured it out that the present courtesy record of our drivers and conductors is 98 per cent. divided as follows: courteous under all circumstances, 98 per cent.; irritable under great provocation, 1½ per cent.; irritable under slight provocation, ½ per cent. This is a bully record, but we believe it can be made better and we are going to do everything in our power to wipe out that 2 per cent."

BETH DAVID SEEKS FUND.

Hospital's Drive to Raise $100,000 to Open Tomorrow Night.

A four-week drive to raise $100,000 for a new building for the Beth David Hospital, Lexington Avenue and 113th Street, will be inaugurated at a dinner tomorrow night at Harlem Palace, 29 West 116th Street. The new plans call for a seven-story modern fireproof structure, with 125 beds and a large dispensary.

The fund will benefit greatly, it is expected, from dances and benefit performances. A concert will be given at the Manhattan Opera House on Sunday evening, Nov. 16, at which Leo Ornstein, Max Rosen, Anna Fitziu, and Cantor Mayer Kanewsky will appear. A benefit performance will be given at the Selwyn Theatre on Sunday afternoon, Nov. 30, and a theatre party will be given at the Lenox Theatre on Dec. 3.

SANITATION FOR JERUSALEM

Zionists Constructing Drainage System in the Ancient City.

A comprehensive drainage system is in course of construction in Jerusalem which will provide the ancient city with adequate sanitary facilities. It has been undertaken by the Zionist Administrative Commission. Most of the preliminary surveys were made by Jewish engineers, and the construction is being carried out by Jews.

The disposal plant which is part of the drainage system is to be so located that Christian and Moslem communities will be able to join up their plants and derive the full benefit.

The plans for the work were completed in June last, and the contracts have been awarded, and work on the main scheme has begun.

MERCIER ASKS AID TO COMBAT UNREST

Fears Revolutionary Socialists Will Make Great Gains in Coming Belgian Elections.

DANGER IN LACK OF WORK

Pleads for Funds for Technical Schools and Orderly Social Organization.

An appeal by Cardinal Mercier for funds with which to fight social unrest in his country, was issued yesterday by George L. Duval, Chairman of the Mercier Testimonial Committee. The appeal was written just before the Cardinal departed for home, and in it he intimated that radical Socialists might make great gains in the coming Belgian elections. The appeal reads:

Archeveche
Montreal.

Dear Mr. Duval:

The extreme kindness shown to my country, in my person, on all the occasions where I had the privilege of being in touch with the prominent men of your people, encourages me to lay open frankly before them our present situation.

I have to pay off heavy debts; during four years and more, all I have saved has been spent for aiding my people in their most urgent needs and to cover the very necessities of life; for such purpose I have had to borrow important sums of money.

My duty is to try, by all means, to re-establish the normal conditions of life.

The economical conditions of life of the working classes and the lower middle classes known to us as "La Petite Bourgeoisie" had been deeply perturbed. The latter classes, who live for the most part either on the proceeds of some small shops or stores, or else on the income of their savings, have spent to the last penny of what they had put aside and often even have had to borrow money.

The cost of living has remained very high, nearly as much so as during the war. The workmen, in great numbers, have been without work for four years and more, I may say without any fault of their own, and not because they were unwilling to work, because the Germans prevented the municipalities from giving work to the unemployed, having in view their future deportations of Belgian inactive laborers to Germany.

I wish to say definitively that whenever our men could get work during the war, without such work being a direct or indirect assistance of the enemy, they were always willing to work.

At the present moment, the lack of employment in our country is real and extensive owing, in the first place, to the systematic destruction of many of our factories and all their contents by the Germans, with a view to seriously maiming competition opposed to their own markets. Another factor is that raw materials are still rare and in many cases the lack of them makes impossible for our workmen to get to work definitely and seriously. Many, therefore, of our workmen are without work and cannot get sufficient work to re-establish them in their former conditions of homelife. This has resulted in a deep dissatisfaction and unrest and the protagonists of Bolshevism and radical atheistic Socialists are exploiting this situation to the utmost in their plans of social revolution, and I would be greatly and agreeably surprised if at the next elections, revolutionary socialism does not gain a dangerous advance.

It is my duty, as a man laboring in the cause of civilization, to fight this revolutionary campaign by efforts which preserve and protect social order; I mean the press, co-operation and syndicates which gather together the heads of families and better elements who take to heart moral and social order. Such organizations exist in Belgium and it is my intent in the laboring classes from being absorbed by revolutionary organization we must absolutely back them up and support them.

To these works destined to protect social order, we must add a more and more intense development of the professional formation of the workmen and properly organized and re-equipped technical schools. It is absolutely urgent that I should establish such schools in Brussels, Antwerp, Malines, and the southern part of Brabant. At the present moment, I do not dispose of one single dollar for these social organizations, which are an immediate urgency.

The American nation has been so kind as to applaud that which I tried to do during the war to sustain Belgian patriotism; I feel confident that it will help me to accomplish my task in the complete re-establishment of social order and peace.

Yours very sincerely,
(Signed) D. J. CARD. MERCIER.
Archbp. of Malines.

The committee in charge of raising funds for the Cardinal was formed about a month ago.

HARLEM Y. W. C. A. MOVES.

In New Quarters It Is Getting 1,000 Jobs a Month for Women.

The Harlem Branch of the Y. W. C. A., which has just moved into its new $500,000 administration building at Lenox Avenue and 124th Street, has taken over the remnant of the United States Employment Bureau for Harlem.

The greatest post-war problem confronting the new employment bureau is the placing of the untrained middle-aged woman, who constitutes about 37 per cent.

Employment bureaus under action in the various branches or administration buildings throughout New York is one of the many phases of Y. W. C. A. work the public is invited to "come and see" during "open house" this month.

The minimum living wage today of the New York woman is rated at $14.82 per week and the Y. W. C. A. Employment Bureau accepts no offer for the employment of applicants under that amount. The Room Registry finds the girl a place to sleep and to eat, while the Employment Bureau finds her a job to pay for the place to eat and sleep. One of the branches is placing at the rate of 1,000 a month in investigated jobs.

DR. RANDALL RESIGNS.

Mount Morris Baptist Pastor to Work with Community Church.

The Rev. John Herman Randall, who has been pastor of the Mount Morris Baptist Church, Fifth Avenue and 128th Street, for the last thirteen years, tendered his resignation yesterday morning at the close of his sermon in order to become associated with John Haynes Holmes and Harvey D. Brown in the Community Church of New York, which was organized last Spring by members of the Church of the Messiah, Park Avenue and Thirty-fourth Street. Mr. Randall will begin his new work Jan. 1. His resignation was referred to a committee.

Mr. Randall in announcing his resignation to his congregation said:

"In accepting this call, I shall free myself from those limitations that are inevitable in the denominational church as at present organized, and shall henceforth stand frankly for the universal religion of human brotherhood, of love and good-will, of co-operation and service to all."

MUSIC

By RICHARD ALDRICH.

The Friends of Music.

The Society of the Friends of Music began its season yesterday afternoon with a concert in the Ritz-Carlton House, heard by an audience that quite filled the room and that showed by its numbers and attention how well the society has succeeded in interesting music lovers in the general aim of its work. This aim is to give, under the favorable surroundings of a small hall, music of a sort not likely to appear in the schedules of most concert givers, either individuals or organizations. The program yesterday well exemplified this aim. There was an orchestra of moderate size that played the overture and Beethoven's ballet, "The Creatures of Prometheus," which, as it happened, the Boston Symphony Orchestra had played last week, and which now, as then, seemed hardly worth the trouble of remembering. There were also the four songs for women's voices, by Brahms, with accompaniment of harp and two horns, Op. 17; Brahms's "Ave Maria," for women's voices and orchestra; a pattern by Mozart for four small orchestras, and Schubert's songs of Ossian XXIII., for women's voices and orchestra.

Except the overture, on account of its recent performance, the program was of little known to most music lovers. Artur Bodanzky conducted the concerted numbers and made up of members of the new Symphony Society; the chorus of women's voices was from the chorus of the Metropolitan Opera Company.

The four songs by Brahms are not among his more important compositions, though the delicate colouring of the harp and horns with the voices has a singular and expressive charm. The last, a setting of words from Ossian's "Fingal," has a more substantial character than the others, and reflects the Celtic melancholy of the verses. They would all have produced a deeper effect if the chorus had sung them with more confidence and with a finer quality of tone. The voices were unsteady in the beginning and none too steady throughout, and were somewhat uncertain of the pitch. There should be praise, however, for the finely modulated playing of the horns. The "Ave Maria" is also a work of small pretension, but of a finer sweetness and richer flow, with a beautiful orchestral accompaniment, and in this the women's chorus accomplished better results.

Mozart's notturno is a fascinating little piece in three movements that contain delightful and amusing surprises for the listeners. The four orchestras, each complete with two violins, viola, two horns and double bass, were placed in the middle of the stage, one each side of the hall and one in the back. The music is played with echo effects, one orchestra repeating a phrase announced by the first, the third taking up a part of it, the fourth finishing the last notes. The "echo" effect was a favorite in eighteenth century music, and is frequently to be found in the music of that period, when for the harpsichord, an instrument which, with its two manuals and stops controlling different sets of wires, was well suited for producing it. But Mozart's arrangement is an elaboration of this procedure that has a loose intention; an intention, however, that does no injury to the charm, sympathy, and continuity of the music. The piece was played with the spirit and grace that belong to it, and with an apt exposition of the device upon which the point of it depends.

It is a curious fact that though the autograph of this composition now reposes in what was formerly called the Royal Library of Berlin—the present name we don't know—it was, in 1852, when Ludwig Ritter von Köchel published his "Thematic Catalogue" of Mozart's works, owned in New York. Its subsequent adventures would be interesting to know.

Schubert's setting of Psalm XXIII., which closed the concert, matches the tenderness of the Psalmist's words in the tenderness of its melody, and the beautiful orchestral coloring of the accompaniment was sung with more success than some of the previous work of the chorus.

KIN OF PAVLOWA A REFUGEE

Mme. Popova Lost Parents, Husband, Son, and Seven Brothers in War.

Mme. V. P. Popova, half-sister to Anna Pavlowa, the Russian dancer, arrived yesterday on the Cunarder Royal George from England to seek an engagement with the Metropolitan or Chicago opera company. She said in French that she had been a ballet dancer with the Russian Imperial Company at Moscow, and had lost seven brothers fighting in the Russian Army, while her parents and her husband were killed by the Bolsheviki and her little son died of typhus fever. She contracted the disease three times since 1914, the first attack while nursing her son and the other two attacks while acting as nurse in an English hospital at Kazvin, Russia.

Mme. Popova was sent from Russia to Constantinople by the Y. W. C. A., and from there to the headquarters of the organization in London, where she was given letters to Mrs. Elizabeth Boies Cotton, at the Y. W. C. A., 610 Lexington Avenue, recommending her for a position as a ballet dancer. The Y. W. C. A. has also communicated with her half-sister, Anna Pavlowa, to meet her. They are children of the same mother.

DIES AS ELECTION IS WON.

Alderman Colne Had Left Sickbed to Defeat Former Rival.

William W. Colne, Republican Alderman-elect for the Forty-sixth District, Kings County, and for seven consecutive terms a member of the Assembly, died yesterday at his home, 13 Irving Place, Brooklyn. Some weeks ago he had suffered an attack of pneumonia, and as soon as he was able to be out he entered actively into the political campaign. The strain of the contest in his weakened condition, it was said, brought on heart trouble, which caused his death.

Mr. Colne was first elected to the Assembly on the Republican ticket in 1905, and in 1915 was elected a member of the Board of Aldermen to fill an unexpired term. Two years ago he was declared elected as a member of the board by one vote, but a recount gave it to Alderman Dempsey, whom he in turn defeated in the election last Tuesday.

Born of French parentage in Washington, D. C., fifty-six years ago, Mr. Colne was educated in the public schools and Georgetown University, and in 1881 came to New York as Assistant Purchasing Agent of the French Panama Canal Company. Later he formed a partnership with Thomas Powell of Paris, under the name of Colne & Co., for the sale of foreign and domestic patents.

You May Delay
By DR. BERTHOLD A. BAER
"Tempora mutantur et nos cum illis"—time changes and we change with it.
"There was a time when advertising in general was tabooed;" said Frank E. Campbell, founder-proprietor of The Funeral Church, Broadway at 66th Street. "A professional man considered it below his dignity to inform the public of what he knew. Banks considered it unethical to ask for trade and business.
"Then merchants began to advertise their wares. For many years 'display' advertisements were refused by newspapers and magazines. 'Cuts' and 'illustrations' could not be used.
"Again time changed and we changed with it.
"Banks and Bankers now advertise, for they consider that theirs is a business like any other, handling two and only two commodities—the same as every other well conducted business—material and service.
"'On the morrow I will make my will,' is the headline of an advertisement of The Bankers Trust Co. 'This man procrastinated,' is another.
"'Defeated by Death' is the title of an advertisement of The American Exchange National Bank.
"The purpose of this publicity is to induce men and women to appoint the respective Bank as Executor of their will.
"It would be interesting to know how many of the officials of these Banks have done what they ask you to do: have made their will.
"It would be more interesting to know how far they have prepared for the last journey from which there is no return. If they have made a will, have they purchased a plot, a place where to lie? Have they provided for the casket wherein their earthly remains will rest? Have they done this or do they leave the selection of the casket and the arrangement of the funeral to the prostrated woman who in the time of greatest grief does not know what to do nor how to do it?
"'You may delay, but time will not,' said Benjamin Franklin.
"Have you done your duty?"

In Memoriam

Our friend has gone. He, whom we knew as Monte W. Burd, is no more. In the infinite wisdom of "Him who Created" he has departed.
We can but mourn our loss, with bowed head and bended knee, our grief the greater because the departed was OUR FRIEND, dear to us by his deeds and by the good he radiated.
If we would measure life by clean thoughts and good deeds, then our friend has lived beyond expectancy, for to us he gave freely of his life to better ours.
These thoughts and deeds will ever grace his memory and spur us to better action.
They will hold him near and dear to us, and we thank a kind Providence for the great privilege of association with him.
Monte W. Burd saw the light of day on July 30th, 1874, at Cairnes, Hart County, Kentucky, the country of strong characters and daring deeds.
Hardship and an unquenchable thirst for knowledge were the mentors of his early youth, transplanting him from the rugged country of his birth to the City of Louisville, where his greater activity enlisted for him admiration and respect.
In 1914 his dynamic energy prompted him to connect himself with the American Dry Goods Company of New York and Jay & Company of New York City, and made him a national figure in the Dry Goods business.
One of the foremost and progressive concerns in New York acknowledged his rare ability with an exceptional six-figure offer for his services. A wonderful growth, from stockboy in a dry goods store to the pinnacle of the mercantile world in the short space of 30 years.
He was a member of the Knickerbocker Field Club of Brooklyn, N. Y., and of the T. P. A., Post D, Louisville, Ky.
A host of friends in all quarters of our country will, with us, mourn the ending of a life full of promise, fulfilled and to come.
To these friends and to his stricken family we humbly direct these lines, striving to lessen sorrow and to pattern our lives after his deeds.
Thus he continues to live as he would have wished to live.
Dedicated to: Wife, Son, Daughter, Father, Mother, Sister, Five Brothers, and to the host of Friends, to memory of him we learned to love.

They carry a large and varied line of stock. It represents a big money investment. Experience has shown the extravagance of guess-work. Only a super stock record could handle this work with satisfaction.
Leading machinery manufacturers, therefore, use the L. B. Stock record. They put it to mighty strenuous tests. The way it meets these tests is proof of its fundamental soundness and practicability.
The L. B. Stock record shows at a glance—and at any time—the exact quantity on hand of each kind of stock.
It shows the exact quantity used up in any given time.
It gives you the facts to enable you to buy raw materials to advantage.

PLANT BREAKS TWO WALKING RECORDS

Morningside Athlete Improves American Two-Hour and Fifteen-Mile Figures.

THIRD TITLE OF SEASON

Wins Metropolitan A. A. U. Championship with Ease from Field of Fourteen Rivals.

Displaying an ability which caused many officials to declare him the best walker in the country, today, young Willie Plant of the Morningside A. C. yesterday captured the Metropolitan A. A. U. 15-mile walking championship, incidental to creating two American pedestrian records. The young Harlem heel and toe athlete, giving a vivid demonstration of superiority over a field of fourteen rivals, covered the 15-mile distance in 2:6:13 1-5., displacing the best previous American figures for this event, made two years ago by Eddie Renz of the New York A. C., who captured the title in 1917 in 2:717 3-5. In addition to this mark, Plant erased his own record for two hours' walking when he covered 14 miles, 430 yards 6 inches, against 14 miles 420 yards, the distance he covered in two hours of walking in 1917.

That both records will be accepted by the A. A. U. Record Committee, when it meets in Boston next Sunday, there is little doubt. Three recognized timers, Captain Charles J. Dieges, one of the veteran watch holders of the local district; Fred Winkler and Bill Purdy, both long identified with the heel-and-toe sport, held the timepieces on Plant's performance, and all caught the young Morningside star under the record. Captain Dieges's watch at the finish showed 2:06:13 1-5. The times on the other watches were 2:06:15 and 2:06:08 3-5.

The distance Plant covered in the two-hour limit was carefully noted by a corps of admirers and officials, who urged the young Morningside pedestrian on his record-making journey. George P. Matthews, official handicapper of the Metropolitan A. A. U., was on the scene to record the distance officially in order to submit the application for record recognition to the A. A. U. leaders at the coming convention. Matthews, after the race, secured a steel tape and had the distance measured off accurately, showing 14 miles, 430 yards and 6 inches. Plant's time when he made this record, near the end of the first lap on the fifteenth mile, was 2:00:4 1-5.

Third Title of Season.

Plant's achievement yesterday furnishes a climax to his greatest year of competition since he started his career. This is the third title he has captured. Plant defeated a representative field in the national senior three-mile championship at Philadelphia in September, and, a fortnight ago, annexed the national seven-mile title. An unfortunate accident deprived Plant of a fourth title, the local senior three-mile wreath, which the three-time champion had within his grasp in the annual title games last August when he collapsed.

Plant's victory recalled to mind a race over a similar distance two years ago, when the Morningside walker, with victory and a record within his grasp, collapsed about 100 yards from the finish line, allowing Eddie Renz of the New York A. C. to come on and take the race in the record time of 2:07:17 3-5. In this race Plant hung up his two-hour record which was erased yesterday. Renz was on the scene yesterday, but only as a spectator. He was one of the leaders in the applause which greeted the olive-skinned champion as he trotted over the grass inclosure, after crossing the finish line with his third title of the year.

The race was conducted under the auspices of the Walkers' Club of America on the quarter-mile cinderpath at Macomb's Dam Park. A crowd of about 5,000 watched the pedestrians as they plodded on their fifteen-mile journey. This crowd was contained in every available vantage point in and about the park. The small grandstand which was installed this year at the insistence of Frederick W. Rubien, was choked with humanity. About the wooden railing surrounding the track crowds stood in a solid ring which at some points was three and four deep. On the viaduct overhead and immediately overlooking the 100-yard straightaway of the track was another wall of solid humanity, watching impassively as the race progressed.

Conditions Not Ideal.

Plant made his record performance under conditions which could have been better if they were to deserve the term ideal. A chill, penetrating wind blew over the track, preventing perspiration on the part of the walkers and the looseness of action which comes with perspiration. Many of the walkers were retarded in their efforts, some of them retiring from the race because of stiffness. A field of fifteen got away from the starting mark, but only eight finished within the time limit of 2 hours 30 minutes. Morris Lipston was the ninth man over the line, his time being 2:32:37 1-5.

Included in the field of starters was the veteran pedestrian Jim Hocking, who was walking when the fathers of some of yesterday's competitors were young men. The veteran, togged out in cross-country walking costume, could not keep up with the young blood and, after the first mile, just went around the track at a leisurely pace, more for the exercise than anything else. Jim's gray head was bobbing to the swing of his stride three miles back of young Plant when the latter crossed the finish line to win his third championship.

In the scramble for positions with the starting signal, Louis Labowitz of the Pastime A. C., former Metropolitan three-mile champion, was the successful bidder and headed the field on the first turn of the 15-mile race. Labowitz went away at a fast pace with Plant in hot pursuit and the remainder of the peds straggling after. The first mile was turned with Labowitz leading in 7:57 4-5. The Pastime walker dropped back of the pace in the next mile, and Morris Lipston of the Morningside A. C. was checked off in front at the second mile, the time being 16:40 2-5. On the next mile Labowitz again assumed the leadership, going around the cinder path at a pace which made his style appear more like skipping than straight heel and toe walking. Labowitz's time as he led at the third mile, about ten yards in front of Plant, was 25:00 1-5.

Labowitz in Lead.

Labowitz retained the leadership for the next five miles, gradually picking up ground on Plant and making the latters' admirers apprehensive of the result. Spectators lost track of the other starters, who were strung out all over the track, and gave their attention to Plant's pursuit of Labowitz. The Pastime walker passed the fourth mile about twenty-five yards in front of the champion, in 33:10 1-5. At the fifth and sixth miles Labowitz had a lead of one-quarter of a lap on his rival, the respective times being 41:20 1-5 and 49:43. Plant picked up considerable ground in the next mile, trailing Labowitz by a margin of about fifty yards, the time being 58:13, and in the eighth mile Labowitz's margin was cut to twenty-five yards, the time being 1 hour 6 minutes 38 4-5 seconds.

Plant here increased his pace and gained ground with every stride. On the backstretch of the first lap on the ninth mile he came abreast of Labowitz, and the two walked shoulder to shoulder for a space of fifteen yards. Labowitz then went off in a short spurt, which carried him to the front by ten yards, with Plant, smiling confidently now, in hot pursuit. On the next round of the track there was no change in positions, but on the third lap of the ninth mile Plant put on steam and took the lead from his rival. Labowitz's race ended then and there, for his pace slowed perceptibly, while Plant went away on a burst which carried him far ahead of the Brazilian Cross wearer. Plant was the leader for the ninth and tenth miles, his time being, respectively, 1:15:14 1-5 and 1:23:47 4-5. The pace at which the leader went over this part of the race forced Labowitz far to the rear, and, on the first lap of the eleventh mile, when he was within twenty-five yards of being lapped, Labowitz retired from the race and left Plant to pursue his record chase.

Plant's time for the eleventh mile was 1:32:20 1-5; the twelfth, 1:40:55; the thirteenth, 1:49:29 4-5, and the fourteenth, 1:57:57 2-5. Plant never slackened his pace to the finish, and, as he crossed the line, he was leading M. Greenberg, Pastime A. C., and E. Gruenberg, Walkers' Club of America, by more than two laps.

DONOHUE WINS ROAD RUN.

Has Ten-Yard Margin at Finish of St. Mary's C. U. Race.

A strong closing effort gave Jack Donohue of the Mohawk A. C. a victory yesterday in the opening handicap road race of the Bronx Athletic League, conducted over a course of more than five miles, under the auspices of the St. Mary's Catholic Union. Donohue started with a handicap allowance of three minutes, and covered the distance in the actual time of 32 minutes and 55 seconds. At the finish the Mohawk runner enjoyed an advantage of about ten yards on A. Saccamanno of the St. Francis Catholic Union, who started off the 3:30 mark and covered the course in the actual time of 33:27.

Donohue made all his running in the closing mile. He had been forced to follow a stiff pace set by the limit handicap starters who alternated in the lead up to the four-mile mark, when Donohue forged to the front and engaged Saccamanno in a battle for the premier prize. The two ran on even terms for a time, but the Mohawk runner possessed the greater amount of reserve strength, and as the finish line hove in sight threw all his energy into one closing spurt. The effort landed Donohue home in front by ten yards.

The order of finish follows:

Comment on Current Events in Sports

Gotham's Gridiron Feasts.

New York football fans have seldom, if ever, in the past been provided with football fare of a quality equal to that which has been served them this season at the Polo Grounds. In the Cornell-Dartmouth, Syracuse-Rutgers, and Dartmouth-Pennsylvania games, this city has witnessed three of the important games among Eastern college teams and has shown by the size of the attendance on each occasion that it is almost as good a football town as it is a baseball. The Dartmouth-Penn game of Saturday drew a crowd conservatively estimated at 30,000, and those who were there were repaid by seeing one of the most sensationally exciting games of this or any other season.

But New York still has ahead of it the most picturesque gridiron battle of the year. Other games may have greater importance than that between the Army and Navy from a purely football standpoint, but none, not even the Yale-Harvard, Princeton-Yale, and Harvard-Princeton games, can transcend it in the general interest it arouses and in the unique and stirring character of its attendant features. To watch West Point and Annapolis rooters in their manoeuvres before the game starts and in their cheering evolutions during and after the combat is to see a whole show in itself, and an exceedingly novel and brilliant show into the bargain.

As for this year's game itself, it bids fair to be much closer than seemed likely at the beginning of the season. Coach Daly had to build up his Army eleven from green material and it required a considerable time before he could weld it into a strong attacking force. Meanwhile, the Navy was running up impressive scores against the North Carolina Aggies, Johns Hopkins, Bucknell, and West Virginia Wesleyan, and seemed to have arrived at a much more advanced stage of development.

The Midshipmen's defeat by Georgetown on Saturday, though not without encouragement for the supporters of the team in the work of the line, and occasionally its revelation of ability on the attack, nevertheless indicated that the two service elevens are not so far apart as seemed to be the case a few weeks ago. The Army was beaten, too, on Saturday, but at the same time showed a continuance of the slow but steady improvement that has characterized its progress from week to week throughout the season. Coach Daly has evidently been willing to work gradually toward the one great goal of his season.

All of which is merely to state that the game at the Polo Grounds on Nov. 29 is sure to be a battle royal, replete in good football, and, so far as can be judged at the present stage of the proceedings, with the chances even. New York has been lucky in the other games played here this Fall, not only at the Polo Grounds but at South and Ohio Fields, but it is luckiest of all in giving home and hospitality to the most picturesque of them all, when the Army mule steps into the ring for his annual fight to a finish with the Navy goat.

Cross-Country Running.

Another potential contender for intercollegiate championship laurels topped the crest of the cross-country hill Saturday when Coach Tom Keane's Syracuse University quintet romped away with the national A. A. U. junior championship. The Salt City quintet in its victory demonstrated that the monopoly enjoyed in the past by Cornell in this particular branch of collegiate sport is more than ever endangered. With John Simmons and Lewis Watson as the nucleus for its team, the up-State university is expected to show its greatest strength in the renewal of the intercollegiate title race at Van Cortlandt Park two weeks hence.

Saturday's victory left nothing to be desired. The Salt City aggregation outclassed six strong metropolitan clubs in its title chase, and in a manner that left no room for doubt. The team showed a recovery after its setback at the hands of Princeton in the open collegiate race conducted at Syracuse two weeks ago, and demonstrated further that it is best adapted to the six-mile course. Simmons and Watson are the leading figures on the team and are expected to carry the Orange to victory in the supreme test that is to come.

Pennsylvania, Dartmouth, and Columbia will not figure seriously in the coming title race unless the teams are strengthened considerably before the day of the test. These three colleges clashed in a triangular run a few hours before the A. A. U. championships. A comparison of the races furnishes additional strength for the belief that Syracuse will provide the principal contender in the forthcoming title race. Lawson Robertson's Red and Blue team did not impress as being capable of defending the title which went to Penn in the last championship race two years ago. Penn beat Columbia and Dartmouth easily enough, but the Red and Blue leader, W. R. Cummings, winner of the race, was hard pressed throughout to win in 0:38:45, 44 2-5 seconds slower than the time made by Simmons in the A. A. U. race.

Coach Keane, with a triumphant expression of delight lighting up his ruddy countenance after the race, declared himself satisfied with Syracuse's prospects. The up-State coach has adhered to his policy of training his men over the distances best suited to them at intervals calculated to keep the material in trim. He has his reward in the team's success, but he predicts that the biggest success is yet to come. Coach Keane will give his attention now to preparing his cross-country material for the impending championship race, which will result in a Syracuse victory if the Salt City mentor's expectations are realized.

No Third League in Sight.

The internal strife in the American League has reached the point where reports are heard that the anti-Johnson faction is discussing the advisability of breaking away from the parent body and launching a third major league. Some of the rumors have had such an organization in the process of formation, but it is not likely that the Ruppert-Comiskey-Frazee combination is seriously considering any such move. There is no denying that the three are as well equipped for third league purposes as any three club owners who might be picked in the two major leagues, but all three are business men first, club owners second.

Plain business sense teaches that there is no room for a third league, and the owners of the American League franchises in New York, Chicago, and Boston realize this fact fully. The Federal League bloomer dispelled the last doubt on this score, and it is not reasonable to suppose that shrewd business men will attempt to disprove the lesson taught by the war of that ill-fated organization against the two major leagues. There are not enough players to fill the teams of two leagues with the high-class talent desired, and until the supply becomes much more plentiful than at present a third league would be "major" only in the hopes of its promoters.

Further difficulties present themselves in the arrangement of a circuit that would be of major league proportions, the purchase of suitable sites for parks, the costliness of fitting up parks and in numerous lesser details. A war would be welcomed by the players who would profit in the battle for talent, with the resultant abnormal salaries. Such a war would entail the expenditure of millions by the anti-Johnson triumvirate and the other club owners and it is a certainty that the owners have had enough of this business. The men who have been reported as likely to start the big war now control franchises that are more valuable than any they might expect to control in a baseball war.

The triumvirate has mapped out a course of procedure far different than any which would entail a break from the American League and the launching of a new organization. They may be blocked here and there in their efforts to readjust conditions which have brought about the big fight, but it is safe to assume that they will ultimately force certain concessions that will help the sport. The insurgents carry more real strength than might be imagined with five club owners arrayed against three, and there is no likelihood of a backdown on their part. Nor is there the slightest likelihood of their going to the extreme foolishness of trying to prove their case by starting a third major league.

Racing in Maryland.

With the convening in January of the newly elected Legislature in Maryland, racing will again have to make a fight for its existence in that State. Every two years the sport comes up for a test of this kind, as its lease on life runs from one meeting of the legislative body to another. In past years it has come through successfully, though the issue has always been hotly contested.

The racing associations in Maryland expect to have the sport continued again, and this time they will go before the Legislature better prepared to make a good fight, for now they unquestionably have the support of the public as they have never had it before. It is also the general belief that enough liberal-minded men of all parties have been elected to the Legislature this year to insure support for the organizations.

Racing has probably never attained greater popularity in Maryland than this year, and especially with the Autumn meetings now in progress. The various organizations which control Havre de Grace, Bowie, Laurel, and Pimlico have brought to Maryland the very finest horses in the country now in training and have provided the best sport the racegoers have seen in many years. The present meeting at Pimlico has rivaled Saratoga for excellence of the daily cards, the distribution of money in purses having attracted the top-notch performers. The attendance has been evidence of the popularity of the sport with the public. Pimlico has lacked accommodations for all those who wished to see the sport. Should racing be continued with the consent of the Legislature it is quite probable that improvements will be made to take care of larger crowds at future meetings, the attendance this season having been beyond the expectations of the racing officials.

The Boom in Billiards.

Of all the sports that have vaulted back to the sporting trail this year there is no comeback that has been more complete than that of billiards. The pressure of war was keenly felt by this branch of sport, but it is now galloping along the thickly populated avenues of recreation with all its pre-war zest and reveling in all its old-time prestige and enthusiasm. Although the season is scarcely a month old, tournament play, both amateur and professional, is in full swing. Competition is the backbone of any sport, and in this respect billiards is enjoying a greater popularity than it has ever before known.

With two amateur associations—the National Association of Amateur Billiard Players and the American Amateur Billiard Association—in the field, considerable activity has already been manifested, and the immediate future will see this greatly increased. With tournaments arranged for players of all grades of ability, in all styles of play from the novice to the man with a perfected stroke, a welcome impetus has been given the sport.

No small measure of this drive can be attributed to the tournaments for the professional players in balk line, three cushion, and pocket billiards. These events are just what the sport needed truly to rehabilitate it. The amateur player always is keen to see the professional in action, for he believes that he can absorb a quantity of knowledge from watching the pro do things at the table. Following this he is anxious to try his own hand. There is not a doubt that this has been largely responsible for the unprecedented rush of entries for the various amateur tournaments that are being held or will be staged in this city.

It is doubtful whether any individual sport boasts of as many actual players as billiards. It is generally admitted that no man is a billiard fan unless he plays the game. He does not have to be an expert. His playing may be no better than mediocre. As a matter of fact, some of the most enthusiastic of the clan who follow the cue are the players who are far from being proficient, but who entertain fond hopes of some day mastering the intricacies of the game. The interest in the different events that have been held is conclusive proof of the growing popularity of the sport. Never before have the galleries been as big as they have been thus far this season.

Starting with the national 18.2 balkline billiard championship tournament in this city, there has been every indication that billiards has been launched upon the biggest season in its hectic history. Some of the biggest crowds on record watched Willie Hoppe scale the heights again, and the crowds that have witnessed the various games in the district tourneys and amateur championship events have been proportionately big.

There is no doubt that the district tournaments have had a great deal to do with the growth of the sport. These district tournaments, in all styles from straight rail to the more intricate balkline enable every ambitious player in the Greater City to test his cue strength against men of like ability and the fact that the winners in the different districts compete for metropolitan honors has furnished the needed incentive to bring the players out in great numbers.

The different room tournaments and club events have also contributed liberally to increasing the army of billiard supporters. All of these factors indicate this season as being the biggest competitive year in the annals of the sport.

BUSY WEEK IN BILLIARDS.

Class C Tourneys in Both Amateur Bodies Will Be in Progress.

This will be one of the busiest weeks in billiards that this city has experienced in some time. Two Class C 18.2 balkline metropolitan championship tournaments will get under way and there will be several match games in which more than passing interest will be centred. Both the National Association of Amateur Billiard Players and the American Amateur Billiard Association, rival organizations, will have their Class C events in full swing. The former will hold its tourney at the Rational Recreation Academy in Brooklyn and the latter will continue its tourney at Fuller's Academy.

Several games have already been played in the A. A. B. A. event which started last Thursday night and competition will be resumed tonight. Some excellent billiards has been shown by the amateurs who are seeking the metropolitan title under this organization, and with more of the prominent players moving into action this week the sport should be of the best.

The National Association of Amateur Billiard Players will start its event in Brooklyn tonight with some of the best players in this district entered. The list of those who will compete includes Ferdinand A. Unger, the former national champion; Robert J. Steinbugler, recent winner of the Metropolitan Handicap; Louis Servatius, the veteran amateur of Manhattan; Sidney Brussel, Frank Boyd, Charles Steinbugler, runner-up to his cousin in the Metropolitan Handicap, and a field of others of ability.

C. Danielson, Graduate Manager of Athletics. The Blue and White will play the usual quota of ten games in the league competition, besides a number of preliminary contests, the dates of which were not announced. The Columbia season will close at Ithaca on March 9.

The league schedule is as follows: Saturday, Jan. 10, Yale at Columbia; Friday, Jan. 16, Princeton at Columbia; Saturday, Feb. 7, Dartmouth at Dartmouth; Thursday, Feb. 12, (Alumni Day,) Penn at Columbia; Wednesday, Feb. 18, Columbia at Yale; Saturday, Feb. 21, Dartmouth at Columbia; Wednesday, Feb. 25, Columbia at Penn; Saturday, Feb. 28, Cornell at Columbia; Friday, March 5, Columbia at Princeton; Tuesday, March 9, Columbia at Cornell.

The Columbia five will begin practice on Nov. 17 under the direction of Fred Dawson, who coached last year's team. Four of the five regulars of that quintet have returned to the university. They are Captain Tommy Farrell, right forward; Tynan, left forward; Johnson, the negro centre, and Sam Weinstein, left guard. Frank Kiendl, brother of the former Blue and White star, will be the only player missing.

He took the cup with a card of 94 out of a possible 100 targets. The winner scored a leg on the Buermeyer Cup, a 50-target scratch event, with a total of 48. D. I. SQUASH EXPERTS IN ACTION THIS WEEK

Leading Players to Appear in Tournament Starting at the Yale Club Today.

Squash tennis will get away to a running start this afternoon, when an invitation tournament with forty-five leading players entered opens the season of 1919 at the Yale Club. Play will begin at 4 P. M. on all four of the club's courts, and matches will be scheduled every forty-five minutes until 6:15.

It is planned to finish the tournament in five afternoons of play, Monday the 10th, Wednesday the 12th, Saturday the 15th, Tuesday the 18th, and Friday the 21st. This will bring the final round on the day before the Yale-Princeton football game, and a large crowd will probably be on hand to witness the finish, particularly if representatives of the rival universities should happen to occupy the last bracket.

With only a few exceptions, the entry list of the coming event is thoroughly representative of the entire field of Class A squash tennis. National Champion John W. Appel, Jr., had intended to play, but was, unfortunately, incapacitated by a bad fall a few days ago while practicing at the Harvard Club. He injured his right wrist severely, but expects to bet back into shape in time to defend his title later in the season.

The majority of last year's "first ten," however, will be found in the draw, the list including Donald Mackay, Livingston Platt, Harold Tobey, F. S. Keeler, Frank Kidde and Kenneth Bulkley. Of the ranking experts who failed to enter the select circle last season because of their absence in the service, Charles M. Bull, Jr., A. J. Cordier and R. E. T. Riggs are celebrating their reentry into competition play by taking part in the Yale Club's invitation event.

Today's matches will bring together only those drawn in the preliminary round. Among the significant encounters will be those of E. W. Putnam of the Columbia University Club and E. J. Clapp of Yale, William Adams, Jr., of Yale, and Irving H. Cornell of Columbia, A. D. Mittendorf of Princeton and A. H. Eils of the Harvard Club, Otis Guernsey of Yale and M. F. Torrance of the Crescent Athletic Club, Harold Tobey of Princeton and F. B. Shaw of Columbia, F. W. Chambers of Columbia and H. R. Mixsell of Yale, and Clyde Martin of Yale and E. M. Bull, Jr., of the Squash Club.

On Wednesday afternoon the actual first round will be played, and, among others, H. W. Harvey of Princeton will meet R. E. T. Riggs of the Squash Club, with F. S. Keller of Columbia drawn against D. S. Baker of Yale, R. E. Wigham of Columbia against Livingston Platt of Yale, Douglas Bomeisler of Yale against J. W. Pulleyn of Columbia, Alan L. Corey of Yale against Frank Kidde of Columbia, the New Jersey State champion, and A. J. Cordier of Yale against H. Duncan Bulkley of the Columbia Club.

Rudolph Goipel of the Greenwich Field Club and G. L. Catlin of the Bridgeport Athletic Club are among the out-of-town entries, while both the New York A. C. and the Crescent A. C. are well represented. A. G. Blaisdell, Chairman of the Yale Club Squash Committee, as well as of the Schedule Committee of the Metropolitan League, believes that the response of the squash players to invitations for the coming tourney indicates a record-breaking season to come.

MINOR LEAGUERS ON WAY.

Al Tearney Prepared to Fight Against Restoration of Draft.

CHICAGO, Nov. 9.—Presidents and club owners of the several Western minor leagues left here tonight in a special car to attend the annual convention of the National Association of Minor Leagues, which opens in Springfield, Mass., Tuesday, continuing for three days.

Any attempt to restore the draft, which gave the major leagues the privilege of obtaining the star players of the minors each Fall, will be fought, according to A. R. Tearney, President of the Three I and Western Leagues, who effected the break between the minors and majors a year ago over the draft issue.

We hear that "John, the old-clothes man" is having a hard time to get "hand-me-downs"; that where it was possible before the war to get four or five suits from the average family, he's lucky now if he gets one or two.

Now he's patiently wearing them out!

(The writer's two year old tweed jollied up so well in the hands of the cleaners that even his family thought it was new!)

Notwithstanding, our stores just hum with the demand for fine clothing.

Must be that old friends are spreading the gospel of spending money wisely. Many thanks.

LEONARD SEEKS KNOCKOUT.

Hopes to Put Bartfield to Sleep in Tonight's Bout in Jersey City.

Benny Leonard, lightweight champion, will strive for a knockout victory over Soldier Bartfield, sturdy Brooklyn welterweight, when the pair clash for eight rounds this evening at the Arena, in the Fourth Regiment Armory, Jersey City. The champion declared himself in excellent condition yesterday after concluding his training, and expressed confidence that he would score a knockout over his rugged opponent. Bartfield also wound up his preparatory work yesterday and announced that he expected to make things interesting for Leonard over the eight-round route. Leonard and Bartfield were rivals several months ago in a six-round bout in Philadelphia, which the champion won on points. Bartfield proved an elusive and awkward target in that match.

This bout will be one of three eight-round contests which Promoter Dave Driscoll has arranged. In another match Johnny Dundee, the Italian lightweight, who knocked out Tommy Touhey last week, will exchange blows with Mel Coogan, a Brooklyn lightweight. This match has attracted unusual attention, according to the promoters.

Al Roberts, Staten Island heavyweight, and Dan O'Dowd, a Boston heavyweight, will be opponents in the other eight-round session. O'Dowd made his first appearance in New Jersey at the Arena several weeks ago when he stood off Bill Brennan for eight rounds. His gameness in this bout gained him many admirers. Danny Sullivan and Harry Ertle have been engaged to referee, alternating with each bout.

POWERFUL GRIDIRON MACHINES OF HARVARD, COLGATE AND DARTMOUTH ARE STILL UNBEATEN

FIVE TEAMS REMAIN IN UNBEATEN RANKS

MANY UPSETS ON SATURDAY

Princeton's Showing and the Defeats of Navy, West Virginia, and Wesleyan Are Surprises.

The football games of Saturday left three of the leading Eastern elevens still undefeated for the 1919 season, with each of the trio having figured in a tie game. Dartmouth, Colgate, and Harvard are the colleges thus distinguished above their fellows, but what the next week or two will do to their records no one hesitates to predict with any positive assurance, so many have been the upsets and unexpected turns of this most surprising of seasons. Of the smaller elevens Stevens and New Hampshire State remain undefeated.

Of Saturday's quota of surprises, the greatest, of course, was Princeton's remarkable showing against the Crimson. Battered from pillar to post, held almost even by Lafayette, beaten by Colgate and crushed by West Virginia, few had expected Princeton to do more than put up a game fight against its unbeaten adversary and to keep the score reasonably low. Yet Princeton fought so well, and developed such unlooked-for skill, that it all but had Harvard beaten up to the last few minutes of play, and finished on even terms with an eleven that in advance of the game was anywhere from a 1 to 2 to a 1 to 4 favorite. But that is football as it is played in this year of grace, 1919.

Two hitherto undefeated elevens traveled the rough road of defeat Saturday. The Navy had been expected to conquer Georgetown, but fell before the more versatile attack of the Southerners, who were able to turn two field goals into victory. The margin of superiority between Washington and Jefferson, which also had a clean slate previous to Saturday, and Warner's Pittsburghers was the smallest possible, that of a goal from touchdown, scored by Pittsburgh, and this game afforded a good example of the unreliability of comparative scores. W. and J. had beaten Syracuse 21 to 0, and Syracuse had defeated Pittsburgh 24 to 3, a turn of events which seems once more to establish the fact that the only certain thing about present-day football is its uncertainty. Pittsburgh is due to go through another severe trial this week in its game with Pennsylvania, and if it comes through that ordeal successfully it will also have to be reckoned among the season's leaders, despite its setback at the hands of Syracuse.

How Schedules Differ.

As things stand at present, the honors rest among Colgate, Dartmouth, and Harvard, with the preponderance of credit, because of the more difficult schedules they have played, belonging to the first two. Aside from Brown, Princeton is the only foe worthy of her standing among the Eastern colleges that Harvard has thus far encountered, and Harvard could do no better than be a team which Colgate had defeated and West Virginia had smothered.

Between Colgate and Dartmouth there is still little or nothing to choose. Both have the record of playing four of the strongest elevens of the East on successive Saturdays and of coming through with three victories and one tie game with each other. Colgate defeated Brown, Cornell, and Princeton, and Dartmouth vanquished Penn State, Cornell, and Pennsylvania, in addition to the 7 to 7 game between themselves. On paper it looks as though both would finish the season without defeat. Colgate will be the favorite against Syracuse next Saturday, though Syracuse is pointed for that game more than any other of the season, and the contest is sure to be a heroic struggle. Dartmouth will play Brown, and, unless the Green team encounters a slump after its strenuous battling of the last month it should win by a fairly comfortable margin, even without the services of its injured half back, Robertson. Princeton deserves a world of credit for its splendid play in the spectacular game at Palmer Stadium. In the shape of a double defeat, Princeton spirit found still a spark that almost flamed into a victory. With a showing like that, Princeton's football year, whatever may betide later, cannot be said to be a failure. Coach Roper evidently taught his charges much in the week before the Harvard game, and has proved his right to a full and fair trial at the helm of Orange and Black football. But Harvard, with Casey, could not lose. Of all the many stars of this brilliant season, none is more versatile, none is more indomitable, than this same Casey. He and his team matched than Penn and Dartmouth could hardly have been found, and the end of the most spectacular game of the year found the margin between them the most minute possible. Dartmouth outpunted Penn and gained nearly twice as much ground by rushing, but Penn had a decisive superiority in the matter of forward passing. In fact, Penn had probably the most perfectly devised and executed forward passing attack of any that has been displayed this year. As in its Penn State and Colgate games, Dartmouth again displayed a highly courageous ability to come from behind, but Penn also showed a magnificent spirit of refusal to accept defeat until the final whistle was blown. Winning by the hair-line margin of a goal from touchdown, Dartmouth still has the call over Penn on the comparative showings for the entire season. The Green looked like a better team that in the stress of a hard campaign, had gone a trifle stale.

Like the Navy eleven, the Army encountered an unexpected defeat on Saturday, administered by Notre Dame. Its failure to solve the Westerners' aerial assaults is being responsible for the result. The Army seems to be coming along slowly but quite as strongly however as its traditional rival, and, in addition to the line-smashing ability which he has developed among his charges, Coach Daly will undoubtedly be able to acquaint the cadets with the possibilities of overhead work. Next the Army playing Villanova this week, and the Navy meeting Colby, both should be able to continue their steady progress without the interruption of too serious opposition.

In the only other East vs. West encounter of Saturday, Tufts defeated the Detroit University eleven, 7 to 3. Tufts will go to Cambridge this week-end to give Harvard its final workout before the Crimson's game with Yale. Cornell, with Shivrick in his usual stellar role, displayed a good punch in its attack against Carnegie Tech and gave encouragement to its supporters in their hope of a good showing against Penn. Syracuse, which is next on the Quakers' schedule with victories over Pennsylvania and Lehigh to its credit, Penn State will have the advance dope in its favor in that contest.

Comparative Scores Puzzle.

Amherst's unexpected defeat of the previously unbeaten and unscored-upon Wesleyan team presents another curious instance of football topsy-turvisdom. Williams beat Columbia, 25 to 0; Columbia beat Amherst, 9 to 7; Wesleyan defeated Williams, 14 to 6, and now Amherst turns about and conquers Wesleyan, 9 to 7. Anyone who can gather much nourishment from that exhibition of comparative scores is welcome to the meal. Wesleyan will play Columbia this week and Williams will meet Amherst, and it is quite possible that the resulting complications will tie things up into an even more puzzling knot.

Stevens delivered a crushing blow to Columbia's hopes and placed the stamp of failure upon the season of Coach Dawson's charges, which only a wholly improbable conquest of Wesleyan and N. Y. U. can obliterate. The victory of the Hoboken engineers was well earned, for they clearly outplayed Columbia and demonstrated that they knew more football. Columbia always seems at a loss to pick the right play at the right moment, a faculty which has been well developed by Coach Durburow in the Stevens outfit. Stevens's record for the season is still unmarred by defeat.

When Stevens meets New York University next Saturday a plenitude of action is sure to be provided. N. Y. U. has progressed steadily in the last few weeks, reaching its highest point of development Saturday in its impressive 17 to 0 defeat of Union, which had previously held Columbia to a scoreless tie. Comparative scores, taking into account Stevens's 13 to 0 victory over Columbia, point to an even match at Ohio Field next Saturday, and in this instance all the dope as to the condition and football ability of the two teams points the same way.

Mountaineers Strike Snag.

West Virginia, conqueror of Princeton the preceding week by the overwhelming score of 25 to 0, added still one more to the long list of 1919 upsets when it fell before the unheralded eleven from Centre College, Kentucky. Truly, football ability is well distributed throughout the country this year, and the excellent work that is being accomplished in the South and Middle West is a fine thing for the sport. If such a thing as a series of intersectional matches could be played it is by no means certain, as once it would have been, that the East would emerge victorious.

Rutgers defeated Boston College in a scrappy game and Syracuse won the verdict over Bucknell. Colgate's defeat of Rochester and Lafayette's triumph over Dickinson were as readily achieved as had been anticipated.

There are now no Eastern elevens which have not been scored on this season. Harvard, Washington and Jefferson, and Wesleyan were eliminated from that category last Saturday.

Holy Name Five Wins Again.

With a victory over the Macombs A. C. basket ball quintet by a score of 49 to 18, the Holy Name Big Five won its fourth straight victory at the Manhattan Casino yesterday afternoon. The Holy Name team completely outplayed its opponents, especially in the matter of team-work. The Cathedral Club will be Holy Name's adversary next Sunday in a game that will be played on the same court.

OHIO STILL LEADS CONFERENCE TEAMS

Illinois Second and Chicago Third in Race for Football Crown of "Big Ten."

CHICAGO, Nov. 9.—The undefeated Ohio State eleven, with the scalps of Michigan and Purdue dangling from its belt, tonight is a notch nearer the "Big Ten" football championship, with Illinois trailing in second place and Chicago pulling up in third. Wisconsin and Iowa, with two victories out of three games to their credit, are tied for fourth place. Illinois has won four of its five games, while Chicago has won three out of four.

Victorious over Purdue in a 20 to 0 game yesterday, the speedy Ohioans will face their crucial battles of the championship drive next Saturday and a week later, meeting Wisconsin and Illinois, respectively. The Ohioans were given a bit of a scare by Purdue Saturday, and only the prowess of Captain Chick Harley enabled them to romp away with the game. Harley had been kept on the side lines to avoid a possible injury, which might keep him out of the Wisconsin game, but was called into the contest at the start of the second period to pave the way for victory.

While yesterday's games were without startling upsets, the 10 to 0 victory of Illinois over Minnesota was regarded as a surprise. Beaten in three periods of the game, Illinois staged a fighting rally in the fourth, and two brothers, Robert and Ralph Fletcher, proved to be the heroes of the Illinois triumph. Ralph Fletcher was called into the game as a substitute and made a beautiful field goal from the 24-yard line that gave Illinois the victory. His brother had previously crashed through the Minnesota line for a touchdown.

Chicago's 13 to 0 triumph over Michigan in the renewal of traditional gridiron rivalry between these historic foes was gained through the ability of the Maroons to use the forward pass. The smoothly-working Iowa eleven gave Northwestern its fourth straight defeat, winning 14 to 7. The Hawkeye clash with Chicago next Saturday in the first game between Iowa and the Maroons for several years. Iowa's eleven is rated as one of the best developed at that institution in recent years, having beaten Minnesota and Nebraska.

Football throughout the Western Conference is enjoying a remarkable comeback, both financially and in playing quality, from the wartime setback of a year ago.

MISS MOLLER WINS TITLE.

Defeats Miss Stack in Final Tennis Match at Hoboken.

Miss Marguerite Moller won the women's championship of the Hoboken Tennis Club yesterday afternoon on the club courts across the river by defeating Miss Tessie Stack in the final round in two hard-fought sets, 6—4, 9—8. Both women played good tennis, the decision in the second and deciding set resting largely upon a question of endurance. Miss Stack handled her more experienced opponent's drives and well directed shots for placement with surprising skill and was herself able to find the openings in Miss Moller's court with remarkable frequency. Miss Moller had just enough of a margin of superiority in court generalship and staying power to enable her to win, after Miss Stack had tied up the second set and needed only a point on several occasions to turn the tide the other way.

This was the last tournament of the season for the Hoboken Club, and, at the end of this week the courts will be closed until Spring.

FAST HEAT ON SPEEDWAY.

Grace Worthy Trots Best Half Mile on Course Since 1917.

The fastest half-mile trotted on the Harlem Speedway in two years was recorded yesterday by J. J. Morris's brown mare, Grace Worthy, in capturing the 1:08 trot at the fifth matinee of the Road Drivers' Association. Grace Worthy took this class in straight heats, leading home J. P. Kennedy's Starlight McKinney and A. Bruno's Bruno in order. The Morris mare gave her greatest demonstration of form in the first brush down the half-mile stretch.

Grace Worthy got away poorly and did not hit her stride until the second quarter. Here the Morris mare overtook her rivals, and in a brilliant burst of speed flashed past the judges' stand winner by about a neck over Starlight McKinney, in 1:02. The officials who held the watches on her estimated that Grace Worthy covered the closing quarter in 28 seconds. The mare's time for the half-mile was the fastest recorded since J. Murphy's Marion Toddington trotted the distance in 1:01 two years ago. In the second brush Grace Worthy got away well and led all the way, winning in 1:04.

A. Albano carried off a brace of ribbons in the course of the day's sport. Albano piloted his brown gelding, Kelly Dare, to a straight-heat victory in the 1:10 trot, and came back later to guide Mystic Wilkes to a two-heat success in the 1:15 pacing event.

Long Life—

The ability of a motor truck to stand the gaff—to do and endure is caused by little things. It's loyalty that prompts the workman to give the nut the last twist that makes it stay—that makes the carpenter give the nail one final blow that puts it there for keeps—that makes a man spend ten more minutes on a carburetor adjustment to save dollars for an owner. That Bethlehem loyalty to the Bethlehem product is no small measure the reason for Bethlehem Long Life.

Bethlehem Dependability is founded on scientifically correct design, scrupulously selected and rigorously tested materials, and skilled workmanship that has behind it that indefinable loyalty that adds miles to the day's run and cuts dollars from the upkeep costs.

Bethlehem Motor Trucks are not built down to a price nor up to justify a price. Thousands of Bethlehem owners know that Bethlehem Dependable Delivery means efficient transportation at the lowest transportation costs. Buy your Motor Truck on Facts.

COMPANY REMOVES TOLEDO STREET CARS

RIDERS FOUGHT CENT RISE

Special to The New York Times.

TOLEDO, Ohio, Nov. 9.—With all street cars taken off the streets and removed to points across the State line into Michigan, Toledo manufacturers are pondering tonight what means of transportation they can use to get employes to their places tomorrow morning. Even interurban cars cannot enter the city, as power is cut off.

Removal of the street cars was the result of sudden and secret action by the Toledo Railways & Light Company, a subsidiary of the Cities Service Company, of which Henry L. Doherty of New York is President. The cars were taken off about 1:30 o'clock this morning. Not only the cars in active operation, but even the open Summer cars, snow sweepers and other traffic paraphernalia were taken off.

When operation is to be resumed is most problematical, traction and city officials say tonight. A number of large manufacturers have planned to use busses in the morning to transport workers to their plants.

The sudden removal of the street cars from the streets was taken when the company late Saturday afternoon learned the official vote on the ouster ordinance submitted to the people at last Tuesday's election. This ordinance was carried by 811 votes. The ordinance was passed by Council last June, when the company raised its fares from 5 to 6 cents and 2 cents extra for transfers. The company has no franchises for street car operation. When Council passed this ouster ordinance it was held in abeyance when the street car company and business men petitioned for a referendum on the ordinance.

Clarence Earl, Vice President of the Willys-Overland Company, declared tonight that his company has obtained 200 busses and automobiles to carry employes to work tomorrow morning. Other large plants will do likewise. Many of the manufacturers, however, will open their plants as usual, but will not assist the employes to get there.

"The workingmen voted for this ouster ordinance, the company has obeyed the mandate, and these same workingmen must now put up with it," many of them assert. There appears to be a general unanimity among manufacturers not to assist workers in getting to the various plants.

Mayor Schreiber and his cabinet held a meeting tonight, but declared they would leave the matter to the Council, which meets tomorrow night. A canvass of Councilmen today elicited the information that eight of them are opposed to repeal of the ordinance. A two-thirds vote, 11, in favor is necessary for the repeal.

Henry L. Doherty left here this morning for Kansas City. Before leaving he issued a statement declaring that the company wished to obey the law of the people, and for this reason took its cars off the streets.

It was not until late in the day that jitney busses began moving to any extent. By nightfall every old automobile, moving truck or other piece of motor vehicle that could be pressed into use was in action on the streets carrying passengers. They charged from 10 cents to 25 cents for rides.

Downtown theatres suffered heavily as a result of the lack of transportation. Retail merchants will meet tomorrow with the Mayor in an effort to bring about a speedy settlement of the street car problem.

Pilgrims to Dine the Prince of Wales

The Pilgrims' society, of which Chauncey M. Depew is president, will entertain the Prince of Wales at a farewell and Godspeed dinner, at the Waldorf-Astoria, on Friday night, Nov. 21, the eve of his departure for home, it was learned yesterday. The dinner will take the place of the one which was to have been given by His Royal Highness on board the battleship Repown, on that evening.

DENIES REPUBLICAN GAINS.

Ohio Returns Give Victory to Democrats, Says Durkin.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—W. W. Durbin, Chairman of the Ohio Democratic Executive Committee, today sent a telegram to Chairman Homer Cummings of the Democratic National Committee, at Washington, challenging the claim of Republican leaders that the result of the elections in Ohio last Tuesday was favorable to the Republican Party.

"Analysis of Tuesday's vote," said the Durbin telegram, "shows clearly a Democratic victory in Ohio. The loss of Cleveland and Columbus to the Republicans in no way changes this for neither hand been hinging on national issues; nor does it indicate any trend toward the G. O. P. Democratic Mayors were elected in Lima, Canton, Portsmouth, Toledo, Steubenville, Norwalk, Findlay, Circleville, Bucyrus, Urbana, Galion, Bellefontaine, Hamilton, St. Marys, Pomeroy, Marietta, and scores of other cities and numberless villages over the State. In these immense Democratic gains were registered.

"The big majority of township officers throughout the State were elected by Democrats, many of them being in townships strongly Republican. In many counties the Democratic gain was tremendous. This is true in many places where the Republican candidates were elected. Compare this with last Fall's returns and it will be ample evidence that Ohio is not only started back toward the Democratic column, but has it has arrived close to the point where it was when it saved the situation in 1911 and made possible a Democratic President for a second term."

Alleged to be short $462 in his accounts, John J. Burke, of South Lynbrook, clerk of the Park Department of Queens, will be arraigned in the Jamaica court today. Park Commissioner Beninger suspended Burke, Friday. Burke is married, has four children and received $1,980 salary.

SEEK JOBS FOR VETERANS.

K. of C. Wants to Place 500 Before Tomorrow, Armistice Day.

The Knights of Columbus sent out an emergency appeal to all employers in the City of New York last night in an effort to place about 500 ex-service men in jobs by tomorrow, Armistice Day. The drive to get employment for 1,000 discharged soldiers and sailors by the first anniversary of the signing of the armistice was begun a week ago Friday and thus far about 500 men have been placed.

Ten K. of C. Secretaries will canvass the city today to find employers for the men now on the waiting list. At the K. of C. Hut in Times Square it was announced last night that there were 400 jobs for men on the list but none of the remaining 500 ex-service men were qualified to accept them.

Congestion of Advertising

The New York Times regrets that it is sometimes necessary to omit advertisements specifically ordered for publication on certain days. The volume of advertising offered The Times is so great that it is frequently impossible to accommodate all, and advertisements are crowded out in order that the space allotted to news may not be encroached upon. Today 17 columns are omitted and 177 columns published.

Why

Nature protects teeth—civilization ruins them. Nature has provided in saliva a perfect guardian of teeth. An ample flow of saliva destroys the poisons of decayed food particles.

The diet of savages—tough, hard food and plenty of raw fruit—does not interfere with the flow of saliva. Civilized diet causes a decrease of saliva.

Strong alkalines increase the danger to teeth by partially paralyzing the salivary glands and exposing teeth to the unchecked ravages of the bacteria of food decay.

Mennen Cream Dentifrice contains a fruit element which stimulates the salivary glands and increases the quantity and quality of saliva, thus aiding Nature to protect your teeth.

A 20% content of alcohol exerts an antiseptic action. Aromatic oils make Mennen's pleasant to use, with a cooling, refreshing after-taste.

Mennen's is economical for it is so concentrated that a half inch or less is sufficient. It costs 35 cents.

LIGHTS ALL ASKEW IN THE HEAVENS

EINSTEIN THEORY TRIUMPHS

Stars Not Where They Seemed or Were Calculated to be, but Nobody Need Worry.

A BOOK FOR 12 WISE MEN

No More in All the World Could Comprehend It, Said Einstein When His Daring Publishers Accepted It.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 9.—Efforts made to put in words intelligible to the non-scientific public the Einstein theory of light proved by the eclipse expedition so far have not been very successful. The new theory was discussed at a recent meeting of the Royal Society and Royal Astronomical Society. Sir Joseph Thomson, President of the Royal Society, declares it is not possible to put Einstein's theory into really intelligible words, yet at the same time Thomson adds:

"The results of the eclipse expedition demonstrating that the rays of light from the stars are bent or deflected from their normal course by other aerial bodies acting upon them and consequently the inference that light has weight form a most important contribution to the laws of gravity given us since Newton laid down his principles."

Thompson states that the difference between theories of Newton and those of Einstein are infinitesimal in a popular sense, and as they are purely mathematical and can only be expressed in strictly scientific terms it is useless to endeavor to detail them for the man in the street.

"What is easily understandable," he continued, "is that Einstein predicted the deflection of the starlight when it passed the sun, and the recent eclipse has provided a demonstration of the correctness of the prediction.

"His second theory as to the anomalous motion of the planet Mercury has also been verified, but his third prediction, which dealt with certain sun lines, is still indefinite."

Asked if recent discoveries meant a reversal of the laws of gravity as defined by Newton, Sir Joseph said they held good for ordinary purposes, but in highly mathematical problems the new conceptions of Einstein, whereby space became warped or curled under certain circumstances, would have to be taken into account.

Vastly different conceptions which are involved in this discovery and the necessity for taking Einstein's theory more into account were voiced by a member of the expedition, who pointed out that it meant, among other things, that two lines normally known as parallel do meet eventually, that a circle is not really circular, that three angles of a triangle do not necessarily make the sum total of two right angles.

"Enough has been said to show the importance of Einstein's theory, even if it cannot be expressed clearly in words," laughed this astronomer.

Dr. W. J. S. Lockyer, another astronomer, said:

"The discoveries, while very important, did not, however, affect anything on this earth. They do not personally concern ordinary human beings; only astronomers are affected. It has hitherto been understood that light traveled in a straight line. Now we find it travels in a curve. It therefore follows that any object, such as a star, is not necessarily in the direction in which it appears to be astronomically.

"This is very important, of course. For one thing, a star may be a considerable distance further away than we have hitherto counted it. This will not affect navigation, but it means corrections will have to be made."

One of the speakers at the Royal Society's meeting suggested that Euclid was knocked out. Schoolboys should not rejoice prematurely, for it is pointed out that Euclid laid down the axiom that parallel straight lines, if produced ever so far, would not meet. He said nothing about light lines.

Some cynics suggest that the Einstein theory is only a scientific version of the well-known phenomenon that a coin in a basin of water is not on the spot where it seems to be and ask what is new in the refraction of light.

Albert Einstein is a Swiss citizen, about 50 years of age. After occupying a position as Professor of Mathematical Physics at the Zurich Polytechnic School and afterward at Prague University, he was elected a member of Emperor William's Scientific Academy in Berlin at the outbreak of the war. Dr. Einstein protested against the German professors' manifesto approving of Germany's participation in the war, and at its conclusion he welcomed the revolution. He has been living in Berlin for about six years.

When he offered his last important work to the publishers he warned them there were not more than twelve persons in the whole world who would understand it, but the publishers took the risk.

POPE RECEIVES AGENT OF CENTRAL POWERS

Grants First Audience Since the War to Representative from Bavaria.

ROME, Nov. 8.—For the first time since the declaration of the world war Pope Benedict today officially received in private audience a representative of the Central Powers, Baron Johann von Gebsattel, Secretary of the Bavarian Legation, who has arrived in Rome to prepare for the return of the Bavarian Minister.

Diplomatic relations were not interrupted between the Holy See and Bavaria during the war. The Nuncio remained in Munich, while the Bavarian Minister accredited to the Holy See resided in Switzerland. The indirect relations with Bavaria, which the Vatican maintained through the use of the diplomatic mail pouch, always were respected by the Italian Government.

The Pope and Cardinal Gasparri, the Papal Secretary of State, during the day received Monsignor Aloisi Masella, who has just returned from Lisbon, where he was stationed during the revolution, remaining there until the resumption of diplomatic relations between Portugal and the Holy See.

Both the Pope and Cardinal Gasparri conversed at length with Monsignor Masella about the important questions he will have to solve in his new post as Nuncio to Chile, to which country he will proceed after a rest here.

French Government to Open Cheap National Restaurants

PARIS, Nov. 9.—"National restaurants," it is officially announced, will be opened within a month, where meals without wine will be served, at 2 francs, in wooden barracks, which it is purposed to heat. The barracks will be built and operated by the authorities.

A protest has been issued by the head of the restaurant proprietors' organization on the ground of unfair competition, as the State has access to army stocks and is relieved of many taxes.

HOLLAND UNLIKELY TO GIVE UP KAISER

Dutch Reiterate on Anniversary of His Flight Their Views on Right of Asylum.

NO DEMAND FOR HIM YET

Negotiations with Belgium Over Territorial Adjustments Are Said to be Going Well.

THE HAGUE, Nov. 8, (Associated Press.)—Former Emperor William came to Holland a year ago next Monday. During this time there has been no demand, officially or unofficially, for his extradition or delivery up to the Allies, nor has Holland at all changed its viewpoint toward him.

The Associated Press learned this today from sources that are unquestionable. Holland's viewpoint as regards William Hohenzollern may be stated frankly as follows:

The Netherlands, which for centuries has accorded political refuge to all, considers the former Emperor and Crown Prince as refugees—not as royalty, but as persons entitled to the same rights as any plain Johann Schmidt who fled to Holland during the war. This principle is so strongly held by the Government, and also by the press of Holland, that nothing is likely to change it, it is asserted.

The Dutch Government has made up its mind as to its conduct in the event the surrender of William Hohenzollern is asked for. No official statement has been made in this connection, but The Associated Press learns that Holland considers the former Emperor beyond extradition, as there is no possible way legally to hold him as a criminal. If they desired to insist on the privilege, both the Hohenzollerns would be free to go where they liked, as they are in no sense prisoners. However, because they feel that they would embarrass Holland even further, they apparently have agreed to remain where they now are—the father at Amerongen and the son at Wieringen.

If the onetime Emperor and Crown Prince desired to return to Germany they would be permitted to go. While it is possible that Frederick William some day may return to Germany, official circles in The Hague are inclined to the belief that William Hohenzollern is content to settle down to the life of a country gentleman at Doorn, where he has been permitted to buy a small estate because his long stay at Amerongen seemed unfair to Count von Bentinck, whose castle he occupies.

Although a number of purported interviews with the former Emperor have been published, the fact is that he never has spoken for publication since his arrival in Amerongen, and to the request of the Associated Press correspondent for a statement on the occasion of the anniversary of his taking refuge here he sent a reply saying that he had not changed his determination not to speak.

"Holland realizes the unpleasantness of the situation created by the fact that the former German ruler sought refuge here a year ago," a Dutch official said to the Associated Press today. "But for us it is only a question of sticking to the principles which have guided us for centuries.

"Also there is the question of principles in our negotiations of Belgium's demands with regard to territorial adjustments. These negotiations are proceeding satisfactorily in Paris. At no time were diplomatic relations between Belgium and Holland broken off.

"As far as Limburg is concerned, were it not for the fact that it would be beneath the dignity of Holland to consider such procedure, we would welcome a plebiscite there, for we know that only about one-half of 1 per cent. of the population of Limburg, and these for self-interested reasons, would favor annexation to Belgium. Regarding the River Scheldt, Holland's control of the waterway has been unquestioned since the fourteenth century, and there is now no reason to surrender it.

"One must put one's self in our place to understand. It is the same as if, for instance, Switzerland should ask for the right to build and control a canal to Genoa, or Canada should desire to do the same thing from Canada to Tampa, Fla."

The correspondent of The Associated Press has learned that, while Holland has not yet made a State loan to Germany, such a loan is quite probable, as from the standpoint of a neutral, which Holland considers gives her a fair perspective, the financial and commercial building up of Germany is absolutely essential to the tranquillity of the world.

Although some of the Dutch newspaper comments reprinted in the United States might give a contrary opinion, it is known that Holland will be glad to enter the League of Nations.

LONDON, Nov. 9.—Arthur Balfour has been a regular visitor to the House of Commons recently, though he has taken no part in the debates. The former Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs finds relaxation after his labors in Paris in the change of work. Day after day he has spent several hours in the library of the House, in the seclusion of one of the costly upholstered arm chairs in a remote corner of the room, absorbed in the task of writing copious notes on a small pad which rested on his knee.

He has been the synosure of all members who passed to and fro, for it is an open secret he is now addressing himself to the task of preparing materials for the volume of reminiscences he has in contemplation.

ORLANDO POINTS TO ITALY'S GAINS

CITES WILSON'S OPPOSITION

Sees It as "Insurmountable Obstacle" to the Occeptance of Italy's Concessions.

PALERMO, Nov. 9, (Associated Press.)—Ex-Premier Orlando, in a speech to the electors last night, reiterated the defense which he made in the Chamber in September of his actions, and declared that the situation on the Adriatic question today was the same as he left it in the beginning of June.

It was impossible to reach a solution, said Signor Orlando, because Italy could not increase her concessions, the acceptance of which found "an insurmountable obstacle in the opposition of President Wilson."

The former Premier pointed out that Italy had attained the chief objects of her entry into the war by reaching the Brenner frontier, which in the past was the historical road of German invasions of Italy.

"That frontier," he continued, "can be defended now by a handful of men, while heretofore the defense of the Trentino salient required half the Italian forces, the other half being constantly threatened with envelopment."

He explained that the eastern frontier was also safe now, as the boundary, instead of being along the Friuli plains, which offered the enemy an opportunity to invade the Venetian provinces, had been brought to the top of the Julian Alps.

MILAN, Nov. 9.—Leonida Bissolati, leader of the Reform Socialists and former Minister without portfolio, speaking before the electors of Cremona, declared that the rights of sovereignty attained by all peoples through the war must be respected, even in the c[illegible]ia.

The Entente's policy toward Lenin's Russia, he said, had been a bad one. Italy must not adhere to it. Any pressure against "Leninism" must be abandoned for the sake of higher interests. Leninism must be left alone to fall under the weight of its own errors and horrors.

Alluding to Fiume, Signor Bissolati said the Allies should render Italy justice, especially since Italy offered to the Jugoslavs the application to all of Dalmatia, except Zara, of that principle of nationality which she claimed for Fiume.
